WOMAN AND MAN KILLED AS AUTO, PASSING STREET CAR, HITS A POLE

Mrs. Augusta Nopper, Fatally Injured in Crash at Broadway and Harris Avenue — Conrad Buchart Found Dead in Street Beside Wreck.

MACHINE GRAZED MAN AWAITING CAR

Brushed Against Clothing Hard Enough to Turn Him Partly Around—Woman Apparently Was Driving.

An automobile, containing a man and a woman, darted past a street car on North Broadway, near Harris avenue, about 6 o'clock last evening, and grazed a man who had stepped into the street to board the car. An instant later the automobile crashed into a telephone pole on the north side of Harris avenue, and the man and woman were thrown out and killed, he dying instantly, she after a short time.

The man was Conrad Buchart, 54 years old, a North St. Louis bachelor landlord, who lived with a brother, also unmarried, at 2815 North Thirteenth street. The woman was Mrs. Augusta Nopper, 23, of 4102 Washington place.

It is uncertain which of the two was driving the car. The woman's body was found on the left side of the car, indicating that she may have been the driver.

C. E. Gardner of 5612 Prescott avenue, who narrowly escaped being injured by the automobile, said it was running 30 to 35 miles an hour.

Three Wheels of Auto Smashed.

He said he was standing as near the tracks as was possible without placing himself in danger from the trolley car. There was room for the automobile to pass him on the right, but it ran so close to him that it grazed his clothing, turning him partly about. The driver seems to have swerved toward the curb, for as the street car stopped, Gardner and the conductor heard the crash of the automobile against the pole.

Gardner and the conductor picked up the body of Buchart and the unconscious woman. Three wheels of the machine, an Auburn, had been smashed.

Buchart's body was identified at the morgue by his brother, Joseph Buchart. He said he would not view the woman's body, which was at city hospital, and at that time had not been identified, and he would not talk about his brother's affairs.

Identified by Former Husband.

Mrs. Nopper's body was identified by her former husband, August Wahlbrink, a police chauffeur. He said that after the divorce from him, she married again, but had separated from her second husband, James Nopper and had returned to live at her mother's home on Washington place, which is near Kossuth avenue, in the Fairground neighborhood. Wahlbrink lives at the same place, as he continued to board at the home of his former mother-in-law after the divorce. The Wahlorinks had one child, who lives at the same place.

Wahlbrink said he would claim the body.

"I knew him," he said, adding an expression of bitterness, when he was asked as to Buchart. "He was a peddler, and had all kinds of junk." Buchart's brother said he formerly was in the vegetable business. Acquaintances said the Buchart brothers owned several pieces of residence property.

Auto Speeds On After Striking 72-Year-Old Man.

William Lippman, 72 years old, 4803 Easton avenue, suffered a probable skull fracture when he was struck, as he was crossing Easton at Walton avenue at 10 o'clock last night, by a speeding automobile, the driver of which fled from the scene. Lippman's condition is serious.

Miss Beulah Stanley, 19, of 4039 Olive street, suffered a wrenched back at 10:25 o'clock last night when a Ford touring car in which she was riding with Sheddie Mueller, 27, of 2539 Morganford road, and another couple overturned in front of 3185 South King's highway. None of the others were injured. Mueller said he attempted to turn to avoid another automobile.

NECKTIE FAILS TO GET RAILWAY OUT OF DAMAGE SUIT

Buying of It Did Not Make Woman, Whose Husband's Car Was Struck, His Agent.

A decision by the St. Louis Court of Appeals yesterday holds that Mrs. Carl E. Stoeckle did not come from her home at Fort Madison, Ia., to St. Louis to buy a necktie for her husband. Hence she was not serving as his agent when she got his new automobile smashed up in a railroad crossing accident at Silex, Mo., and the railroad company, the St. Louis & Hannibal, must pay a $1300 judgment in favor of Stoeckle for the loss of the car.

The company contended that Mrs. Stoeckle, who was accompanied by her aunt, was guilty of contributory negligence in trying to beat a freight train over the crossing. The Appellate Court ruled that her negligence, if any, could not be imputed to her husband, unless it was proved she was on a mission for him.

Stoeckle contended that his wife and her aunt were on pleasure bent and he denied she was about his business, although he had lent her the use of his car. It was conceded she had bought a tie for him in this city. However, that was not the primary purpose of her coming here, Stoeckle said.

The defense seized upon the necktie incident as proof that Mrs. Stoeckle was her husband's agent, but the Appellate Court was not impressed with the plea.

"We take it," the Court says, "that the plaintiff would not have sent his wife a distance of 300 miles to buy a tie." Anyhow, according to the decision the primary cause of the accident was negligence of the defendant.

Mrs. Stoeckle was returning home, when the automobile was wrecked Aug. 6, 1918. The Appellate Court's finding affirms a decision by the Court of Common Pleas at Hannibal.

E. ST. LOUIS SALOONMAN SLAIN BY MAN WITHOUT WARNING

Widow of Stanislaus Wierciuski Says She Thinks Slayer Was Hired by Enemy of Husband.

Stanislaus Wierciuski, 48 years old, proprietor of a saloon at 1433 Nectar avenue, East St. Louis, was shot twice and fatally wounded in the saloon at 11 o'clock last night by a man who had engaged him in friendly conversation for about 20 minutes before the shooting. The man fired without warning, and then ran from the place as Wierciuski shot once from the floor, the latter's 14-year-old son told police. Wierciuski was dead when the police arrived.

Mrs. Wierciucki declared she thought the slayer had been sent to the saloon to kill her husband by a man with whom Wierciuski had a quarrel of long standing.

MURDER CHARGE AGAINST DR. SPIES AFTER LONG DELAY

Indictment, Returned Almost 3 Years After Girl's Death, Traced to Activity of Women.

PERJURY ALLEGATION HAD BEEN DROPPED

Dentist Said Miss Vera Burkhardt Had Jumped From Back of His Machine and Taken Poison.

Nearly three years from the day in May, 1921, when the body of Miss Vera Burkhardt, 21 years old, East Carondelet school teacher, was found alongside a St. Louis County road, the County grand jury yesterday afternoon returned an indictment charging Dr. Charles W. A. Spies, dentist, of 616 Bates street, with first degree murder, in connection with her death.

The girl's body was discovered early the morning of May 7, 1921, lying near the Weber road, in the outskirts of Luxemberg. Carbolic acid burns were on her face and lips, and a bottle which had contained the acid was found near the body.

She had visited the office of Dr. Spies, 7527 Michigan avenue, the previous evening, and it subsequently developed that Dr. Spies had driven her in his automobile to the point where her body was found.

An attempted illegal operation was revealed by an autopsy, the Coroner stated, but an open verdict of death by carbolic acid poisoning was returned and additional investigation recommended. The Coroner stated the girl's stomach contained nearly two ounces of carbolic acid, but said this was considered a large quantity to be swallowed voluntarily.

Dr. Spies was questioned by police and conflicting stories he told at the inquest and later to police resulted in his arrest on a charge of perjury. This was dismissed a couple of weeks later, on May 31, 1921, in Justice Stecker's court at Clayton.

Activity Due to Women.

Dismissal of the perjury charge by the St. Louis County Prosecuting Attorney apparently ended the investigation at that time. Revival of the case, resulting in the return of the indictment, is said to have been due to the activity of certain women's organizations in St. Louis County.

The inquest conducted by Coroner Bracy in Kirkwood on May 8, 1921, developed that Miss Burkhardt had called at Dr. Spies' office the evening of May 6. Dr. Spies testified that he had done dental work for her for nearly a year and that she came there that evening to have some work done. He asserted he did not see her again.

Several days later, after questioning, Dr. Spies stated to St. Louis detectives that he did see the girl again that evening after she left his office, and that he drove her in his automobile to the point where her body was found.

Dr. Spies stated, police said, that Miss Burkhardt got out of the machine at that point, placed a bottle to her lips and screamed. He explained that he feared a scene and left, throwing out a small grip the girl had left in the machine, as he drove away. This variance from his testimony at the inquest re-

PRESSURE FROM COOLIDGE ON TAX A BLOW AT BONUS

Some Advocates of Gratuity Admit Defeat, While Others Are Trying to Get Modified Bill.

LONGWORTH SEES TAX COMPROMISE

Says Congress Would Not Accept Without Change Rates Suggested by Secretary.

Post-Dispatch Bureau.
20-23 Wyatt Building.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—Faced with the certainty of feeling the presidential patronage lash unless the Mellon tax reduction program is kept substantially intact and the bonus defeated, Congress began some new squirmings today. Republican and Democratic supporters of the Treasury program, however, are tremendously encouraged at the prospect of thwarting obstructions and obsfructionists.

Senator Smoot's mission to the White House yesterday was to discover how far Mr. Coolidge would go to drive the tax bill through, and the bonus bill out. Word went around at the Capitol today that the President would invoke every power at his command—which virtually assured the death of the soldier gratuity even if it does not guarantee the Mellon plan with compromise. Among the Republicans the bonus contingent is already so confused that some admit defeat. Others are seeking compromise and still others are designing new bills.

Senator Curtis (Republican, Kansas), who has already introduced the G. O. P. bonus bill, conceded today that he would offer a compromise measure next week —the nature of which he would not divulge.

Senator Payne (Republican, Maine), busied himself trying to get enough backing to tack the bonus up to the tax bill, but seems doomed to failure, for even Curtis is against this.

Couzens' Tax Experience.

Senator Couzens (Republican, Michigan), in still another letter, challenged Secretary Mellon, who couldn't be dragged to a lecture platform by wild horses, to a public debate over the terms of taxation. The Michigan Senator cited his own experience, in an effort to make tax exempt securities look like an insignificant factor and, therefore, not an effective argument for surtax reductions. Incidentally, Couzens disclosed that he paid an income tax of $7,229,151.75 in 1920, and has contributed all told $8,223,679.21 to the Federal revenues since the income tax was introduced.

Representative Tilson (Republican, Connecticut), journeyed to the White House and came back to notify his colleagues of the Ways and Means Committee that the administration was in no mood for compromises and proposed to fight the issue out, clean and unencumbered.

Real Issues Clouded.

So much time is being given to trying to change the Mellon bill, to suit varying political tastes, or to give the bonus new dresses in the hope of making it attractive, that little real attention is directed to just what the Mellon bill actually means. The letters to the Treasury, statements, political speeches and allegations of unworthy motives, are helping to cloud the real issues.

As an illustration, widespread misconception seems to exist as to the meaning of the Mellon bill. It does not reduce or change the rate of taxes on corporations at all save in so far as it plugs up loopholes whereby income evades the tax-gatherer. This, in other words, means more stringency for "big business," which is being widely accused of selfish support of the Mellon bill.

It prevents rich men from utilizing various methods of ducking taxes—for example, by limiting deductions for losses to 12½ per cent, by "soaking" capitalists who incorporate themselves to come under only the corporation tax rate, or who split their fortunes half a dozen ways in order to get within the lower surtax brackets. It hits at tax-exempt refuges by not letting a man deduct interest charges and losses of a nonbusiness character unless the amount of these two items exceeds his income from tax-exempt sources. Then he can deduct only the overlapping amount.

These are features which former Secretary of the Treasury Carter Glass believes should be emphasized to answer the charges of

TWO MEN EXECUTED IN OKLAHOMA ON SUNDAY

One of Men Electrocuted for Slaying 5 Persons Goes to Death Wearing Red Tie.

By the Associated Press.

McALESTER, Ok., Jan. 13.—Jack Pope and Aaron Harvey confessed murderers of five persons, were electrocuted in the State penitentiary here shortly after midnight this (Sunday) morning.

Just before prison barbers shaved their heads in preparation for the execution, both men posed for photographs and requested newspaper men to publish an illustrated story of their deaths.

Harvey went to the execution room wearing a black shirt, and red necktie in place of the usual white shirt with dark colored tie. The change in apparel was at his own request.

Harvey last night repudiated a previous confession that he had agreed to kill Pope's wife, her father and mother and two children for $500. In a signed statement he declared he had contracted to kill only a watch dog at the farm home of Mrs. Pope's parents where the five victims were shot to death last April as they lay asleep in bed. He declared that, with the dog removed, Pope planned to carry out the slaying himself.

Pope confessed that he sought his wife's death in order to collect $2000 insurance on her life.

This was the first legal execution in the United States on Sunday.

CHOKES TO DEATH ON CRUMBS

James Rhodes, 435 South Buchanan street, Edwardsville, strangled to death yesterday on cake crumbs. Rhodes was eating ice cream and cake with his wife and children at their home, when he suddenly choked. Several years ago a surgical operation was performed on his throat, since which time he had breathed through a silver tube inserted in his chest. A crumb was drawn into this tube and could not be dislodged before he choked to death.

THE 'FOUR NOTORIOUS LAW VIOLATORS' NAMED BY GRAND JURY AND THEIR RECORDS

FOUR "notorious law violators" are mentioned by name in the St. Louis County grand jury's report, which states that Sheriff Willmann has made returns of "no evidence" in cases involving them. The men named and their records are:

Tony Foley—Police character since 1904. Leader of Bottoms gang. Arrested Feb. 10, 1907, by Patrolman Stapleton, and, in resisting, cut Stapleton's hand and fired at him with the policeman's revolver, after disarming him. Charged with assault to kill, and sentenced to five years in penitentiary. While trial and appeal were pending was arrested 15 times in robbery, larceny, disturbance and liquor cases. Sent to workhouse, but paroled to begin his penitentiary sentence. Served at Jefferson City from January, 1909, to October, 1912, and gained release by working on roads, four days in advance of time when he would have been released under three-fourths rule. Fell heir to gambling business of "Kid" Becker after Becker was assassinated. Proprietor of Campbell's Forest Home in Richmond Heights. Indicted and arrested for running gambling establishment there, and later in Wellston; prosecutions unsuccessful.

Mark Gumperts—Also known as Gumberts and Gumbert. In days of segregated vice district in St. Louis was proprietor of saloon and wineroom at Jefferson avenue and Chestnut street. Moved to St. Louis County and ran first a racetrack gambling establishment, the Louisiana Club, in University City. Later opened Fauna Flora, on Manchester road, as Sunday lid club and "Gentlemen's Monte Carlo." Charge with gambling and liquor law violations in several cases.

Peter Gounis—Proprietor of Eden Park, at Meramec Highlands. Arrested several times, in pre-prohibition days, on charges of illegal sale of liquor, and convicted in one such case. "We find," the grand jury says, "that Gounis has been indicted, tried and fine, that fines and court costs remain against him wholly unsatisfied and unpaid; that he has been a constant and notorious violator of the law, and yet it is not of record that he has suffered the loss of a single dollar or of an hour's freedom, and his place remains a menace to the community and a blot on the good name of our county."

Joseph Gonnella—"Belvedere Joe," Proprietor of cafe at Delmar boulevard and Euclid avenue, closed after repeated liquor raids, which Gonnella tried to stop by legal proceedings. Moved to county and opened resort on Olive street road. Fined $700 on plea of guilty of violating Volstead act. His place closed and padlocked by order of Judge Faris, last April, and he opened a new establishment in a shed 50 feet away. Cited for contempt. Arrested on new liquor-selling charge; case still pending.

74 PERSONS INDICTED FOR ELECTION FRAUDS IN ST. LOUIS COUNTY

Fred Essen, Republican Boss, and Seven Other Political Leaders Among the Accused.

FEEBLE LAW ENFORCEMENT ASSAILED BY GRAND JURY

Gambling Dives, Blind Tigers and Disorderly Resorts Declared to Be Permitted to Operate on the Main Highways—More Than 150 Farms Said to Be Moonshining Plants.

The St. Louis County grand jury, which devoted its time largely to investigating the corrupt primary election there Aug. 1, 1922, returned into court yesterday its report, indicting 74 person in connection with the primary frauds, including former Congressman Fred Essen, Republican "boss" of the county, and seven other political leaders there, and scathingly denouncing the feebleness of Sheriff Willmann's enforcement of law in the county.

The others indicted are "smaller fry" in the alleged conspiracy to throw the primary in favor of the machine.

"We find," the grand jury's severely censorious report says, "that roadhouses, gambling dives, blind tigers and disorderly resorts and hangouts for gangs, thugs and criminals are permitted to operate on the main highways of the county, with no interference from the law-enforcing authorities except an occasional raid, always preceded by underground notice."

The report continues with a declaration that more than 150 farms in the county have moonshining plants, adding that the "so-called St. Louis territory within a radius of 20 miles of the city courthouse furnishes two-thirds of the unlawful liquor manufactured in the entire State," which may be purchased almost anywhere in the county. It goes on:

"So far as our State prohibition statutes are concerned, we find that official laxity has made a scarecrow of the law; that the executive arm of the Government, raised to fright the birds of prey, has become their perch and not their terror; that a Sheriff, endowed with a will to enforce the act against all malefactors alike, would be able to, and would break up commercialized vice within 30 days and expel the lawless elements."

For a remedy, the grand jury recommends abolishing the time-honored system of county Sheriff and Constables, who have dual functions—theoretically—law enforcement and service as officers of certain courts. It has been found that in practice these officials pay more attention to their duties as court officers. In their place the grand jury would have a State constabulary system created, with regulations barring political influence.

Table on Liquor Raids.

The report gives an interesting table of figures to show the efficiency of various agencies making county liquor raids, based on the period from Jan. 1 to Dec. 18, 1923. These agencies are given as: Gus O. Nations, Federal prohibition director for Missouri; George Bausewein, Federal prohibition enforcement agent here, "on motion of Fred M. Tate of Attorney-General Barrett's staff;" Sheriff Willmann, on his own motion; Sheriff Willmann, as set in motion by search warrants, and the five township Constables.

Successful raids are recorded as those in which evidence was obtained and unsuccessful ones as "cases where the evidence disappeared in advance of the raid or has not been found." The table:

Agency.	Success.	Failure.	Total.	Pct. of Efficiency.
Nations	61	0	61	100
Bausewein	49	0	49	100
Willmann (own motion)	24	0	24	100
Willmann (search wrts.)	50	81	131	38
Constables	0	0	0	0

The report does not attempt an explanation of why raids on which the Sheriff set about on his own volition were uniformly successful, while those made under the mandate of search warrants developed a low record of efficiency, but it did say that notorious law-breakers—and it named four whose names are commonly known—have been among the successes of the Federal officers, even if Willmann's reports of raids on their places always said "no evidence."

The inquisitorial body suggests that the proposed State constabu-

POLITICAL LEADERS IN ST. LOUIS COUNTY UNDER INDICTMENT

POLITICAL leaders in St. Louis County, indicted by the grand jury yesterday in the investigation into alleged frauds in the primary election there in August, 1922, were:

Fred Essen, long known as "boss" of the county and head of the Republican machine there; member of the Republican State Committee, former Congressman and recipient in 1920 of $1000 from the Lowden campaign fund, which, he said, was used mostly to organize the Women's Lowden Clubs in the county.

William Seibel, who was County Clerk for three terms, or 12 years, until a year ago, and was elected to the Republican County Committee in the 1912 primary, and who has been regarded as one of Essen's chief henchmen; he was made chairman of the County Committee but resigned membership last August.

J. William Shields, former member of the County Court, or administrative body, which had charge of elections up to last year, who refused to hear complaints of citizens against some precinct officials appointed for the 1922 primary, and who was defeated for Collector subsequently.

Albert Wehmeyer, who succeeded Seibel as chairman of the Republican County Committee, a position he held also prior to the 1922 primary.

Harry Kasschaum, who was a member and secretary of the Republican County Committee prior to the 1923 primary, and is an employe of the State Treasurer's office.

Julius Schoenbein, former Constable of Central Township, who was acquitted when a former indictment charging him with interfering in the 1922 primary was held to be defective.

J. C. Kiskaddon, who for a time in 1922 was an assistant to former Prosecuting Attorney Mueller and as such acted as legal adviser to the County Court.

Al G. Bruce, member of the Democratic County Committee, known as a machine politician, and manager of a downtown clothing store.

GRAND JURY REPORTS LAWLESSNESS IN COUNTY AND SUGGESTS REMEDIES

2 FORMER COUNTY OFFICERS INDICTED FOR SHORTAGES

Discrepancy of $3800 in William Seibel's Accounts Alleged—A. D. Willecken Charged With $10,000 Embezzlement.

ACTIONS IN ADDITION TO ELECTION CHARGES

Grand Jury Recalls "Indelible Record of Effrontery" Left by Former in Suits Against St. Louis Papers.

William Seibel of Clayton, former St. Louis County Clerk, who was indicted yesterday for alleged conspiracy in the corruption of the 1922 primary election, also was indicted for an alleged shortage of $3800 in his official accounts, the Post-Dispatch learned from an authoritative source last night.

Arthur D. Willecken of Maplewood, former Circuit Clerk of the county, was indicted for an alleged embezzlement of "about $10,000" from his official accounts, it was learned from the same source.

Facts concerning Seibel's and Willecken's accounts have been published heretofore.

In its report, under the heading, "Liberty of the Press," the grand jury made an obvious reference to Seibel, along with a tribute to the St. Louis press for its stand in exposing county conditions, as follows:

"One of the men whom we have indicted for embezzlement and election crimes has perpetuated in the Circuit Court, by libel suits against two St. Louis newspapers, the indelible record of his effrontery. During the welter of misrepresentation following the election outrages of Aug. 1, 1922, these papers stood shoulder to shoulder in a fair and fearless presentation of the facts. We believe that liberty of the press is the surest guardian of freedom. Every consideration demands that it continue to wing an eagle flight against Zeppelins of every evil, with an eye that never falters and a wing that never fails. To that end we call for legislation making good faith a complete defense to every libel suit brought by a candidate or officer against a newspaper, and punishing bad faith in the bringing of such suits with all the costs of their defense, attorney's fees included, for all of which let bond be given in advance."

Seibel Sued for $200,000.

Seibel sued the publishers of the Post-Dispatch and a reporter for this newspaper, jointly, for $200,000 damages, charging libel in connection with a published account of a resolution adopted by the County League of Women Voters, opposing the idea of appointing him United States Marshal here. He filed a similar suit against the publishers of the Globe-Democrat and a former officer of the League of Women Voters, jointly.

The articles in question were published in November, 1922, following the victory of the Clean Election League over the Republican machine, of which Seibel was a leader.

Demurrers by the defendants to both suits were sustained by the Circuit Court at Clayton. Seibel gave notice that he would appeal the Post-Dispatch case to the Supreme Court of Missouri, but has not as yet perfected an appeal. It is understood that no notice of appeal was given in the other case.

Seibel was not appointed United States Marshal.

The County Court, members of which were elected in the Clean Election League triumph, ordered an audit of Seibel's accounts for a period of several years by a firm of accountants. This company's report showed that the State had made payment last May of $4020.87 for the State's share of the cost of making up 1922 tax books by Seibel's office.

Money Kept to Cancel Loan.

The report declared that County Clerk Tiffin, who had succeeded Seibel five months previously, had not received the money from the State, but that payment had been made to the St. Louis County Bank, Clayton, where it was learned that $3800 of the money had been kept to cancel a loan made to Seibel in October, 1922, the balance being credited to his account as clerk.

It is understood that the embezzlement indictment against Seibel is based on the $3800 sum represented in the bank transaction.

On Aug. 20 last Seibel paid over to Clerk Tiffin $4181.20 in currency, representing principal and interest in this transaction. He acknowledged responsibility for the amount, stating that as it was paid after he left office and while two audits of his accounts were in progress he had decided to hold the money until the exact amount of his indebtedness should be shown.

Seibel could not be reached last night for a statement concerning his indictment.

On Oct. 11, 1922, a demand of the Clean Election League for an audit of Seibel's books and an explanation of his alleged failure to make a certain quarterly report of excess fees was published. Two days later he gave the County Treasurer his personal check for $3010.27 in payment of excess fees for the preceding quarter.

$18,000 Judgment Against Him.

Judgment of $18,085.40 was rendered against Seibel in Circuit Court at Clayton, Jan. 18, 1915, in a suit to recover excess fees retained. Final payment on the judgment was made July 25, 1918, after ouster proceedings had been filed against him, which then were dropped. Seibel was County Clerk for 12 years, until Dec. 31, 1922. He is now in the insurance business.

The second audit of Seibel's accounts, by State Auditor Hackmann, showed the same amount of money to be due as in the private audit, which was made by the National Tax and Audit Co. The County Court later refused to pay for the private audit but the grand jury report recommends that this be paid for.

State Auditor Hackmann also audited the accounts of former Circuit Clerk Willecken and reported an alleged shortage of $11,348 therein. Explanations made at the time this was announced were that there was no shortage, but a discrepancy due to lax bookkeeping methods and the custom of employes of the clerk taking advance salary payments from the cash drawer. The Post-Dispatch was informed last night that the embezzlement indictment against Willecken was in connection with this matter, though for $1000 or more less than the sum mentioned in the State Auditor's report.

Willecken, informed by the Post-Dispatch of his indictment, said it was news to him and expressed belief that it grew out of the Hackmann report. He was not prepared to comment in detail, but intimated his defense would be that there was no shortage, but only bookkeeping errors. "I'll be held morally responsible," he said, "but personally I never scratched a book with a pen."

Creation of Constabulary Urged in Report of Jury

SEVERE criticism of St. Louis County law enforcement conditions and suggested remedies, including establishment of a State constabulary, are contained in the grand jury's report, under the heading, "Sheriff and Constables," as follows:

"We find that roadhouses, gambling dives, 'blind tigers,' disorderly resorts and hangouts for gangs, thugs and criminals are permitted to operate on the main highways of the county with no interference from the law enforcement authorities, except an occasional conventional raid, always preceded by underground notice. More than 150 farms in the county are equipped to, and do, manufacture moonshine whisky by means of portable stills. The so-called 'St. Louis territory' (within a radius of 20 miles of the city courthouse) furnishes two-thirds of the unlawful liquor manufactured in the entire State. This liquor may be purchased in practically every locality in the county. Sales are made through meat markets, grocery stores, garages, soft-drink parlors and by peddlers. In many cases school children of tender age are permitted to buy this poison.

"Notorious law violators like Tony Foley, Mark Gumperts, Peter Gounis, Joe Gonnella, etc., are numbered among the successes of the Federal officers, but in the reports submitted to us by Sheriff Willmann they are invariably marked 'no evidence.' We find that said Gounis has been indicted, tried and fined; that fines and court costs of many years standing remain against him wholly unsatisfied and unpaid; that he has long been a constant and notorious violator of the law, yet it is not of record that he has suffered the loss of a single dollar or an hour's freedom, and his place remains a menace to the community and a blot on the good name of our county.

Official Laxity Alleged.

"So far as our State prohibition statutes are concerned, we find that official laxity has made a scarecrow of the law; that the executive arm of county government, raised to fright the birds of prey, has become their perch and not their terror; that a Sheriff endowed with the will to enforce the act against all malefactors alike would be able to and would break up commercialized vice within 20 days and expel the lawless element.

"We believe that the old-time county Sheriff and Constable system is no longer adequate to meet present-day needs. Some more efficient method of law enforcement is necessary.

"In Pennsylvania, New York, Massachusetts, Connecticut, New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland, West Virginia and Michigan, this problem has been met and solved by a State constabulary. In Colorado, on the other hand, a State police force has been tried and has proved a failure.

"We believe that a State constabulary should be organized on a merit basis, with politics rigorously excluded, and under such civil control as to prevent the possibility of interference with law-abiding citizens in the exercise of their constitutional rights; that its personnel should be limited to men of the highest type; that it should be furnished with modern methods of communication and mobile equipment; that so organized and so equipped it would not only furnish adequate protection to the lives and property of our citizens, and prove the terror and the despair of criminals, but would so entrench itself in the confidence of our community as to embody all those ideals of the justice, equality, beneficence and majesty of the law which the state police mean to Pennsylvania, or the Canadian Mounted exemplify throughout Canada.

Deportation as Deterrent.

"We find that more than 90 per cent of the violators of the liquor laws are men of foreign birth. For these men existing penalties have little or no terror. Forfeiture of citizenship and deportation would be more effective deterrents. We call on Senator Spencer and Representative Newton to formulate, introduce and advocate bills imposing such penalties on old offenders.

"We believe that township constables are of little or no use in the matter of crime suppression. The majority of those now in office appear to be nothing more than licensed parasites engaged in pursuing fees for their own personal aggrandizement. These offices should be abolished. The duties now performed by Constables could be taken over by the Sheriff at no additional expense to the county.

"The present fee system of payment of county officials puts a premium on official dishonesty, extortion and oppression in office. It should be abolished, and every county official should be placed on and confined to a salary basis."

County Surveyor Criticised.

The report refers to neglect of duty by County Surveyer William Elbring, saying:

"We find that it has been the practice in the County Surveyor's office for many years to neglect the performance of the duties of the office to which he has been elected; that it has been and remains his custom to refer applicants for surveys to his brother Richard, who conducts a private surveyor's office across the street from the courthouse; that as a result of this practice a private surveyor has been doing the work that should have been done by the County Surveyor, and has been collecting and retaining the fees therefor which should have gone to the county, and has built up and acquired a record of surveys of immense value; that said record of surveys should belong to the county and would belong to the county if the County Surveyor had performed the duties of his office; that the County Surveyor has not lodged with the Recorder of Deeds for many years any record of surveys as required by law.

"We call upon the County Surveyor to recover from his brother Richard, for the use and benefit of the county, all the records aforesaid. We further call upon him to perform the duties of his office in matter of making surveys, as provided by law. In the event of his failure to recover said records or to perform said duties, we then call upon him to resign his office. If he shall fail to do, so we call upon the County Court to reduce his salary from $5000 to $3000 per annum, in accordance with the discretion vested in that body."

William Elbring, who was elected Surveyor, is also Highway Engineer, by appointment of the County Court.

The grand jury urges that petit jurors to try the indictments it returned be selected from among persons drawn by the clerk of the jury commission, an official apart from the Circuit Clerk's office, or by elisors, and that no one appointed by the Circuit Clerk be permitted to have any part whatever in their selection.

Circuit Clerk Henry Kirchner is regarded as a henchman of the Essen political machine. The report explains the ordinary method of jury drawing thus:

"We find that jury panels for the trial of criminal causes are selected in the following way: Names of veniremen are drawn from a wheel by our two Circuit Judges and a Deputy Circuit Clerk. When 100 names are drawn the slips are turned over to the clerk, and are supposed to constitute the panel. There is no evidence that this deputy ever has put any of these names back in the wheel and selected other names in their stead, but we find that there are not sufficient safeguards to prevent this from being done after the Circuit Judges have withdrawn. The deputy owes his appointment to the influence of a notorious gang of gamblers, many of whom have been indicted by us for election frauds and other crimes. That the State can rely on a square deal under such circumstances ought not to be expected. Moreover, the fact that the Circuit Clerk refuses to permit the legally appointed clerk of the jury commission to perform this duty is, we think, a proper object of distrust. It is not sufficient that the administration of justice shall be pure; it is necessary that it be above suspicion."

Replies to Jury Complaint.

Questioned by a Post-Dispatch reporter about the charge one of his assistants owes his appointment to a gambling ring, Clerk Kirchner pointed out that he himself draws the slips in the presence of the judges, and expressed belief that the grand jury was misinformed about the deputy who later makes out the lists. Deputy Clerk George Engel (who is a member of the Republican County Committee), makes the lists, Kirchner said, but he thought the grand jurors believed Harry Spinsby of Maplewood, an employe of the clerk's office was the man. There had been some groundless question as to Spinsby's integrity, Kirchner said, because he lived near the home of a gambler.

The clerk of the jury commission, whom Kirchner has refused to recognize, is J. H. A. Buermann of Manchester, and the grand jury finds that his appointment by the County Court was legal, adding: "He has prepared a list of eligible jurors to serve in the county, which has never been used. * * * We recommend that the Jury Commission Board turn over to Buermann the jury wheel and other paraphernalia belonging to his office; that he be permitted to perform his duties; and that the County Court refuse to pay those who have heretofore usurped, and those who may hereafter usurp, and exercise his duties."

Would Abolish Justices.

Under the heading of "Abolish Justices of the Peace," the grand jury report says:

"The present Justice of the Peace system in St. Louis County should be abolished. A third division of the Circuit Court should be created and clothed with all the jurisdiction now belonging to Justices and to the Juvenile Court.

"St. Louis County is singularly fortunate in the character and capacity of the men now occupying the Circuit bench. Their distinguished abilities should be relieved of the strain of petty duties and devoted exclusively to more important work."

Against Legal Technicalities.

The report attacks technical bigotry in the State laws which make necessary verbose indictments in "dead language of the dark ages." Legislative representatives of the county are urged to "rescue Justice from this quagmire." "We have found," it is stated, "that there was a conspiracy between faithless officials, conscienceless candidates, dark-lantern politicians and hand-picked criminals to steal the primary election of Aug. 1, 1922. Why not say so in plain and simple language (in indictments)?"

A political reform urged by the jurors is enactment of legislation to provide for election of road overseers in the various school districts. These petty officials, who are supposed to keep the highways in repair, are appointive now and constitute a considerable political machine.

Other Recommendations.

Other recommendations of the report are:

Annual auditing of the accounts of every official handling county funds and submission of the audits to the grand jury.

Deposit with the County Treasurer for safekeeping of all school fund loans and documents evidencing the same.

Provision of adequate quarters for the Recorder of Deeds.

Provision of a waiting room for Circuit Court witnesses.

A law library for the Prosecuting Attorney.

Enlargement and modernization of the county jail.

Clean Bill for Probate Court.

The grand jury finds that records of the Probate Court are well kept, its fees being properly accounted for and based on a recognized standard, and asserts that recent "criticism made of this office in the report of State Auditor Hackmann is wholly unfounded in fact and is without reasonable or probable cause."

The report also declares that offices of the Collector, Treasurer and Recorder are competently administered, and states that the grand jury has had full co-operation of Prosecuting Attorney Jones.

When Judge McElhinney convened the grand jury Oct. 15, last, he instructed it to pay special attention to gambling and prohibition violations, but said nothing about the frauds of the 1922 primary, which had resulted in a number of indictments against lesser lights in the alleged plot by the last grand jury. The grand jury which just adjourned went into the matter largely of its own initiative. Prosecuting Attorney Jones, who inherited prosecution of the old indictments, had complained that many of them had technical defects and was prepared to ask renewed consideration of the matter.

Summary of Jury's Work.

The grand jury held 22 sessions, examined 403 witnesses and returned 128 indictments, some of which contained charges against more than one person, notably the one charging 74 persons with election frauds, since this matter occupied most of its time.

The grand jury called on Randolph Laughlin, attorney, who was a special Assistant Attorney-General before the last grand jury, to advise it outside the grand jury room and to appear before it as a witness, besides obtaining the assistance of Assistant Attorney-General Allan May. It is generally believed that the major portion, if not all, of the report was written by Laughlin, but he declined to comment when questioned about this. Persons familiar with his legal style believe they recognize his pen in the document.

The grand jurors filed into court with their report at 12:40 p. m. yesterday and were sent back to their room for the formality of unanimous agreement on certain erasures which the Judge observed on some indictments. They returned, were thanked for their diligence by the Judge, and were finally excused at 1:15 p. m.

Indictments Known in Advance.

The names of the principals indicted in the election fraud conspiracy had been on almost every tongue around the courthouse at Clayton last week, and were known to newspaper offices in both the city and county.

Judge McElhinney, as soon as the grand jury had reported, was asked if he would make public the names of the principals indicted. Despite the fact that the names had been on many tongues, the Judge stated that it was against his principles always, and in this case against his duty, to make public the names of persons indicted until after capiases for their arrest had been served.

But before a capias could be drawn, let alone served, former Congressman Essen was out with a statement admitting his indictment and demanding a speedy trial "in order that the whole malicious plot hatched against me by political enemies may be speedily exposed in all its hideousness."

Identity of Principals Admitted.

Following this the identity of the well-known persons indicted, in whose cases there was no fear of flight, was admitted in authoritative quarters. These names included Essen, William Seibel, J. William Shields, Albert Wehmeyer, Harry Kassebaum, Julius Schoenbein, J. C. Kiskadden, and Al G. Bruce.

It also was made known that Tony Foley, former convict, and notorious gambling house operator, who conducted an establishment at 6128A Easton avenue, had been indicted in the election fraud cases, as had his brother-in-law, Joseph F. Judge. The latter was the only person convicted of fraud as the result of investigation by the previous grand jury, having been fined $1000 and sentenced to a year in jail, from which he has appealed.

Request as to "Smaller Fry."

In the authoritative quarters it was requested that names of the others indicted in the election fraud cases, constituting what was termed "the smaller fry," be not published until the capiases were served, as it was feared such publication might interfere with the processes of justice. These ranged down to criminals and police characters, who, it is charged, did the actual work of abstracting ballots and casting fraudulent votes.

Sheriff Willmann and the Circuit Clerk took an afternoon holiday, the Sheriff announcing he would not receive the capiases for service before Monday or Tuesday, and then, in many cases, will have to search for the defendants, many of whom he fears probably will not be apprehended.

On the other hand, it is believed that some of the more prominent men indicted will appear at the courthouse voluntarily and give bond.

Basis of Indictments.

Circumstances of the [illegible] in the 1922 primary have been related often. Voters' ballots were thrown into cesspools at some precincts; automobile loads of "repeaters" cruised from precinct to polling place, casting fraudulent votes; voters were intimidated, and there were other irregularities.

Some of the small fry indicted are men who served as primary election officials, but the majority of the 74 defendants, including the most prominent ones involved, on the allegation that they conspired to throw the election to the machine.

The blanket indictment contains 42 counts, based on charges that 21 specific ballots of voters were abstracted and that 21 fraudulent ballots were substituted therefor. These are based on sections 3225 and 3226 of the Revised Statutes. Punishment, upon conviction, may range from a minimum [illegible] of three months in jail, or a minimum fine of $100, for abstracting a ballot, up to five years in the penitentiary for this offense or fraudulent voting or conspiring to change the result of an election.

Result of the Corruption.

The 1922 primary corruption resulted in the victory of the Clean Election League in the following general election, which was a stinging blow to the machine, temporarily at least, unseating Joe Essen as county "boss." For the first time in years Democrats were elected to county offices, Prosecuting Attorney Jones being one of them.

At least three members of the grand jury were active in the Clean Election League. This fact, and that of the political [illegible] may help explain charges of a political plot in the indictment, made by "Boss" Essen in a statement printed elsewhere.

Members of Grand Jury.

The personnel of the grand jury follows:

C. C. Crossman of Clayton, [illegible] tioner, who was foreman; [illegible] Cook of Webster Groves, [illegible] manager; Samuel Williams of Maplewood, clerk; Richard C. Wagley of Wellston, contractor; August Reising of Lake, retired farmer; William Pfeiffer of Ferguson, farmer; J. D. Niemeier of Hazelwood, hardware merchant; [illegible] Rott of Affton, farmer; Fred Shotwell of Ellisville, farmer; Henry Heitmann of Eureka, farmer; Howard Carrico of Association road, farmer; Patton Hume of Shackelford road, farmer.

Grand Jury Sets Precedent in Having Report Printed.

The grand jury had its report printed, an unusual departure. It is expected that copies will receive considerable circulation. A complimentary copy, signed by all the grand jurors, and having a written tribute to his efforts to bring about reform in the county, was sent to Frank Schwenk, an egg grower of Allenton, who was a member of the 1922 grand jury and leader of an effort to make a sweeping "clean up" then.

74 Indicted for Election Frauds in the County

lary would be the "terror and despair of criminals" through selection of the highest type men for its membership and provision of modern methods of equipment and transportation. Since virtually all prohibition violators are of foreign nativity, the jurors find, deportation seems the best penalty for them, and county representatives in Congress are asked to institute appropriate legislation.

It is recommended that, pending other solution, the Sheriff take over the constables' duties, since most of the constables "appear to be nothing more than licensed parasites engaged in pursuing fees." As to fees, the grand jury urges the fee system should be abolished and every county official put on a salary.

Professional bondsmen of "little or no financial worth" are accepted as sureties on large bonds in the Circuit Court, County Court and Sheriff's office, the report asserts, adding that some of these bondsmen are now dead, many are "execution-proof," one is in jail, another under indictment and nearly all are financially unable to raise anything like the amounts named in their sworn statements."

"Of a total of 92 accepted bondsmen whose qualifications we have examined," it is stated, "we find that more than 90 per cent fail to measure up to the value at which they have been accepted. We recommend that every person hereafter offering himself as surety be required to tender, and to file with his qualification record, a sworn copy of his tax return, and a certified copy of his assessment record for the current year; that he be examined on oath in open court, and that no bondsman be accepted where the obligation on which he offers to become surety, when added to all of his other obligations, on existing bonds and otherwise, exceeds in value his non-exempt real estate assessments."

Another angle for making bondsmen conform to the laws is contained in the section of the report dealing with the Assessor's office, which recommends that that official obtain from the Circuit Clerk, Sheriff and County Court copies of bondsmen's sworn statements filed with them, and then fix their assessments for taxation purposes in accordance with what they have sworn they are worth.

Referring to present general practice of the Assessor's office, it is declared that a fair and uniform assessment is not obtained, in that the system does not enable keeping in touch with rapidly increasing property improvement. It is recommended that the County Court permit the Assessor to appoint additional deputies so as to make a better assessment, and that special deputies be appointed for the larger towns in the county. The practice of measuring value of improvements by building permits is criticised as discriminating against rural residents.

GAMBLER INDICTED IN ELECTION FRAUD INQUIRY

TONY FOLEY

INDICTMENT MEANS NOTHING, ESSEN SAYS, CHARGING 'PLOT'

County "Boss" Eager for Trial and Would Have Special Jury Investigate Body That Voted True Bills.

Former Congressman Essen of Clayton, long known as "Boss" of St. Louis county, and head of the Republican machine there, yesterday afternoon dictated the following statement:

"The indictment of any man active in county politics by the grand jury, just adjourned, means nothing. The members were carefully selected at the behest of political adventurers and have done their bidding. Men were indicted upon their names and not upon evidence.

"I have spent a lifetime in honest service for the preservation and upbuilding of St. Louis County and the Republican party. This is the Alpha and Omega of my offenses. There will be no technical defenses interposed in my defense, but, on the contrary, I shall hurry the trial forward without delay in order that the whole malicious plot hatched against me by political enemies may be speedily exposed in all its hideousness, and also that an opportunity may be given to at once establish by court records the criminal record of at least one member of the grand jury.

Would Investigate Grand Jury.

"A special grand jury should at once be called of men selected by the court for the purpose of investigating the grand jury just adjourned, so that in justice to the good citizens of St. Louis County the whole miserable outrage may be exposed and a repetition avoided in the future."

Essen, in common with everyone else around the Courthouse at Clayton, has known for the last week that he was the "prominent politician" who was indicted in the alleged primary election frauds of 1922.

Essen is 60 years old, was born in St. Louis County, and has been in politics ever since he came of voting age. Most of the time he has been the recognized Republican boss of the county, where the Republican party normally has a large majority.

He is head of the St. Louis County Printing and Publishing Co., which issues the Watchman-Advocate, until lately a weekly paper, now a semi-weekly.

Essen was county recorder of deeds from 1892 to 1900. He has been a member of party committees since, and in the 1918 primary he ran for the nomination for Congress, but was defeated by Congressman Meeker. Before the election, Meeker died, and the Republican party managers of the Tenth District selected C. A. Newton to succeed him. As a special concession they placed Essen on the ticket for the remainder of the term which Meeker was serving. Such manipulation would have been dangerous in a close district, but in the Tenth there was no difficulty in electing Essen for the short term and Newton for the long term. He is now a member of the Republican State Committee.

Broke With Gardner.

In 1920 Essen broke with his former friend, State Senator Gardner, but succeeded in defeating Gardner for renomination. In the 1922 election, Essen suffered a severe reverse, in the defeat of candidates favored by him, the winning candidates being those of the Clean Election League.

"I'm glad to let them take hold," he said in speaking of his victorious opponents after this election. "I'm out every year or so," he added, "but they always get me back. I'm just resting."

In the pre-convention distribution of Lowden campaign money in this State in 1920, Essen got $1000. He said most of it was used to organize women's Lowden clubs in the county.

Essen received $10,000 in 1907, from W. K. Kavanaugh, for getting a franchise for the Central Belt Railway Co., which Kavanaugh and his associates sold to the Terminal Association for $160,000. He was receiver for the E. G. Lewis interests, and had the handling of assets of nearly $2,000,000.

REPORT ON PEKIN EXPLOSION

Overheated Bearing Given as Cause.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

PEORIA, Ill., Jan. 12.—An overheated bearing in a conveyor belt was the cause of the explosion at the Corn Products Company, in Pekin, which resulted in the death of 40 employes, more than a year ago, a report made by John Gaber, Illinois State Fire marshal, and David J. Price, engineer in charge of dust explosion investigations of the United States Bureau of Chemistry, says.

ELEGATION GOES WITH $100,000 TO SEEK CONVENTION

Louisans Confident of Winning if McAdoo Men Consider Only Candidate's Interests.

FEAR ONLY POWER OF CHICAGO'S PURSE

Chairman Smith Declares They Will Not Enter Any Bidding Competition at Washington.

By CURTIS A. BETTS,
Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

TERRE HAUTE, Ind., Jan. 12.—The St. Louis delegation to Washington has a certified check for $100,000 and a lot of reasons to present to the Democratic National Committee on Tuesday, in extending its invitation to the committee to hold the 1924 national convention in St. Louis. The delegation, which departed from St. Louis at noon today, will reach Washington tomorrow afternoon.

James E. Smith, chairman of the St. Louis committee, declared today on the train that St. Louis had no intention of entering into any bidding competition for the convention.

"St. Louis is not seeking to buy the convention," he said. "It has many excellent reasons to present to the National Committee. It believes it is no more than right that the convention city should defray the convention expense, and for that purpose it has raised the fund of $100,000 and will be ready to meet any actual convention expense in addition to that amount. But it is not bidding for the convention."

There appears little doubt that St. Louis will be victorious if the committee decides the matter on the basis of getting a convenient place for the convention, where the delegates will not be harassed by newspaper dictation and by local political boss influences during their deliberations.

McAdoo Men Not for Chicago.

Members of the delegation look upon the latter as one of the strongest points in favor of St. Louis in its competition with Chicago for the convention, as Chicago has newspapers which, when previous conventions were held there, attempted to dictate to the delegates the action they should take. In addition, there is in Chicago a powerful Democratic organization which will have a factional interest in the nomination for the presidency and may be expected to bring to bear on the delegates every possible influence.

There is no doubt that the McAdoo element in the committee does not want to go to Chicago, where it would have to contend with the Hearst and Brennan influence. For political reasons, it would prefer St. Louis. It is believed that a majority of the members of the committee are supporters of McAdoo, which would indicate that St. Louis should have an excellent chance of landing the convention.

The money question appears to be the only thing that may stand between St. Louis and success. Chicago may bid high.

How Chicago Raised Its Fund.

If the McAdoo committee men and committee women think more of a few thousand dollars for the presidential campaign fund than they do of the political advantage they would derive from having the nomination in St. Louis, St. Louis may lose. Otherwise, it seems almost certain to win.

The National Committee will learn from the St. Louis delegation that there is not one string tied to its $100,000 check, which will be in contrast to the Chicago offer, whatever it may prove to be. In Chicago, the fund has been raised by selling national convention tickets, one ticket for every $100 contributed to the fund, and the committee will be called upon to furnish the local committee in Chicago with enough tickets to make good its pledges to its contributors. In St. Louis, the National Committee will have all its tickets for its own use.

Chicago's system of raising money, as disclosed by a letter in the possession of a member of the St. Louis delegation, is to send tickets to corporations, and call upon them for contributions. The letter is signed by Edward N. Hurley, former chairman of the Shipping Board; Fred W. Upham, treasurer of the Republican National Committee, and George Brennan, Democratic boss in Illinois.

"Tickets to the convention," it says, "will be distributed to contributors only on the basis of one ticket (good for all sessions on all days) for each $100," the letter reads. "One ticket has been assigned to you for $100."

Newspapers to Be Neutral.

As an assurance that St. Louis would be neutral ground, Chairman Smith of the St. Louis committee sent to the National Committee a letter signed by all the St. Louis newspapers, setting forth that while they will take toward the nomination

"We wish to join in the cordial invitation to you to hold the Democratic

DELEGATION GOES WITH $100,000 TO SEEK CONVENTION

St. Louisans Confident of Winning if McAdoo Men Consider Only Candidate's Interests.

FEAR ONLY POWER OF CHICAGO'S PURSE

Chairman Smith Declares They Will Not Enter Any Bidding Competition at Washington.

By CURTIS A. BETTS,
Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

TERRE HAUTE, Ind., Jan. 12.—The St. Louis delegation to Washington has a certified check for $100,000 and a lot of reasons to present to the Democratic National Committee on Tuesday, in extending its invitation to the committee to hold the 1924 national convention in St. Louis. The delegation, which departed from St. Louis at noon today, will reach Washington tomorrow afternoon.

James E. Smith, chairman of the St. Louis committee, declared today on the train that St. Louis had no intention of entering into any bidding competition for the convention.

"St. Louis is not seeking to buy the convention," he said. "It has many excellent reasons to present to the National Committee. It believes it is no more than right that the convention city should defray the convention expense, and for that purpose it has raised the fund of $100,000 and will be ready to meet any actual convention expense in addition to that amount. But it is not bidding for the convention."

There appears little doubt that St. Louis will be victorious if the committee decides the matter on the basis of getting a convenient place for the convention, where the delegates will not be harassed by newspaper dictation and by local political boss influences during their deliberations.

McAdoo Men Not for Chicago.

Members of the delegation look upon the latter as one of the strongest points in favor of St. Louis in its competition with Chicago for the convention, as Chicago has newspapers which, when previous conventions were held there, attempted to dictate to the delegates the action they should take. In addition, there is in Chicago a powerful Democratic organization which will have a factional interest in the nomination for the presidency and may be expected to bring to bear on the delegates every possible influence.

There is no doubt that the McAdoo element in the committee does not want to go to Chicago, where it would have to contend with the Hearst and Brennan influence. For political reasons, it would prefer St. Louis. It is believed that a majority of the members of the committee are supporters of McAdoo, which would indicate that St. Louis should have an excellent chance of landing the convention.

The money question appears to be the only thing that may stand between St. Louis and success. Chicago may bid high.

How Chicago Raised Its Fund.

If the McAdoo committee men and committee women think more of a few thousand dollars for the presidential campaign fund than they do of the political advantage they would derive from having the nomination in St. Louis, St. Louis may lose. Otherwise, it seems almost certain to win.

The National Committee will learn from the St. Louis delegation that there is not one string tied to the $100,000 check, which will be in contrast to the Chicago offer, whatever it may prove to be. In Chicago, the fund has been raised by selling national convention tickets, one ticket for every $100 contributed to the fund, and the committee will be called upon to furnish the local committee in Chicago with enough tickets to make good its pledges to its contributors. In St. Louis, the National Committee will have all its tickets for its own use.

Chicago's system of raising money, as disclosed by a letter in the possession of a member of the St. Louis delegation, is to assign tickets to corporations, and call upon them for contributions. The letter is signed by Edward N. Hurley, former chairman of the Shipping Board; Fred W. Upham, treasurer of the Republican National Committee, and George Brennan, Democratic boss in Illinois.

"Tickets to the convention sessions will be distributed to contributors only on the basis of one ticket (good for all sessions on all dates) for each $100," the letter reads. "One ticket has been assigned to you for $100."

Newspapers to Be Neutral.

As an assurance that St. Louis would be neutral ground, Chairman Smith of the St. Louis committee will present to the National Committee a letter signed by all St. Louis newspapers, setting forth the attitude they will take toward the convention.

"We wish to join in the cordial invitation to you to hold the Democratic national convention in St. Louis," this letter states.

"This invitation comes from the very heart of St. Louis without any semblance of partisanship. You come as the guests of the people to share in their fullest hospitality, a pleasure most of your delegates know through experience.

"The newspapers will give you that liberal and unbiased treatment they have in the past. We will seek faithfully to record the happenings of your great meeting in the true light of their importance, actuated by one desire only, and that one of helpfulness.

"You will experience no editorial domination; your deliberations can be truly in behalf of the party, minus any pretended public dictation growing out of newspaper rancor or fondness for control.

"We would especially emphasize that you not overlook the importance to the success of your cause in holding your meeting under the influence of a truly neutral press.

"Again reaffirming our hearty desire that you accept this invitation, and that our first piece of cooperation will be the spreading of that news before the American public, we are, yours for the convention."

Four hundred copies of a neat booklet compiled under direction of the St. Louis Convention and Publicity Bureau, and containing facsimile letters of invitation, are being taken to the National Committee meeting. The letters are signed by Mayor Kiel, the St. Louis Democratic Women's Club, the Chamber of Commerce, the Advertising Club, the Merchants' Exchange and the Convention and Publicity Bureau. In addition, there are letters from the Western Union and Postal Telegraph and the Southwestern Bell Telephone companies setting forth that St. Louis has ample telegraph and telephone facilities. There are facsimile editorials from St. Louis newspapers, pictures of the interior of the Coliseum and a report from the Weather Bureau showing the advantageous climatic conditions in St. Louis.

There are 13 men and four women in the St. Louis committee, which has a special car attached to a second section of the New Yorker, the regular noon Pennsylvania train to New York and Washington.

The women, Mrs. Fred L. Reid, Miss Edna McGrath and Miss Mary Semple Scott, representing the St. Louis Women's Democratic Club, and Mrs. Nat F. Brown, representing the Democratic Club of Missouri, occupy the drawing room and the men have the remainder of the car to themselves. Leaving St. Louis each of the women wore a beautiful corsage, the gift of Democratic women in St. Louis.

The delegation is headed by Mayor Kiel, Republican, and is about equally divided politically. The members are James E. Smith, Thomas H. Glancy, W. Palmer Clarkson, Walter B. Welsenburger, Con P. Curran, Bennett C. Clark, P. R. Gunn, Charles F. Hatfield, Thomas H. Lovelace, Charles A. Pearson, George C. Martin and James M. Bloodworth.

Chicago Party Reaches Capital Ahead of St. Louisans.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—When the St. Louis delegation arrives tomorrow and starts work to have St. Louis chosen for the 1924 Democratic convention by the Democratic National Committee, which meets Tuesday, it will find a Chicago reconnoissance party already on the ground, which has gathered data for a carload of Chicagoans who will present financial and political reasons why their city should be selected.

Democratic politicians here for the committee meeting admit that the race is between St. Louis and Chicago, with New York tagging far behind and San Francisco hardly in the running. They also indicate that politics will play a great part in the selection.

It is virtually admitted that the convention will go where the McAdoo men want it to go. New York is not being considered by this group, although Norman E. Mack, New York committeeman, has been reported as saying that he has enough pledges to land the convention for that city.

No doubt exists that New York could outbid the other cities if finances were the only consideration. But Chairman Hull has announced that the convention will go where the best advantages can be obtained, interpreting advantages as good auditorium and hotel accommodations.

The Chicago scouting party already on the ground consists of Fred Upham, treasurer of the Republican National Committee; M. A. Taylor, a banker, and John Hardin, a business man. Tomorrow a special car will bring a delegation headed by Mayor Dever.

sulted in his arrest on the perjury charge.

In testimony at the inquest, two witnesses, who saw the body before it was removed from the place where it was found, stated that from its position and surroundings the body apparently had been brought to the place and laid there.

A sister of the young woman, Mrs. B. J. Dunn, testified that early on the evening of May 6, Miss Burkhardt had telephoned her that she intended taking a long automobile ride in the county "with the doctor," stating that she was telephoning from the office of Dr. Spies.

Made Signed Statement.

A signed statement made by Spies to detectives and the Circuit Attorney when he was being questioned asserted the girl came to his office on the evening of May 6, 1921 for some dental work, then left.

The statement continued in substance, that Spies left his office, 7527 Michigan avenue, and drove away in his machine, learning, after going a few blocks, that the girl was in the back seat; that she asked him to take her out in the county, and that he drove to the point in the outskirts of Luxemberg, where the body was found. At this point she jumped from the car, started to run and placed a bottle to her lips, it was asserted.

Dr. Spies further stated that he became frightened and threw out of the car a small grip the girl had left in the machine, and drove away. He then went home for his wife, drove around the city and returned home later in the evening.

Police made an extensive investigation in effort to discover the identity of the physician who attempted the illegal operaton upon Miss Burkhardt, disclosed in the autopsy following her death.

Dr. Spies could not be reached for a statement at his home last night. No one there would say where he was.

'FOOL, ALL MY LIFE,' COOPER SAYS ON STAND

'Can't Answer,' When Asked If He Has Had 'Lucid Interval Since Going With Mrs. Price?'

Breakfasts and dinners which Sheridan Cooper, real estate dealer, had with Mrs. Fannie Bonner Price, lawyer and former president of the Women's Chamber of Commerce, were described by Cooper in his testimony in depositions taken for the $75,000 suit of his wife, Mrs. Edna Cooper, of 2708 Arkansas avenue, against Mrs. Price, charging alienation of his affections.

His testimony, given Friday in response to the questions of Mrs. Cooper's lawyer, Randolph Laughlin, was punctuated with self-denouncing declarations that he was "a damn fool."

"And," he added once, "I've been one all my life."

Memory Poor About Meals.

Cooper is about 50 years old and lives at 4509 Chouteau avenue, and Mrs. Price is 49 and lives at 4540 Chouteau. She has not made her whereabouts known in the nine days since Mrs. Cooper's suit was filed.

Cooper admitted that he often had breakfasted at Mrs. Price's home. When Laughlin asked if Mrs. Price was a good cook, the witness advised him to "try and find out."

"But I never was invited," "Wait and get invited."

"Did she serve a good breakfast?" "Yes."

Cooper said he had no recollection of "Fannie's" breakfast menus—suggestions of grape fruit, eggs, sausage, and so forth didn't seem to jog his memory.

"Why are you so secretive about those breakfasts?" "It's nobody's business.'

"Are you afraid of these newspapers boys here?" "I don't care what in the hell they put in; that don't make a damn bit of difference to me; I'm already broke, so it don't make a difference."

"Was Mrs. Price a good or bad cook?" "It made no difference to me."

"How did her dinners compare with Mrs. Cooper's?" "About the same."

"Then the meals served by Mrs. Price had no relation with your change of heart?" "No."

Cooper denied having joined Mrs. Price on a train bound for Texas oil fields and said he never had been out of St. Louis with her, except five or six times when they went to Belleville on a trolley car last summer on real estate deals. He said he first met her in the spring of 1922, but that she never got a cent from him and that the lunches they had together frequently always were "Dutch treat."

Cooper said he had gone to lunch with Mrs. Price at the Town Club, a women's organization, among other places, and once when he had gone with her to a hotel roof garden he had told his wife, to whom, he said, he reported every place he went. Mrs. Cooper was described by her husband as helpful and economical, but neither affectionate, considerate nor kind.

Forgetful Witness.

The lawyer asked Cooper whether he called himself proprietor of the H. L. Cooper Lumber Co., in which he was associated with Mrs. Price, William Schreiner and his son, Hall Cooper.

"No," Cooper replied: "only a damn fool."

"Did you sign checks that way?" "Well, I should have put on them 'S. E. Cooper was a damn fool.'" Previously Cooper had declared that a relative had "skinned" him out of $16,000 in that business.

The questions veered to the matter of Cooper, Mrs. Cooper and Mrs. Price appearing before the Prosecuting Attorney about a year ago, when Cooper said, he agreed to contribute $60 a month to his wife's support. The witness appeared forgetful or reticent about what was said and done then. Attorney Laughlin resorted to wheedling tones.

"Don't Make Fool of Me."

"Please tell us just a little of what happened," he begged. "Don't make a fool out of me," snapped Cooper. "I've been a damn fool all my life; I was then and I am now."

"Do you consider the period of your friendship with Mrs. Price as a lucid interval?" "I can't answer."

"Have you had any lucid intervals since going with Mrs. Price?" "I couldn't answer."

Cooper testified that some of his monthly payments to his wife were by cashier's checks, "because I didn't want Mrs. Cooper to look at my name any more." Asked to explain that, he said: "I have my own reason and I'll keep it."

ATTACK BY MOROS DUE TO BREAKING OF 'SACRED' TANK

300 Members of Religious Society Were in or Near It When Constabulary Razed Walls.

By the Associated Press.

MANILA, Jan. 12.—The destruction of a tank believed to have held sacred waters, was the cause of the recent clashes on Bucas Island, off the coast of Mindanao, in which 80 members of the Colorum, a religious society, and 19 constabulary soldiers were killed last week, it was announced in official quarters today.

The tank was known as "miraculous tank" and about 300 members of the society were bathing in it or drinking its waters when the constabulary broke its walls and let the water out. The Colorums believed the waters possessed remarkable health-giving properties.

Governor-General Leonard Wood said it was possible that the breaking of the tank was carried out because the water in it had become polluted or had become a carrier of infectious diseases.

The Governor-General has not departed for the region of the clashes as yet to investigate the conditions arising from them, as he had planned to do, but is holding himself in readiness to make the trip unless conditions become quieter.

Surigao, the post of the Philippine constabulary nearest the scene of the clash, was the headquarters of the constables. The patrol went to Bucas Island, only a few miles distant, in a constabulary launch. No report of the first encounter has been received here, beyond the bare fact that it occurred and that six constables were killed, but a full account of the second arrived today.

Fired Volley at House.

The launch, the advices said, steamed up close to the shore of the island and dropped anchor where about 500 of the colorum members were hiding in the bushes. The men at the orders of Capt. Valentin S. Juan and Lieut. Juan Guillermo, fired a volley at the houses ashore, assuming that some of the colorum were hiding in them. Nobody appeared.

Soon, however, one colorum appeared from a cocoanut grove. He carried a rifle, which he aimed at the constabulary. They fired at him but missed. The constabulary then landed and divided into two parties commanded, respectively, by the two officers.

Advancing by separate routes toward the house, the constabulary threatened the colorums with shots fired into the air, meanwhile shouting to them to surrender. After the third shot, one colorum sprang into view, crying:

"Your guns are no good! You are our certain victims! Come out my comrades!"

Soldiers Overwhelmed.

The constabulary shot and killed this man. Five others who appeared also were shot down instantly. Then a large number of the colorums, estimated at several hundred, rushed out of the bushes and attacked the constabulary with firearms and bolos. The soldiers were overwhelmed, and after 13 of them had been killed, the remainder escaped to the launch and headed for Surigao.

No disturbances since those on Thursday have been reported from Surigao, but Governor-General Wood requested Rear Admiral Thomas Washington, commander-in-chief of the Asiatic fleet, to order a gunboat to the province because he believed it would have a salutary effect on the natives and cause the fanatics to disperse.

SHENANDOAH BEGINS MOORING TEST FOR NORTH POLE FLIGHT

Will Be Fastened to Tower for Seven Days to Try Mast and Her Own Strength.

By the Associated Press.

LAKEHURST, N. J., Jan. 12.—The naval airship Shenandoah was taken from her hangar and fastened to the steel mooring mast at the air station at 6:40 o'clock tonight, to begin a seven-day mooring test in preparation for the proposed North Pole flight next spring.

The giant ship was taken from her hangar just before 6 o'clock and left the ground at 6:15, consuming 25 minutes in nosing her way to the mooring mast at the end of the testing field and being secured to the top of the steel tower.

The maneuver was accomplished perfectly. A six-mile wind blew her gently. The Shenandoah will be moored to the mast seven days and nights, through wind or storm, to test the stability of the mast and the strength of the airship. Capt. Frank, R. McCrary, in command; Capt. Anton Heinen and Commander Weyerbacher, with a crew of 35 men, are on board. The three officers will remain on the ship day and night until the end of the test, and the crew will be relieved regularly by others of the three crews stationed here.

a "millionaire's tax bill" and efforts to "investigate propaganda" behind the Mellon plan.

Senator Couzens' letter today was the third he has sent to Mellon within a few days, all aimed at the surtax reduction.

While not giving a premature promise of willingness to compromise, the Mellon bill's supporters do not demand enactment of the exact terms of the Mellon bill. They will accept readjusting so long as it does not wreck the real purpose of the tax reduction move which is to stimulate business and general prosperity. Senator Smoot declared there is no use in accepting the substitute of 44 per cent offered by Representative Garner, declaring it might just as well be left where it is or even pushed up again to 65 or 75 per cent.

Compromise on Bill Inevitable, Longworth Says.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12. — A split definitely developed today among Republican leaders of the House as to the advisability of modifying the Mellon tax bill. Representative Longworth the party leader, said he realized a compromise was inevitable, particularly on surtax rates—a position also held by Chairman Green of the Ways and Means Committee.

Democratic leaders reiterated that they were convinced many Republicans would refuse to support the treasury bill as written and would lean toward the Democratic proposal of show down.

The Ways and Means Committee completed its consideration of administrative features of the plan and on Monday will begin public hearings on the bill. The committee has been instructed to report the measure by Feb. 11. For a brief time today Republican members of the committee were in conference to continue their discussions of tax policy.

Longworth said Congress never had and never would accept, without change, rates suggested by the Secretary of the Treasury. It is too jealous of its prerogatives to do so, he declared, adding that it would be no reflection on Mellon if changes were made in the rates proposed by him as his personality had nothing to do with the situation.

The Republican leader declined to predict what surtax maximum finally would be agreed upon by the Republicans, although he expressed confidence that the faction insisting on modification of the treasury schedule would show more strength than the group opposed to the ratings.

"We ought to reduce high surtaxes," said Longworth, "to a point where the temptation would not be irresistible to a rich man to put all his income in tax exempt securities. Whether the Mellon plan proposes the right maximum, I don't know. It is apparent, however, that this Congress will not put rates low enough to bring about the result desired by the administration in all cases.

Longworth said he was certain President Coolidge would not veto a bill which carried higher surtax rates than those proposed by Mellon. This observation was made in the face of announcements at the White House that the President was opposed to any changes in principle.

35 Per Cent Suggested.

There were indications today that Republican leaders, groping about for a surtax maximum might suggest 35 per cent, as against the 25 per cent limit on incomes in excess of $100,000 proposed in the Mellon bill and the 44 per cent maximum on incomes over $92,000 favored by the Democrats. The present maximum is 50 per cent on incomes of $200,000 or more.

Green declined to give his views on the surtax schedule, although he is known to believe that the Mellon maximum would not have the support of enough Republicans to insure its adoption, and is inclined to increase it considerably above the treasury figure.

As to the likelihood of compromise the Ways and Means Committee chairman said that all important legislation was the result of adjustments with the tax bill no exception. From the start, he said, the committee has "intended to write the bill," and it was indicated that efforts would be made to make changes for the purpose of meeting the demands from various groups in the Republican party in committee rather than permit an inter-party fight to develop on the floor.

Another member of the committee, Representative Frear, Republican, Wisconsin, made public tonight another letter to Secretary Mellon on the tax exempt securities plan. Again advocating passage of his bill, which seeks to tax securities now escaping taxation through the sixteenth amendment, Frear urged that this method of approaching the question should be submitted to the Supreme Court for a decision as to its constitutionality.

"If you are opposed to the entire policy proposed in my bill, which is designed to reach $10,000,000,000 or more in outstanding municipal and state securities," said Frear's letter, "then possibly I cannot look for your hoped for support, but in the interest of bringing to the Government treasury largely increased revenues and enforcing existing laws irrespective of your own and my personal preferences and prejudice in the matter, I submit that, if any doubt exists as to the law, and, as stated, it does seem to exist in the mind of many able lawyers, the question should be squarely tested.

"For reasons previously set forth it is highly probable that under the terms of my bill the court would not so divide as to set aside the law and if not the Government would be the immediate gainer in greatly increased revenues, however disappointing to the holders of such securities. Such decision would also destroy a great agency for tax evasions which we both oppose and the future benefits compared with the slow uncertain constitutional amendment procedure is beyond question.

"Again I ask for your aid in securing a decision of the highest tribunal, instead of the opinion of any lawyer, whatever may be his preconceived opinion or personal interest, if any, in the result. This, I am sure you will understand is not captiously urged, but is based on what seems to me to be the only proper course to pursue."

The tax question came up for discussion in the House today. Representatives Rankin, Mississippi, and Wingo, Arkansas, Democrats, led an attack on the Mellon plan.

Representative Denison, Republican, Illinois, remarked that Mellon was "too big a man to fix a tax policy for the nation based only on benefits to himself."

N. Y. WOMAN NEEDS $5000 SO SHE CAN WED LAWYER

Plea of Mrs. Alice Potter to Court for Daughter, Who Will Inherit $196,000 in Two Years.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 12.—Julia Anne Potter, 28-year-old grandniece of the late Bishop Henry C. Potter, has a $196,000 inheritance trust fund coming to her in two years from a grandmother, and a present monthly allowance of $600 besides. But, according to a petition filed in Surrogate's Court today by her mother, Mrs. Alice Potter, Julia Ann needs $5000 of the trust fund right away, in order that she may marry Frank Cyrus Fischer, a New York attorney, next Feb. 28.

The mother sets forth the bride-to-be comes from "one of the leading families of New York City, being the grandniece of the late Bishop Potter, and her relatives and friends are all people of great wealth and refinement."

"By custom," Mrs. Potter's petition continues, "it is necessary that the bride pay the expenses of the wedding and reception." And because of the "distinction of her family and a large number of acquaintances it is necessary to have a large wedding suitable to her social status."

Miss Potter is to be married at Grace Church, where Bishop Potter once was rector.

MEXICAN REBELS LOSE 24-HOUR FIGHT FOR CITY

116 of Them Killed at Pachuca When 800 Are Held at Bay by 300 Federal Troops.

By the Associated Press.

MEXICO CITY, Jan. 12. — For 24 hours, beginning at daybreak Thursday, rebels under Marcial Cavazos and Otilio Villegas fought Federal troops in the streets of Pachuca without capturing the city, Gov. Axuara and Gen. Benito Garcia, commander of the garrison; Gen. Victor Monter and Gen. Sera Pio Lopez defended the city against great odds, the rebels numbering more than 800, while the defending forces totaled 300.

Generals Monter and Lopez were killed in the fighting and the rebel forces suffered heavily.

According to eyewitnesses, the rebels began their attack at 5 o'clock Thursday morning by surprising a group of volunteer state guards, forcing them to surrender after two hours fighting, in which Gen. Lopez was killed. Gov. Axuara and Generals Monter and Garcia, with the remaining forces, fortified a church in one of the city's suburbs, and the fighting continued for several hours. Then a group of women carrying a white flag approached the fortress, suggesting that the Federal troops surrender. Gov. Axuara refused and the fighting continued. In the late afternoon, the rebels dynamited the church. This was followed by fierce fighting in which Gen. Monter lost his life, falling with a bullet wound.

At 2 o'clock Friday morning the rebels decided to abandon the city, learning of the approach of Gen. Herrero's columns from Mexico City.

The city suffered slight damage. The rebel troops did not molest the business men, contenting themselves with appropriating Government funds and exacting a loan from the mining companies.

The forces rushed from Mexico City arrived at Pachuca after the rebels evacuated it.

Before their retreat, the rebels destroyed telegraph, telephone and railway communications in a considerable area.

According to the War Department, 116 rebels were killed at Pachuca. The Federal losses are unknown, and detailed reports are lacking.

NORMAN H. DAVIS TO HEAD LEAGUE'S COMMISSION ON MEMEL CONTROVERSY

By the Associated Press.

GENEVA, Switzerland, Jan. 11. OFFICIAL announcement today that Norman H. Davis, former American Assistant Secretary of State, had accepted the presidency of the League of Nations' neutral commission to investigate the Memel controversy caused much satisfaction in league circles.

It was declared that the willingness of a man of such standing to act in the settlement of one of the most difficult political problems before the league, following the acceptance by three other prominent Americans of invitations to help in the reparation issue, was evidence that America was prepared to co-operate in the reconstruction and stabilization of Europe. It is understood here that the Washington Government offered no objection to Davis' acceptance of the invitation.

Davis' name was one of those on the list of representative Americans drawn up by the league council in Paris as desirable for the work. It is understood he will sail for Europe next Tuesday. The two other members of the commission have not been chosen, but one probably will be a Hollander and the other a Spaniard.

LAMP AT FOREST PARK ENTRANCE DESTROYED

Auto Driver Held After Striking Post at King's Highway and Lindell.

The ornamental iron lamp post at the Lindell-King's Highway entrance to Forest Park, which has guided traffic by day with its signs of "Drive to the Right," and at night by its large cluster of gas lamps, is no more.

Its concrete base, from which twisted gas pipes lead to specially inserted plugs, are all that remain after the automobile driven by Edward Sterbe, 23, a mechanic, of 3722 Lee avenue, collided with it about 4 o'clock yesterday morning. Sterbe was driving south on King's highway, with Frank Sacchi of 4728 Olive street, owner of the car, as passenger. Somehow Sterbe "drove to the right"—right into the post. It snapped off at the base, the escaping gas was ignited, and Sterbe and Sacchi crawled from the wreckage as the automobile caught fire.

The Fire Department was called, and extinguished the flames, with the aid of the "trouble squad" of the Laclede Gas Light Co. The automobile was almost a total loss. Sterbe was held on a charge of careless driving.

It was suggested to the St. Louis Safety Council that the wrecked light standard offered effective publicity possibilities for the display of careful driving signs. For the present it was decided the signs could not improve the object lesson, as it is daily viewed by the thousands of motorists who pass the intersection.

GERMANY TO PENALIZE ITS LUXURY SEEKERS

Government Fears Effect of Exodus to Resorts on American Relief Work.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Jan. 12.—Germans in Switzerland for the winter sports and other natives whom wanderlust and the partly rehabilitated mark are drawing to Italy will find themselves shadowed by German taxation sleuths while tobogganing down the Alpine heights or basking in the Sicilian sunshine.

The increasing exodus to foreign resorts has caused a violent controversy in the German press which is in no small measure feeding on criticism from abroad and which officials fear is menacing the German relief work now contemplated in the United States and other countries.

The Government's determination to administer a sharp rebuke to those thoughtless Germans who are accused of indulging in luxury at home and holidays abroad while thousands of their fellow citizens suffering from privation was the subject of a frank discussion by Chancellor Marx with the Associated Press, in the course of which he declared the German Government sharply condemned the conduct of these persons and would not shrink from punishing them, intimating that pleasure-seeking Germans hereafter would be subject to drastic taxation penalties.

Tells of Others' Suffering.

"They constitute deplorable exceptions, such as are to be found in every metropolitan community, but we, nevertheless, purpose to lay hands on these parasites," the chancellor declared. He added that, in fairness to the bulk of the German people which was courageously facing its sufferings and privations, the nation should not be held to blame for the actions of its unworthy citizens. Discussing the justification of foreign relief work in Germany, the chancellor said:

"Any impartial visitor to Germany can readily convince himself of the nature and extent of the social privations which obtain among all classes. We have millions of unemployed and more millions who are working on short time schedules. Suicide, prompted by hunger; tuberculosis, resulting from undernourishment, and inadequate housing conditions are showing alarming increases, affording proof that the German people are exposed to a period of suffering the like of which is unknown in a modern civilized community.

"Were it not so, the generous relief work now carried on in Germany through the munificence of American charity would be incomprehensible. Your American observers who have had the opportunity to study social conditions in other parts of the world must surely be convinced of the urgency and justification of aid for Germany if their unbiased reports are to be believed."

The skepticism expressed abroad with respect to the actual need of relief work for Germany moved the Chancellor to observe that such misgivings undoubtedly were prompted by the actions of the restricted circles of Germans in foreign resorts whose flouting of luxuries was bound to have a provocative effect both on observers abroad and on their home folks.

AUTHOR'S SUCCESSOR ASSAILS VOLSTEAD ACT

Rep. Kvale Says Anti-Saloon League Framed Law "That Is a Privilege for the Rich."

Post-Dispatch Bureau,
20-23 Wyatt Building.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—Representative Kvale of Minesota, elected to succeed Andrew J. Volstead, because he charged the latter was not dry enough, today startled both wets and drys in the House by declaring the Volstead law a farce. He turned also on the Antisaloon League and announced he had ceased to contribute to it since he learned it was an "adjunct to the G. O. P." Wets applauded Mr. Kvale's excoriation of the Volstead law and Representative Crampton (Republican, of Michigan), dry leader on the floor, felt it necessary to force Kvale to say whether he aimed to make it harder for the rich men to get liquor or easier for the poor man to do so. Kvale said what he was after was the rich man, but he appeared to have dire intentions relative to the law sponsored by his predecessor.

While Kvale was assaulting the Volstead law in the House, another dry diversion occurred when Rear Admiral William S. Sims, retired, told the Intercollegiate Association that men who drink were criminals and inveighed against officials who were not total abstainers.

"There is 'fun' in alcohol," Sims said, "but there is, alas, great danger. Look at the gradual physical effect on the men of 50. They are a disgrace to the human race, and it is up to you to stop, look and listen."

Proposes Tax on Liquor.

The occasion for the Kvale attack on the Volstead law was an effort to support the bill recently introduced by the Minnesota member which aims to tax liquor out of the cellars of those who have left-over stocks. Kvale's bill proposes a tax of $10 a gallon on each single gallon and $1 additional as the number of gallons increase.

Representative Blanton, Democrat of Texas, said that if this was the best legislation Kvale had to "dry up the country," he had better make way for a man "dryer" than the man who defeated Volstead, because Volstead was not dry enough. This suggestion conveyed an idea of aridity in Kvale's district that left most of the members gasping.

"The enforcement act," Kvale said, "sometimes erroneously and ridiculously named after a man who never in all his life had given the saloon or the liquor traffic any cause for worry, that act, framed by the lawyers of the Anti-Saloon League, was so framed, and has so operated since its enactment into law ,as to be a law for the poor and a privilege for the rich. The law, as to be a law for the poor promise.

"Greatest Tragedy in Civilization."

"By the manner in which today we are enforcing, or rather, failing to enforce, the eighteenth amendment, we are breeding a nation of hypocrites, and God pity the offspring. It is the greatest tragedy ever witnessed in civilization.

"You never can allow the millionaire to have all the liquor he wants and at the same time compel the man in overalls to obey the amendment. It cannot be done."

Representative Berger, Socialist, Wisconsin, asked Representative Kvale if it wasn't true that there was more drunkenness now than ever before. The Minnesota Representative replied in the negative, but Berger rejoined that he spoke from experience.

"I never get drunk," he hastened to add. "I never got drunk in my life. But the trouble is the liquor now is not good. It is poi-

NO INDICATION AT MARION OF RECALL OF TROOPS

S. Glenn Young Said to Be Planning to Establish Residence to Run for Office of Sheriff.

MARION, Ill., Jan. 12.—There was no indication tonight that troops would be recalled from Williamson County in the immediate future. There was no truce reported, and the militiamen made themselves by pelting one another with snowballs.

S. Glenn Young, leader of the wholesale dry raids which resulted in the calling of the troops, will establish a residence in Williamson County with a view of being a candidate for the office of Sheriff at the next election, according to Arlie O. Boswell, counsel for the Ku Klux Klan. Boswell said that requests had been received from law enforcement bodies in Jackson and other counties to have Young come to these counties and "clean them up."

The Law Enforcement League Herrin today issued a statement saying there was no need for troops, and urging that the raids be continued.

WOMEN TAKING MORE INTEREST IN CITIZENSHIP, COOLIDGE SAYS

His Message to Women's National Republican Club Comments on Their Attitude.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 12.—President Coolidge has observed among American women during the last few months an "intense and expanding interest in citizenship duties," he said in a message to the Women's National Republican Club, which was read today before 1800 delegates in annual luncheon session.

This interest in citizenship, said the President, was revealed to him as "A widespread and profoundly earnest movement plainly at work among the women in all parts of the country."

His message, directed to Mrs. Charles H. Sabin, president of the club and read by her, said, in part:

"Indeed, ever since their nation-wide enfranchisement the women have been demonstrating a purpose to keep themselves at all times in touch with affairs and to fit themselves by study and conference to make the most of their full participation in public concerns.

"I have been struck repeatedly with the fact that communications from all parts of the country indicate the universality of this interest among women, and regard it as one of the best omens of these times.

The club was addressed by United States Senator Watson of Indiana, William Starr Myers of Princeton University and the Right Rev. Herbert Shipman.

Lyman Hay, manager of the hotel, said that it was a matter of policy and that neither union influence nor complaints had anything to do with the change.

$15,500 INTEREST ON $950

Kansas Supreme Court Uholds Note Drawn in 1874.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

TOPEKA, Kan., Jan. 12.—The Kansas Supreme Court today upheld a peculiar note for $950 and directed the payment of $15,500 as interest on this note for 48 years, and the principal. The decision was in the suit of the estate of Andrew Diven against Clarence Diven.

Mrs. Sarah J. Diven, the wife of Andrew Diven, received $950 from the estate of her grandfather. She turned the money over to her husband and he gave her a note dated April 12, 1874, which provided "at the expiration of my life I promise to pay to Sarah J. Diven, my wife or her heirs, from my estate, or any part thereof, $950 at 6 per cent interest from date, payable annually, and if interest be not paid, to become as principal and bear the same rate of interest annually." Mrs. Diven died before her husband and her heirs brought suit.

HENRY PREPARED TO TESTIFY KLAN 'THREW HIM OVER'

Defeated Senatorial Candidate Arrives in Washington Ready to Be Witness Against Mayfield.

Post-Dispatch Bureau.
20-23 Wyatt Bldg.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—Two Democratic opponents of Earle B. Mayfield in the Texas Senatorial primaries arrived in Washington today.

Former Congressman Robert L. Henry of Houston, known as the "fall guy" of the Texas Senatorial primary, because he entered with promise of full klan support only to be doublecrossed, was first to arrive. He was quickly joined by Cullen F. Thomas, who finished a poor fourth in the primaries due to the opposition of the klan and his failure to hold membership in the Invisible Empire.

Henry, who was a member of Congress from the Waco district for 20 years and for two terms chairman of the powerful House Rules Committee, is expected to be one of the principal witnesses against Mayfield in the Senate committee investigation of the contest of Mayfield's seat. His testimony is counted upon to reveal that although Mayfield claims to have resigned as a klansman in January preceding his election to the Senate, he never did sever his connection with the klan.

In Washington dispatches the Post-Dispatch today printed a letter addressed to Imperial Wizard Evans in which the details of how Henry was doublecrossed were set forth. Henry is relied upon to supplement this with these illuminating facts:

That he personally had to go to Atlanta to obtain permission from Imperial Wizard Evans before he could publicly announce during the Texas campaign he was a member of the Klan.

That Evans and former Imperial Giant Clarke issued an imperial edict allowing him to do this, knowing Henry would attract from Mayfield all antiklan votes while secretly the klan's men would be ordered to support Mayfield.

That after the klan hierarchy had agreed not to reveal a perference for any one of the three klan candidates, the five Great Titans of Texas met, with Mayfield present and decided to throw the klan's strength exclusively to Mayfield.

That klans throughout Texas held what were called "eliminating primaries" of their own at which secret balloting took place and in which Mayfield was declared a winner by reason of falsifications, misrepresentations and lies.

That Mayfield, five months after he claims to have resigned as a klansman, called Henry to his campaign headquarters in Dallas, appealed to him "as a good fellow klansman" to get out of the senatorial race for the sake of "klan harmony" and predicted if he didn't the klan would defeat him anyway. Mayfield said on this occasion the full klan vote would go to him and no other.

Henry Threatens to Tell Truth.

"I have not been requested to appear before the Senate investigating committee yet," said Henry, "but if I am called I shall of course tell the full truth about the situation which obtained in Texas during the senatorial race. Assuming I shall be a witness, my story will be withheld until I take the witness stand."

The testimony of Thomas is likely to deal with all phases of the political situation in Texas during the senatorial race. Thomas, who married a sister of Morris Sheppard, senior United States Senator from Texas, was considered a sure winner in the Senatorial contest until the klan interposed its influence. He had been a personal friend of ex-President Wilson and one of the delegates at large to many Democratic national conventions.

After his defeat, Thomas issued a statement saying thousands of his friends had been compelled to desert him when ordered by the klan bodies in which they were members to support Mayfield.

"I was on the senatorial track," said Thomas, "when the Ku Klux train came along and nothing was left of me."

Sterling P. Strong, another klan candidate for the senatorship, who, along with Henry, was trimmed by the klan, will also be summoned before the Senate Committee on Privileges and Elections when the Mayfield contest is heard. If he sticks to stories he has told privately, Strong will reveal he attended klan meetings with Mayfield when both were in full regalia, including the 'helmet," which is the klan's official word for the mask.

HARTFORD GRAND JURYMEN TO INSPECT COLLEGE HERE

Two Members Will Investigate P. and S. Institution in Merical Inquiry.

By the Associated Press.

HARTFORD, Conn., Jan. 12.—Personal inspection in colleges whose graduates have been admitted to practice medicine in Connecticut under circumstances now under investigation, has been decided upon by the grand jury. The grand jury has been divided into subcommittees of two members each. One subcommittee will inspect the Middlesex College of Medicine and surgery at Cambridge, Mass., and the Boston College of Physicians and Surgeons.

Two other jurymen were asked to investigate carefully the St. Louis College of Physicians and Surgeons and the Kansas City College of Medicine and Surgery, both of which have been accused by the State Eclectic Examining Board of having fraudulently issued diplomas "used by the recipients as a basis to take examinations in the State of Connecticut. Forty of 43 physicians whose licenses have been revoked at instance of the grand jury held diplomas from some one of these colleges.'

LEADEN CASKET EXHUMED NEAR "VIRGINIA DARE" BURIAL SITE

Scientists Unable to Decipher Writing of Old Document Found in It.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—A mold-encrusted leaden casket containing some crudely fashioned beads and an undecipherable document was unearthed today near the spot where a week ago was found a leaden plate bearing the name "Virgin Dare"—supposably Virginia Dare, the first white child born in America.

Under powerful reading glasses, the hand-written print on the paper or parchment could not be deciphered. Three men, said to be prominent Washington scientists, whose identity the discoverer, Russell Kaufman, would not reveal, have gone with Kaufman to New York, where stronger glasses will be used.

The men are said to be scientists attached to the Metropolitan Museum.

POLICE LEADERS ACCUSED

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 12.—Police commissioner Enright today ordered charges preferred against 13 of the 22 police inspectors of the city, the highest uniformed men on the force, presaging what was believed would be the biggest shakeup in the department's history.

Besides the inspectors, a large number of deputy inspectors and captains, having jurisdiction in all parts of the city, were ordered brought to trial on allegations of laxity in the suppression of disorderly houses and neglect of duty in permitting traffic in intoxicating liquors.

'REVOLUTIONARY' SHIPPING BOARD INQUIRY EXPECTED

Democrats and House Insurgents Plan Tactics to Prevent "Whitewashing" by Republicans.

Post-Dispatch Bureau,
20-23 Wyatt Building.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—Tactics described as "revolutionary" probably will be used in Congress in connection with the proposed investigation of the Shipping Board to prevent a "whitewashing" on the part of Republican regulars.

The Post-Dispatch learned this today and at the same time found out that the investigation most likely will be undertaken by the House, although Senator Fletcher, Democrat, of Florida, who wants a thorough probe, is known to favor a joint committee.

A House motion to investigate the board, if carried, would mean that the investigation would be in the hands of the committee on the merchant marine and fisheries. A motion to appoint a special committee would under the rules leave teh appointing up to the Speaker, and would mean it would also have a Republican majority.

In order to avoid a repetition of what happened at the hearing on the ship subsidy bill when, according to the minority report, "the Shipping Board repeatedly refused to furnish important information called for by members of the committee," the so-called "revolutionary" method will be used.

This will be to name the members of the special committee at the same time that a motion is made to investigate the board. Representatives who are backing this move expressed the opinion that it could be carried by the Democrats with the backing of the House insurgents. It was said that enough of these already are in favor of an airing of the Shipping Board to insure the defeat of the Republican regulars who oppose the investigation. The investigation committee under present plans would be composed of three Democratic regulars, three Republican regulars and one insurgent. This would eliminate partisanship.

Representative Davis (D., Tenn.), who led the fight on the ship-subsidy bill, told the Post-Dispatch today that the investigation should be "diligent and searching in an effort to ascertain what has been done and is being done by the Shipping Board to learn the true state of affairs with a view of eliminating inefficiency, wastefulness, favoritism and whatever elements are operating against an honest and efficient administration in order that we may determine correct constructive policies for the future in dealing with the Shipping Board."

It is believed that some of the regular Republicans who are friends of President Coolidge will line up with the Democrats and insurgents because an investigation of the board also would be an investigation of Lasker.

Lasker now has climbed back on the Hiram Johnson band wagon and, with William Wrigley Jr. of Chicago, is the chief financial backer of the Californian's campaign for the presidency.

NEGRO CHARGED WITH 16 HOLDUPS IN 35 MINUTES

Victims Contributed Total of About $130 to Lone Robber, According to Police Tabulations.

One negro with one nickeled revolver and a long black overcoat, is given credit for 35 minutes of buzzing activity in the Mounted Police District last night. The authorities have an elaborate description of the lone robber, gathered piecemeal from his victims who in all contributed something over $120 in cash.

The robber appeared first at the home of James Bacon, 1129 Blendon place, where he politely rang the bell. Mrs. Bacon answered.

"I want to see the boss," he announced. Mrs. Bacon began to question him.

"Never mind," the negro exclaimed, and pushed his way in. Mrs. Bacon fell to the floor and her husband ran to the hall and grappled with the intruder. The negro, however, drew a revolver and forced Bacon to the wall. The wife, fearing the negro, directed him to the bedroom where he took $75 from a canvas bag.

Couple Held Up on Street.

Before the ink was dry on the desk sergeant's memorandum a "Mr. Hines" telephoned. Mounted District. He gave a similar description of a negro who, he said, had just robbed him and a "Miss McFarland," both of St. Louis County, at Wise and McCausland avenues. They would wait until the police arrived, he said.

At 9:30 the negro rang the bell at 1400 McCausland avenue, two blocks south of Wise. He pointed a revolver at Julius P. Sauerwein, and forced him into the dining room where his wife, mother and five guests were chatting. The negro got a total of $9 from them and fled, to appear five minutes later at the home of Dr. Roy E. Mason, 1364 McCausland.

Mrs. Mason answered the door, and after a colloquy similar to the one with Mrs. Bacon, the negro pushed his way in and held up the Masons and Dr. and Mrs. T. Hale of Clayton, who were visiting. He took about $40 from Dr. Mason, $5 from Dr. Hall, and a .32-caliber revolver from a buffet drawer.

Tired of Waiting for Police.

By the time the police got around to looking for "Hines" and his companion, they were gone. At McCausland and Oakland avenues they were told that the couple had tired of waiting and gone home.

A negro, answering the description, the police learned, was seen boarding a City Limits car near the scene of the last robbery. He transferred to the Hodiamont line, it was said.

COSTUMES OF SOUTH OF 1830 ARE WORN AT WEDDING

Miss Helen Belo, Daughter of Texas Publisher, Bride of A. T. Morrison in New York City.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 12.—Helen Ennis Belo, daughter of Mrs. Alfred H. Belo of Park avenue, and the late Alfred Belo of the Dallas (Tex.) News, and Allen Turner Morrison of Asheville, N. C., were married in "The Little Church Around the Corner" today in the costumes and a setting of the old South.

The bride, the maid of honor—Miss Jane Belo, her sister—and all the bridesmaids were attired in the quaint laced costumes and poke bonnets of the South of 1830.

Miss Belo's gown and poke bonnet were trimmed in the real lace which had adorned her mother's wedding dress.

John V. Collis of Louisville, Ky., was best man, and the service was read by the Rev. Randolph Ray, who formerly was rector of St. Mathew's Cathedral, Dallas.

The guests, all socially prominent, were from New York, Boston, New Haven, Asheville, Dallas, Washington and Cleveland.

Mr. and Mrs. Morrison left tonight for Pinehurst and Palm Beach.

LEADERS IN SALES OF MEDICAL DIPLOMAS REPORTED INDICTED

List Said to Include Dr. Robert Adcox of St. Louis and Two Kansas City Physicians.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Jan. 12.—Three alleged leaders in the sales of medical diplomas are understood to have been indicted by the Jackson County grand jury, which made its final report today. Those under indictment are said to be:

Dr. Ralph A. Voigt, 297 Minor Building, Kansas City.

Dr. Dale R. Alexander, secretary of the Kansas City College of Medicine and Surgery.

Dr. Robert Adcox of St. Louis.

In making its report, the jury said:

"We have made an investigation into the illegal practice of medicine in Kansas City, and find scores of quacks are practicing unmolested.

"This is a matter in which every man and woman is interested vitally, and unrelenting warfare upon all officials in authority should be waged against these criminals who prey upon the sick and afflicted.

"Unfortunately, we were confronted with a condition that appalled us; the laws of Missouri protecting the public are inadequate. These crimes in Missouri are but misdemeanors, while in most cases they are felonies."

Foreman Greiner said the jury was forced to wade through the technicalities of the law for two weeks before a charge could be found upon which to base an indictment.

KEWANEE

How to Be Sweet and Clean

Gee, what a beautiful city this would be, as beautiful as it is now, if every big building was equipped with a KEWANEE ALL-STEEL SMOKELESS FIREBOX BOILER. Too much to expect right away, old dears, but it is as inevitable as a blister after a burn.

The situation as it stands now is that some of you owners of buildings are pinning your faith and your coin to smokeless coal, when as a matter of fact, the big remedy lies in a smokeless boiler. The KEWANEE burns any kind of coal without smoke, but other types of boilers have to have smokeless coal to be smokeless. Do you get that? Look at the difference in cost.

"Example is better than precept" as the old copy-books used to say, and the copy-books held many a chunk of cold wisdom. Call our local office and ask our representative to take you to the big buildings which use KEWANEE ALL-STEEL SMOKELESS FIREBOX BOILERS. Note that they use soft coal. Note that they are smokeless. Note what they save in fuel costs. It's worth your time.

Or drop a line to The Old Man Behind the Boiler and ask him to tell you all the expert secrets

STRIKE STHREATEN TO TIE UP BRITAIN AND DEFEAT LABOR

By JOHN L. BALDERSTON,
London Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

(Copyright, 1924, by the Press and Pulitzer Publishing Co., The New York World.)

LONDON, Jan. 12.—The labor leaders planning the share of the spoils of office were rudely shocked today by the categorical announcement by John Bromley, secretary of the Associated Society of Locomotive Engineers and Firemen, that "a strike is inevitable."

This means that unless mediation is successful on an unannounced day, probably next Saturday night, 5000 men, two-thirds of all the firemen and engineers on the British railways, will quit work. The men have refused to accept the award of the National Wages Board, making a reduction of from $2 to $3 in their weekly pay. The award, however, affects only long-distance firemen and engineers, or 2 per cent of all the workers in the union.

The political reactions of this strike, if it takes place, may be serious, even to the point of preventing the Liberals from overthrowing the Baldwin Government and installing Labor, should most of the nation's railway system be crippled by Tuesday, Jan. 22, when Labor's motion of "no confidence" in the Tory government will probably come to a vote in the House of Commons.

The National Union of Railway Men, of which J. H. Thomas, slated for a Labor Cabinet portfolio, is president, has accepted the decision of the Wages Board, and, therefore, will not strike, but it contains only a third of the country's engineers and firemen and C. T. Cramp, the industrial secre-

Walkout of 5000 Engineers and Firemen May Prevent Liberals From Overthrowing Tories.

By JOHN L. BALDERSTON, London Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

LONDON, Jan. 12.—The labor leaders planning the share of the spoils of office were rudely shocked today by the categorical announcement by John Bromley, secretary of the Associated Society of Locomotive Engineers and Firemen, that "a strike is inevitable."

This means that unless mediation is successful on an unannounced day, probably next Saturday night, 5000 men, two-thirds of all the firemen and engineers on the British railways, will quit work. The men have refused to accept the award of the National Wages Board, making a reduction of from $2 to $5 in their weekly pay. The award, however, affects only long-distance firemen and engineers, or 2 per cent of all the workers in the union.

The political reactions of this strike, if it takes place, may be serious, even to the point of preventing the Liberals from overthrowing the Baldwin Government and installing Labor, should most of the nation's railway system be crippled by Tuesday, Jan. 22, when Labor's motion of "no confidence" in the Tory government will probably come to a vote in the House of Commons.

The National Union of Railway Men, of which J. H. Thomas, slated for a Labor Cabinet portolio, is president, has accepted the decision of the Wages Board, and, therefore, will not strike, but it contains only a third of the country's engineers and firemen and C. T. Cramp, the industrial secretary of the union said: "While our men will work as usual, they will not perform the work usually done by members of the Associated Society." This means that only a skeleton service could be kept up on the principal lines.

Political Crisis Probable.

A political criss is liable to arise out of this situation. At the time of the last railway strike in 1919, the Government ran the railways with troops and improvised a great motor lorry service that supplied the larger cities with milk and provisions. In this way the strike was broken. The Labor government however, could not take any such action as this without causing a party split, for the trade unions which are an organic and powerful section of organized labor would be certain to forbid the Government to crush the strike.

Accordingly, efforts at mediation are being started tonight by Labor party executives and the general council of the trades unions Congress. Mediation is rendered the more difficult because the members of the Associated Society of Locomotive Engineers and Firemen voted 5 to 1 against accepting the wages award after the Executive Committee of the union had advised them to yield.

Thus, the pressure must be brought to bear on the rank and file instead of on the leaders. The men will be told that by their threatened action they are jeopardizing labor's chance to come into power.

The menace of a coal strike is also certain to arise next week when the result of the ballot of the miners on the proposition of denouncing the wage agreement which ended the strike of 1921 is announced. It is certain to be overwhelmingly in favor of a new agreement to replace that by which the miners accepted great wage reductions after the last strike had been broken. The owners profess themselves unable to raise wages.

The attitude of the Labor Government toward the two great strikes now possible is that whatever is done will probably result either in a support of the strikers and consequent immediate defeat in the House of Commons or else an internal conflict splitting the party. On the other hand, the leaders admit the difficulty of preventing wage earners who have been smarting under wage reduction for the past two years from insisting on striking, or getting more pay, when they have a Government in office which they think is bound to support them. Unless labor can head off these strikes, a leading member of the party told me pessimistically tonight it would be better to refuse to take office because either a railway strike or a coal strike with labor in Downing street would precipitate a situation that would be bound to destroy the parliamentary party and turn the mass of workers from achieving their aims of constitutional methods and cause them to adopt direct action.

47 HOLSTEINS PRODUCE 52,111 POUNDS OF BUTTER

Average for Leading Cows Is 1109 Pounds in Year, Records Show.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Jan. 12.—The total yearly production of the leading Hilstein cow in each of 47 states is 41,689 pounds butterfat, equivalent to 52,111 pounds of butter, according to the advanced register records of the Holstein-Friesian Association of America. This production is sufficient to supply each family with one pound of butter in cities the size of Rochester, New York and Portland, Ore.

The average production of each cow is 1109 pounds of butter in one year, which is more than the yearly butter yield of the average dairy cows in the United States, the records show. However, it is explained, the production is only 1.3 times that of the average of the 16,294 pure bred Holstein cows which have completed yearly records under supervision of the State agricultural colleges and admitted to the advanced register of the national breed association.

Cahokia is at the command of your switch

CAHOKIA Will Use Four Times as Much Water in a Day as the Entire City of St. Louis

THIS great volume of water—more than 400,000 gallons a minute, or 616,000,000 gallons in 24 hours—is used for the condensation of steam that drives Cahokia's giant turbines.

By condensation, the utilization of steam is improved. The steam is made to yield up its last ounce of energy to the task of driving a 70-ton mass of metal in the turbine at a speed of 1800 revolutions a minute, or 500 miles an hour.

In condensation, water is passed through one-inch pipes enclosed in a huge cylindrical drum—the condenser. There are 10,100 pipes in the condenser. Placed end to end they would stretch 38 miles.

Cahokia will have three times the year-round power of Muscle Shoals. It will burn 1,250,000 tons of coal a year, and burn it with greater efficiency than heretofore has been accomplished in this district.

Cahokia is the biggest thing in St. Louis.

DRUGS PEDDLED IN PUBLIC PLAYGROUND

Lumber Pile Used as Hiding Place by Two Men, Who Had Boys for Lookouts.

A lumber pile in the Richard Murphy public playground, Nineteenth street and Cass avenue, was the storage place for a supply of morphine and cocaine, which two men have peddled nightly to addicts. Four boys, one at each entrance of the playground, acted as lookouts to warn the narcotic sellers of the approach of policemen.

The lookouts' suspicions were not aroused by two men, in working garb, who entered the playground about 7:40 last evening. One of the men, in fact, was a frequenter of the place. He and his companion went to a bench in the middle of the playground, where two men were standing, and each gave one of the men $1.50.

When the money had been paid, one of the men went to the pile of lumber, and returned with two small packages, one of which he gave to each of the purchasers. The packages were found later to contain two grains of morphine each.

When the sale was completed, one of the purchasers placed the sellers under arest, and Federal narcotic agents and city detectives were summoned from outside the playground.

20 Packages in Lumber Pile.

They found in the lumber pile, under a loose board, 20 packages of morphine, wrapped for sale, and four packages of cocaine. One of the boy lookouts was questioned, and said the men had paid him 25 cents to stand outside and notify them of the approach of policemen.

It did not appear that children had been customers of the narcotic peddlers. They seem to have used the playground as a convenient place, where the presence of children might tend to screen their operations.

The men arrested were Frank Martin, 23 years old, of 2536 North Market street, and Peter Kennedy, 23, of 2015 Cass avenue. They were held for the Federal authorities.

COUZENS SAYS SURTAX AS URGED BY MELLON WOULD HAVE SAVED HIM $4,000,000

Challenging Secretary to Debate, Senator Denies Lowering Rates Would Attract Billions to Business Investments.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—Senator Couzens of Michigan has challenged Secretary Mellon of the Treasury to debate the merits of the administration's tax reduction scheme proposed by Mellon. Couzens, who has been Mayor of Detroit and a partner of Henry Ford, is the richest man in Congress, and acknowledges that he paid an income tax of more than $7,000,000 in 1920.

He offers the suggestion that rich men are attracted to tax-exempt securities more through a desire to evade business responsibilities and to insure the future income of their families, than to evade the taxes.

Suggests Joint Debate.

In his communication today, Senator Couzens said:

"I think the best way to settle this apparent difference of opinion between us is to perhaps debate the subject before an audience, where both of us will be required to rely upon our knowledge of the subject rather than rely upon statisticians who can make figures tell any kind of a story, or clever lawyers who can argue from any side.

We are both business men, so I think a joint debate would be a fair test of our knowledge of the subject and enable the people of the country to get at the truth. Therefore, in a perfectly friendly manner, I suggest that we engage some large hall, divide the expenses, and invite the public to hear the discussion.

"Several years ago I had many investments, which, on the basis of the money I put into the investments, returned me from 20 to 40 per cent, but on the basis of market value for those investments, returned only 8½ per cent. I, therefore, believe that your statement that the proper basis is the market value of securities is not well founded.

Fixing of Market Basis.

"The market basis is fixed because of the earning capacity of industry and has no weight with the original investor except when he wants to sell his securities.

'As a personal experience in this matter, I point out that during the 10 years the Federal Government has collected income taxes I paid into the Federal treasury, $8,223,679.21, nearly all of which has been surtax.

"In 1929, based on 1919 income, I paid 65 per cent surtax, or a total of $7,229,161.75, to the Federal treasury.

"Had the present law been in force, I would have saved nearly $2,000,000, and if your present proposal of a maximum of 25 per cent surtax had been a law, I would have saved nearly $4,000,000; so I do not see where the country gains by creating these enormous savings for those well able to pay.

"Deluge of Dividends."

"If your proposal is enacted into law, there will be a deluge of dividends out of industry to private individuals, many of whom undoubtedly have adopted the plan that you so well know about, namely, that of dividing estates among members of a family so as to reduce the high-bracket incomes and, of course, the percentage of surtax."

Couzens challenged Mellon's statement that billions of wealth are hidden away and stagnant in tax-exempt securities. He declared that the wealth invested in this class of securities represented only 8 per cent of the wealth in the American investment field, and he further asserted that it was all working because it was largely put into municipal enterprises and public improvements.

"You refer to the tax-exempt securities with great frequency," continued Senator Couzens, "and greatly overplay the effect they have on Government revenue. The entire amount of outstanding tax-exempt securities in relation to the total outstanding amount of corporate stocks and bonds of every kind is so small as to give the appearance to the whole discussion of a tempest in a teapot.

Quotes Treasury Figures.

"In this connection I might add that such men as the late Mr. Rockefeller, who are quite familiar, as you point out, with the possibilities of the best industrial stocks, invest largely in tax-exempt securities so very often not from any desire to escape taxes, but rather from a desire to escape business responsibilities and risks and to insure the future income to their families. This is my own experience, as I have largely invested my capital in state, county and municipal bonds, on which I really prepaid the taxes by taking a greatly reduced return from what I could have secured had I taken investments in new securities with the possibility of securing returns such as are made by original investors in most stocks, bank stocks and other more or less hazardous undertakings."

Couzens quoted figures from official Treasury reports to support his contentions in regard to these tax-exempt securities and then said:

"Judging from these evidences taken from publications of your own department, it would appear that the receivers of large incomes are not escaping any such large amount of taxes through ownership of tax-exempt securities as would make it desirable for the Government to lower surtaxes in order to secure more revenue for itself or to release capital for business investments."

Former Senator W. V. Allen Dies.

By the Associated Press.

NORFOLK, Neb., Jan. 12.—District Judge William V. Allen of Madison, former United States Senator from Nebraska, died early today in a Los Angeles hospital, an hour after he had undergone an operation for relief from cancer, according to a special dispatch to the Norfolk Daily News.

GREATER ST. LOUIS BODY INDORSES HUGH K. WAGNER

Vote of Thanks and Confidence Given [illegible] Who Has Been Under Criticism.

Members of the Greater St. Louis Conference at their recent annual meeting subscribed to a resolution which embodied a vote of thanks and confidence in Hugh K. Wagner, President of the organization, who has been under criticism from returning members of the Million Population Club of which he is also president, and from C. H. Heidbrink, a member of the conference's executive committee.

The resolution concludes: "We know of no one who is better fitted or qualified for the leadership of the conference, and trust he will consent to continue at its head."

A recent audit shows that Wagner has loaned the organization a total of $759.50.

Eleven members of the Population Club resigned Jan. 1 because, they said, Wagner was making it a one-man organization. Heidbrink followed their leadership and scored his management of the conference.

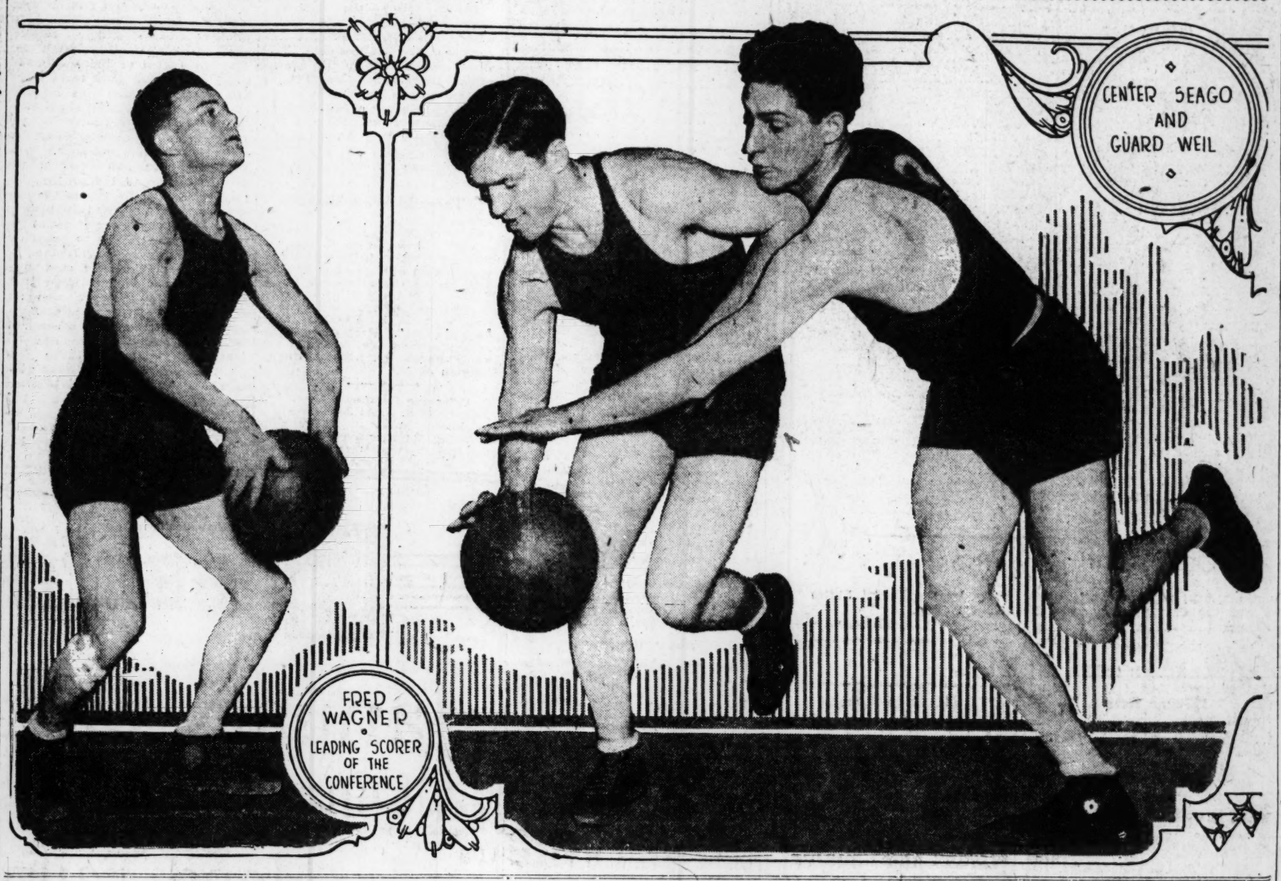
Washington Stars Who Played Prominent Part in Basketball Victory Over Missouri



Washington Comes From Behind to Win Fourth Valley Game

Victory Is First Over Tigers Since 1916—Captain Minner Stars for Coach White's Quintet.

The Washington University basketball team gained its fourth successive Missouri Valley Conference victory by defeating Missouri, 27 to 20, at Francis gymnasium last night. The victory was the fourth for the Pikers in the title struggle this season and the first over the Tigers since 1916. A capacity crowd of 2200 persons witnessed the contest. Many more were turned away.

Washington's victory was due mainly to the sensational playing of Capt. Minner and the ability to make long shots. Minner accounted for 15 of the Pikers' points as the result of seven field goals and one free throw. He was mixed up in practically every scoring play by the Pikers.

In the first half, at the end of which Missouri led, 13 to 12, the Pikers were baffled by the five-man defense of the Tigers. However, during the second half Coach White's quintet penetrated the Tiger defense at will. The Pikers' guarding was of high caliber throughout.

The Pikers, in defeating their Columbia rivals, again showed ability to come from behind. This has been the case in a majority of the contests for the local valley championship candidates this season.

Tigers Gain Early Lead.

The Tigers gained an early lead in the first half, and at one time were ahead, 7 to 0. However, the Pikers, after breaking through the five-man defense of the Columbia aggregation, were outplaying the visitors when the period ended.

After the two quintets had fought back and forth without a score in the first five minutes, Faurot put the Tigers in front by shooting a field basket. A bit later Wheat made good on a foul. Then Buchner came through with a field goal, which put the Tigers ahead, 5-0.

At this time, the Pikers took time out. Coach White's men were playing a fast game, but the passing was inaccurate. Neither could they penetrate the tight defense of the Tigers.

After play was resumed, Wheat shot the basket which gave the Columbia aggregation seven points, while the Pikers had failed to score.

Seago Scores for Pikers.

After the tip-off, Seago gave the Pikers the first points of the game, when he dropped in a short shot from under the basket. Lester's foul throw made the score 2—2. Then Minner came through with a field basket after a pass from Seago. Here Missouri took time out.

Seago made the score 3 to 6 when he scored on a pass from Minner. Buchner came back with a field goal for Missouri. Minner dropped in a backhand shot after a pass from Seago and then his basket from the center of the floor made the score 10-10. Missouri went ahead on Wheat's foul throw. A nice shot by Seago from the sidelines after taking Wagner's pass put the Pikers ahead for the first time. Wheat made good on a long shot and the Tigers again led, 12-12. Just as the whistle blew Wagner dropped in a basket, which did not count.

One of the features of the first half was the close guarding of Weil of the locals.

Tigers Increase Lead.

Buchner, who was one of the scoring aces for the Tigers, as well as a defensive star, put the Tigers ahead, 15—12, by shooting a field basket shortly after the second half opened. Then Minner counted for the Pikers. A bit later, Minner put the Pikers ahead with a field goal after a pass from Seago. This put the Washington five ahead. Faurot tied it by netting a foul throw.

Then Faurot, the Tiger captain, put his team in front with a field goal. Seago missed an easy shot from under the basket and the crowd groaned. Wheat's field goal put the Tigers ahead, 20 to 16. With 12 minutes to go, Hallauer was substituted for Weil at guard. Minner came through with a pretty field basket and then Seago tied it. A foul throw by Minner put the Pikers ahead, 21 to 20.

Minner Makes Long Goal.

Wagner counted his only field goal of the game following a pass from Minner. Wagner was taking Local Team Scores Its First Victory of Season, 35—27.

Concordia won its first basketball victory of the season last night, defeating the Indiana State Normal team, 35 to 27. The game was played at Holy Cross Hall before a capacity crowd.

The contest was a brilliant affair from the very start. Because of the fine defensive methods of both teams, shooting in the first half was for the most part confined to spectacular, long shots. In the second period, however, Concordia solved the defense of the visitors and with a series of short shots established a lead.

Buchheimer's shot from center and two short field baskets by Riedel gave Concordia its winning lead.

In a preliminary game, Holy Cross defeated St. Trinity, 28 to 5.

Concordia will oppose Central Teachers College of Warrensberg, Mo., at Holy Cross Hall next Saturday evening.

Cleveland Wins Its Opening League Match From McKinley; Soldan Noses Out Yeatman

Five-Man Defense Prevents McKinley From Scoring Field Basket Until Fourth Quarter, but Game Is Hard Fought —Yeatman Loses on Fouls.

Cleveland High School basketball team made an auspicious and promising debut in the Interscholastic League last night by defeating McKinley, 18 to 10. A well-conceived five-man defense thwarted the McKinley attack so completely that not until the fourth quarter was the Crimson team able to score its first field basket.

In the second game of the double-header, Soldan defeated Yeatman in a nip-and-tuck affair, 18 to 16.

McKinley's ability to make good on free throws from the foul line kept the score even in the early stages of the game. Cleveland opened with two field baskets by McMillan and McKinley kept in the running with a foul goal. At the end of the first half the score was 10 to 3 in Cleveland's favor.

The only score of the third period was a foul shot for McKinley, bringing the score to 10 to 4. Opening the final period McKinley fought tenaciously and brought the count up to 12 to 9, within striking distance of Cleveland, but Bates, substituting for McMillan, scored two field baskets for the leaders and practically clinched the outcome.

McKinley's defense, while not so well balanced and co-ordinate as that of Cleveland, was desperate and efficient. The McKinley team had eight opportunities to score from the foul lines and made good on six. Cleveland, on the other hand, missed all of its three chances from the foul mark.

Soldan Wins on Fouls.

Yeatman's inclination to commit fouls provided Soldan with an opportunity to win the second game.

Yeatman outscored its rival in field baskets, 7 to 6, but Soldan scored 7 out of 9 tries at free throws whereas Yeatman registered points on only two free throws out of five attempts.

The game was a spirited struggle from the start. Soldan held a slight lead at 4 to 1 at the end of the first quarter and was still showing the way at 9 to 6 at the end of the half. Yeatman, however, tied at 6—6 and came back in the third quarter to knot the score at 10—10, a field basket by Engler and a long shot by Hannibal providing the points.

Yeatman Leads at 16—15.

Lawrence of Soldan put his team in front when he scored two shots from the foul line and came right back with a field basket. Engler scored two points for Yeatman and then the fourth quarter opened.

Play became rough and the game quite exciting. Yeatman took the lead at 16—15 when Winkelman and Engler each scored from the field, but Ritter gave Soldan a one-point advantage with a field basket and Rawden clinched victory with a foul goal.

PIKER PLAYERS WHO BEAT TIGER ELEVEN GIVEN GOLD FOOTBALLS

One of the features of the Washington-Missouri basketball game last night was the presentation, between halves, of souvenir gold footballs to the 13 men who played on the Piker football team which defeated Missouri last November by a 13-7 score. It will be remembered that the Piker victory that day proved to be one of the greatest upsets of the season.

The miniature footballs were inscribed with the player's name and the score of the game. The athletes who received them were: Capt. "Bud" Cantwell, Capt.-elect Ralph Walsh, Sammy Floun, Martin Lyle, Sid Weber, Oscar Claypool, Jerry Hutton, Paul Weil, Joe Hersch, Charley Levy, Clarence Albin, Neupert and Herbert Kurrus.

The footballs were the gift of the Piker Wrecking Crew, an undergraduate cheering organization.

Boston Obtains O'Neill, Veach, Wamby, 2 Others

Quinn Lets Burns, Fewster and Catcher Go to Indians, Buys Veach.

By the Associated Press.

BOSTON, Jan. 12.—President Robert Quinn of the Boston American League club tonight confirmed reports of two deals which he said would "materially strengthen" the Red Sox behind the bat, in the infield and in the outfield. To the Boston club will come Bobby Veach, outfielder, from the Detroit club, and Catcher Steve O'Neill, Second Baseman William Wambsganss, Pitcher Boone and Outfielder Connolly. George Burnes, first baseman, Wilson (Chick) Fewster, second baseman, and Al Walters, catchers, go from the Boston club for Cleveland.

President Quinn in his announcement said that the acquisition of Veach was through an outright cash deal with the Tigers, but the amount of money involved was not made public. The Cleveland trade, he asserted, was a trade with no cash figuring in it, merely an exchange of three Red Sox players for four from Cleveland. The president in his announcement, said:

"I feel that in making these two deals we have strengthened the Red Sox materially behind the bat, in the infield and in the outfield. I regard O'Neill as a valuable catcher inasmuch as he is acquainted with all the batters, and he will be very helpful to the Boston pitchers. I believe that in acquiring Wambsganss, the club is getting a second baseman who will fill a gap in the infield, and who will be a considerable help in the development of Dudley Lee, the young shortstop recently purchased from the Tulsa club of the Western League. I have always regarded Veach as a consistent player, both at bat and in the field."

"A Dirty Deal," Says Veach, Refusing to Join the Red Sox

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, Mich., Jan. 12.

BOBBY VEACH, veteran Detroit American outfielder, announced tonight that he would not report to the Boston American club. The sale of Veach was announced by President Frank J. Navin of the local club late today.

Veach asserted he had been given "a rotten deal" by the local club and that he did not intend to play for the Red Sox.

TRADE TO RED SOX PLEASES WAMBY AND O'NEILL OF INDIANS

By the Associated Press.

CLEVELAND, O., Jan. 12.—E. S. Barnard, president of the Cleveland American League club, tonight confirmed the details of the trade between the Boston and Cleveland American League teams.

When told of the trade tonight, Second Baseman Wambsganss and Catcher O'Neill declared they were satisfied with the trade and would report to Boston.

"Baseball is a business of the owners and players," said Wamby, the hero of an unassisted triple play in a world's series game here, "and I will go wherever my job calls me. I have worked under Manager Lee Fohl here and am satisfied to go to Boston."

"I am satisfied," O'Neill said, expressing pleasure at being on Manager Fohl's team if he had to leave Cleveland.

Outfielder Joe Connolly is in San Francisco and Pitcher Dan Boone at Samantha, Ala.

Triumph Victor In Feature Race At New Orleans

Sedgefield Finishes Second and Barracuda Third in Dade Memorial Race.

PARKE RIDES WINNER

Judges' Decision in Second Race Meets Disapproval of Crowd.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW ORLEANS, La., Jan. 12.—Before the fourth race at the Fair Grounds this afternoon, the bugler mounted the result board behind the steward's stand, and blew taps. He did so out of respect to the memory of A. B. Barrett Dade, who died here about a year ago. Dade had acted as a starter here for many years. Then they ran the Dade Memorial Handicap.

Triumph won, a dash at a mile. Sedgefield finished second and Barracudo third. It was Parke's third winner in four races. Amole aroused high hopes for the Southland stable by dashing to the front upon just such a heavy and drying track as that over which he gained a reputation by winning the Louisiana Derby last Spring.

Beginning the far turn, Parke called upon Mose Goldblatt's colt. He ran over horses as if they were tied in satisfying the whim of his rider. Into the stretch he came by himself. At the end, however, he was looking for holes in the fence.

Parke's Ability Helps.

Only Parke's ability to make a horse go farther than his physical inclination clinched the purse. Wallace turned Sedgefield's head loose when he put the horse to a drive and allowed him to swerve to the inside. At the end, he was not gaining upon Parke, although a sixteenth from the finish, it seemed that he certainly would overcome the winner.

Three-year-olds, fillies, had the third to themselves. Rinkey of the Green Tree stable, was much the best of the nine that assembled for the five and a half furlongs. Devil Girl making her initial start here finished second to the Daughter of Pennant. Mah Jong, also starting for the first time this winter, was third.

Parke received Rinkey behind the pace to the head of the stretch and then asked her to draw away She did, convincingly. Devil Girl finished full or run.

Crowd Yells Disapproval.

Bamra and Antonio reached the end of the next six furlongs noses apart, Antonio going fastest at the time. Up went the number of Bamra and the crowd yelled its disapproval. Antonio was favorite. Guv'nor made the pace, but stopped to third. Danny Jopes piloted the winner. In seventh place came Bye Bye, winner of the first two-year-old race here a year ago. At that time Bamra and Bye Bye were wont to enliven proceedings by such finishes as that between Bamra and Antonio today.

After setting the pace from the six-furlong gate to the head of the stretch in the first race, Care Free began to tire, and bored toward the outside. Parke, on Kingsclere, quickly sensing the direction of his rival, shifted his own course to the inside and got the Ray Scherrer colt up by hard urging to win by a length and a half. Attilla was third.

Olynthus Outlasts Tony Beau.

William Daniel's Olynthus, with Marinelli in the saddle, had more stamina than Tony Beau in a long drive that featured the fifth race. Dust About gathered what this pair left.

Lee got the good mount in the sixth. W. V. Casey owns the animal, which answers to the name of Scare Crow. Superbum and Ettah E. were lapped on the winner at the finish. Superbum closed rapidly.

Royal Duck, running back to the good race he showed on his first outing, stood off Royal Crown in the final.

The absence of Jockey George Babin, local rider, from the saddle was explained as due to the fact that the boy had experienced some trouble in making weight because of the recent cold spell.

PIKERS WIN FOURTH VALLEY GAME, BEATING MISSOURI U., 27-20

many long shots at the basket, but was unfortunate in that they were just rimming the basket. Minner then netted the longest field goal of the game, dropping one in from three-fourths the length of the field. With a 25—20 lead, the Pikers started delaying the game, but with an opening, a pass from Seago to Cox enabled the Pikers to count their final points.

At this point, Missouri made two substitutions, sending Thompson and Fordyce to the guards. However in the last few minutes, the Tigers had only one shot at the basket.

Washington's next game will be against Iowa State at Francis gymnasium next Saturday.

FIFTH CAVALRY FOUR WINS POLO CONTEST

By the Associated Press.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., Jan. 12.—The Fifth Cavalry had little trouble in downing the Fourth Cavalry for the championship of the low goal event in the midwinter polo tournament Saturday, 11 to 1. The winners were given a two-goal lead which was not needed. The Fourth team did not put up its usual game and the losing team was in position to score only a few times during the entire game. Daniels, crack number 4 player for the winners, came through with smashing drives on all occasions except one and kept the Fourth Cavalry on the defensive most of the game.

The final game of the high goal handicap is set for Sunday with both the second division and San Antonio teams ready to battle for the title. The local team will have an eight-goal start on the army men by way of handicap. This game promises to be one of the best held thus far in the tournament.

JOSEPH SMITH MADE EXCELLENT RECORD DURING 1923 SEASON

JOSEPH SMITH, St. Louis boy tennis player, who has been placed No. 10 in the national ranking, made an excellent record during the 1923 season. He won the singles title in the St. Louis District boys' championship early in the summer from a field of 32 players.

Following the district event Smith competed in the national clay court tournament for boys, held in Indianapolis, reaching the semifinal round. He was defeated by Donald Strachan, a protege of William T. Tilden. The score was 7—5, 6—1.

Smith captured the Indiana State boys' singles title and with George Holloway of Chicago won the doubles title. In the local tournament for high school players held last October Smith won the singles honors as a member of the Soldan High tennis team. He will be 16 years old next August and therefore graduates into the junior tennis class.

Billiken Basket Team Wins From Drury, 24 to 18

Kapl and Stanton Star for St. Louis U. in Game at Springfield.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., Jan. 12.—In a game featured with tight defensive work, St. Louis University defeated the Drury College Panthers here tonight by a score of 24 to 18.

The game was fast and interesting from start to finish. Kapl, St. Louis center, was star of the game. He was also high point man with 10 tallies to his credit. St. Louis had fairly good team work, but at times it was of a hit-and-miss variety. The Billikens showed flashes of perfect control of the ball, working it up and down the court in a brilliant manner.

St. Louis worked better in the first half than in the second, but their defense tightened in the second stanza. W. Bradburn injured his ankle in the latter stages of the game and was forced to leave the court. Eggler took his place at forward. Coach Savage gave three substitutes a chance to show their wares, but their work was not equal to that of the regulars.

Stanton at guard was a tower of strength on both offense and defense. He collected three field goals and broke up one play after another. The Bradburn brothers did not get their team work into execution for long at a time, but occasionally they would work with clock-like precision. St. Louis had a much stronger defense than offense. Both teams fumbled ball considerably throughout game.

A total of 19 personal fouls committed, 11 by the visitors and 8 by Drury. Davis, Drury center, was yanked from the game on fouls. He was replaced by Kerr, star tackle on the Panther football eleven.

Capt. Decker starred for Drury with his allround work. Drury and St. Louis will play a return game in St. Louis on Feb. 12.

Wills Offered $300,000 for 2 Bouts by Rickard

Promoter Wants Negro for Contests With Firpo and Dempsey Next Summer.

MANAGER MULLINS BALKS

Asserts "Big Black" Is Entitled to Match With Champion Without Preliminary.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 12.—Harry Wills, New Orleans negro heavyweight, has been made an offer of $300,000 by Tex Rickard for fights next summer with Luis Angel Firpo and Jack Dempsey.

The promoter made this announcement tonight, adding at the same time that conferences through an intermediary, with Wills and the negro's manager, Paddy Mullins, so far had failed to effect an agreement.

Wills, according to Rickard, declared his willingness to accept the offer, confident that he can dispose of Firpo and earn a match with the champion for which he has been seeking two years in vain. Mullins, however, has balked at any proposition calling for an elimination test, insisting that Wills is entitled to meet Dempsey without further preliminaries. Rickard's refusal to agree to this has produced a deadlock which, it is believed, may keep Wills in the background of the 1924 heavyweight program as he was in 1922 and 1923.

Another Club in Field.

Rickard's offer calls for a guarantee of $100,000 to Wills for a fight with Firpo around July 4 and, if the negro wins, a $200,000 guarantee for a title fight with Dempsey in September; both bouts would be held in the Metropolitan district. It also was understood that Rickard desired to match Wills with George Godfrey, Philadelphia negro, for a preliminary bout.

Another bidder for a Wills-Firpo or Wills-Gibbons bout entered the field tonight when the National Sportsmen's Club of Newark, N. J., announced it was prepared to stage either contest on May 1 and offer a guarantee of $100,000 to either Firpo or Gibbons, thus matching Rickard's proposition.

After a conference with representatives of the Newark club, Mullins tentatively agreed to the offer on behalf of Wills, who will receive a substantial percentage of the gate, but it was believed the New Jersey promoters would encounter difficulty in signing either Gibbons or Firpo, both of whom have agreements for fights with Rickard. Gibbons already has consented to a match with Dempsey here early in June, while Firpo last year signed to box Wills, either in this country or in the Argentine.

Mullins Demands More.

Mullins was quoted tonight as demanding $500,000 for Wills to fight Dempsey and from $250,000 to $300,000 to meet Firpo under Rickard's management, in addition to a share in the motion picture and other rights. The negro's manager said the Newark promoters have a man in Buenos Aires seeking an agreement with Firpo and if the South American and Wills meet in Newark, the latter will sign a contract for a percentage purse.

Three Goals Have Been Scored Against St. Louisans in Four Games While Only Once Has a Ball Been Banged Into the Pennsylvanians' Net—Contest to Be at High School Field.

If past records mean anything, then the fifth round U. S. F. A. challenge cup game between the Vespers of the St. Louis Soccer League and Harmarville (Pa.) at High School Field today, should be one of the best of the season. The game is scheduled to start at 2:15 o'clock.

Both teams in title struggles this year have shown tight defenses. The Vespers have battled four times, and in three of the clashes they were returned victors by the margin of a single goal. In only one tilt, that with the Ben Millers of the Municipal League, did McCarthy's men have it easy. That game was won, 3 to 0, all the goals coming in the second half.

In the four contests their opponents have counted only three goals against the Vespers. Two of these were credited to the Scullins, eliminated by a 3 goals to 2 score in the fourth round. The Hoovers, another St. Louis League eleven, counted the other point.

However, the Harmarville aggregation, a new contender for the national championship in soccer circles and made up principally of amateurs, has shown an even tighter defense. The Harmarville aggregation has been scored upon only once in cup games. The strength of the Pennsylvania eleven's opponents in those games, however, is unknown.

A Line on the Rivals.

But still there is one line by which the strength of the rival aggregations can be measured. That is on a line through the Jeanette game. Jeanette was defeated by Harmarville, 3 goals to 1. Last season Jeanette was eliminated in one of the Western semifinals, 1 to 0, by Arden. Then in the Western final, Arden fought the Scullins to a standstill, being defeated, 2 goals to 1.

The cup records of the two rivals follow:

Stars From Arden Team.

Stars of last season's Arden eleven form the backbone of the Harmarville team. In goal, the team will have Robert Boyle, who has played sensationally here on several occasions. Boyle's play in games here was of such high caliber that an effort was made to bring him here. Bethlehem and other Eastern clubs also put in a bid for his services. But Boyle refused and is still registered as an amateur with the U. S. F. A.

Other members of the team who were here last year with Arden in the clash with the Scullins are Thomas Evans, Joseph Fegan, Andrew Brady and William O'Donnell. Only two of the 13 eligibles of the team are registered with the national association as professionals.

Expecting a hard game, Manager McCarthy of the Vespers has had his players out for practice several nights this week and reports all in good condition. He will send his strongest lineup against the Harmarville team. This means that Yatz Corrigan will be used at center forward. Corrigan is a better goal getter than Harris.

J. B. Stark of Detroit has been selected to referee the game by officials of the challenge cup competition. Stark is well known here, having handled several other fixtures in fine style. Thomas W. Cahill, national secretary, will act as field delegate at the contest.

U. S. WILL REPLACE SKI JUMPERS WHOSE STATUS IS QUESTIONED

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 12. — America will be represented by a ski jumping team in the Olympic winter sports at Chamonix, beginning the last of this month, it was announced today after Olympic authorities had received cabled permission from the French Olympic committee to submit entries up to Jan. 15 to replace the three members of the team whose eligibility has been questioned.

The upset in plans for the skiing team, due to sail next Wednesday for France, came unexpectedly and as a result of intimations that three of the athletes—Anders Haugen and Hans Hansen of Minneapolis and Ragnar Omtvedt of Grand Beach, Mich., might have their eligibility questioned because of alleged competition in professional events. No official complaint was filed, according to F. W. Rubien, secretary of the Olympic committee, but it was felt that substitutes should be named to obviate possible difficulties abroad.

Haugen, however, intends to accompany the team, despite the uncertainty of his status, and Omtvedt, it was said, also may go. Hansen will not go abroad.

Variance in eligibility standards prescribed by the National Ski Association, which selects the American team, and the Olympic committee, is held to be responsible for the present situation. Haugen is the present national ski jumping champion.

Centenary Eleven To Play Billikens Here Next Fall

Bo McMillin's Team to Oppose Locals in Thanksgiving Day Contest.

Centenary College of Shreveport, La., coached by "Bo" McMillin, former Centre College and All-American football star, will be the opponent for the St. Louis University eleven next Thanksgiving day. This announcement was made yesterday by the Athletic Board of the Blue and White institution.

The scheduling of the contest with Centenary leaves but one open date on the Billiken schedule. This is Oct. 18, and Marquette has invited the Blue and White to come to Milwaukee for a game on that day, while another invitation has come from Loyola of Chicago. Several minor schools have also applied for the date, and it is probable one of these will be accepted, as it comes a week after the clash with the Army at West Point.

Centenary, the latest addition to the Billiken schedule, last season defeated all Southern rivals by top-heavy scores, but lost to Boston College in an intersectional contest at Boston, 13 to 0. Among the elevens defeated were Texas Christian, Chattanooga, Kentucky State, Georgetown of Kentucky and Oglethorpe.

The Billikens' 1924 football schedule now contains games with Springfield, Normal, West Point, Rolla, St. Xavier, Michigan Aggies, Oglethorpe and Centenary. These games should fully test the strength of Dan Savage's aggregation.

More Basketball Games.

The Blue and White board also announced that several more basketball contests have been arranged and that the schedule to date is: Jan. 17, Rolla at Rolla; Jan. 19, Rockhurst at Kansas City; Jan. 22, McKendree at Lebanon; Feb. 1, Central Normal of Indiana at St. Louis; Feb. 2, Rolla at St. Louis; Feb. 6, McKendree at St. Louis; Feb. 13, Drury at St Louis; Feb. 16, Concordia at St. Louis; Feb. 23, Rockhurst at St. Louis; March 6, Illinois College at St. Louis.

Sarazen Tells How to Play Iron Shots and How to Avoid Slicing

Professional Champion Advises Standing Close to the Ball and Playing It Off the Right Foot—Overswinging Also Is Fault Easily Acquired With Iron Clubs.

By Gene Sarazen,
American Professional Champion.

As you probably know, the mid-iron shot, or any shot for that matter, is a direct hit whereas the drive is more of a sweep. I am writing now for the benefit of those golfers who can play a fairly good game of golf but who are, nevertheless, prone to certain faults of which they may or may not be aware.

If you are having trouble in hitting a midiron shot as firmly as the first-class player, or as crisply as you would like to, or if you are not getting the distance you think you should, look to your backswing. Doubtless you are overswinging—a very common fault. You can't get good results with an iron by swinging the club clear around your neck.

With a midiron, the hands in the back-swing should not be raised much higher than the waist. The moment you bring them up to, or beyond, the shoulder, you are courting trouble. A long backswing prevents you from keeping the stroke compact, and accordingly you lose power. Practice hiting your iron shots with as short a back-swing as possible, with the elbows held into the body closely. Aim for compactness and direction, and power will take care of itself.

Hold the Club Firmly.

Power in any shot is derived mainly through the use of a straight left arm. As you are not likely to keep your left arm straight when you over-swing, power will be lost. On the back-swing take the club back as far as a straight left arm will permit, or until you feel a strain, and then start the down-swing.

If you find your iron shots are getting away from you—in other words, if the ball is sliding off the face of the club and skidding to the right—bring the right hand over on the shaft of the club more and hold firmly with the index of the right forefinger and the thumb. With the wood the left arm does most of the work, but in an iron play the right hand plays a part quite as important as that of the left.

A fault that many golfers I have watched make in playing an iron shot is that of loosening the grip on the club with the left hand. In driving it is possible to hold the club rather loosely until you start your down-swing. But with an iron you must retain a very firm grip on the club from the start to the finish of the swing.

If you hold the club firmly, you will find that the left wrist will slide underneath as it should on the back-swing. On the other hand, if you do not keep a firm grip with the left hand, the club will get away from you and there will be no firmness to your shot.

Of course, hurrying the back-swing is a fault indulged in by far too many golfers. If the majority of linksmen would shorten their swings and slow down the strike considerably, I believe that half of the faults would be eliminated then and there.

If you are not subject to any of the mistakes outlined above, perhaps you are standing too far away from the ball when you address your shot. You should never reach for the ball, but should stand well over the shot. Otherwise you will be inclined to slice.

When playing an iron I advise my pupils to use the square stance and to play the ball more off the right foot. As stated, the drive is more of a sweep than a direct hit and in order to get all the speed possible into the stroke it is better to play the ball more off the left foot. But with an iron the stroke is more of a direct hit so it is better to play the ball more off the right foot.

One thing more. Don't be in a hurry to finish your swing after the ball has been struck. Stay down to the ball, as we say, and try to come to an upright position gradually, after you have met the ball. Just before the impact of club-head and ball, the right knee should be thrown forward toward the ball and the wrists snapped into the shot much as you might snap a whip. This action should be rhythmical and smooth, however, and the wrists, the knee and the body should act in unison. Practice swinging the club in this manner until you do it naturally and without effort.

John Manion Shoots Nine Holes at Sunset Club in 29 Strokes

ONE of the best nine-hole golf scores ever made in the St. Louis district and certainly the best ever turned in on temporary greens, was made by John Manion, Sunset Hill professional, over the first nine holes of the Sunset course this week.

Manion, playing with S. W. Morten, stroked the nine holes in 29, two over three's. John was over three on three holes, taking four on the first, third and seventh holes. However, he clipped in a two on No. 4 and had three's on all other holes.

Although the holes are shortened a bit by the use of the temporary greens, the difficulty of putting on the temporary surfaces usually more than takes away the advantage gained by the shortening of the holes. Morten shot a 40, but was nine down at the turn in the face of Manion's remarkable shooting.

Manion and Art Longworth, Country Club, probably will compete in the Texas Open at San Antonio next month.

"Prima Donna Amateur," California Legion Men Call Charles Paddock

By the Associated Press.
SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Jan. 12.

PARK-PRESIDIO POST, No. 276, of the American Legion, last night adopted a resolution condemning the "prima donna amateurism" of Charlie Paddock, star sprinter, and praising the Amateur Athletic Union for its stand in the controversy with Paddock.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Jan. 12.—Loren Murchison, America's champion sprinter, showed that his recent injury did not impair his great speed, by winning the 70-yard Metropolitan championship from a formidable field at the Osceola Club indoor meet at the Seventh Regiment Armory tonight. Murchison, breaking with his usual quickness, ran the final heat in the fast time of 7 2-5 seconds.

Murchison was cheered when he came on the floor to compete in his heat. After the automobile accident in which he injured his back it was reported that the St. Louis boy would not race again and that he would be lost to America for the Olympic games. But Murchison dispelled the rumor by his running tonight and he will be one of America's great athletic army to invade Paris next summer.

Jackson Scholz of the N. Y. A. C. and L. Rawlings, competing unattached, were among the starters in the final heat. Murchison quickly shot to the front and sped on with all the speed that he possessed in his slender pair of legs. As he threw himself against the tape he was a full yard in front of Scholz. The N. Y. A. C. runner won second place by a scant margin from Rawlings.

Murchison declared after the race that he was in good condition and that he could have continued on to 100 yards without any trouble. The champion will compete in a number of indoor meets this winter and in the indoor championships.

NEW TRAINING METHOD RESPONSIBLE FOR GOOD SHOWING BY FULTON

By the Associated Press.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Jan. 12.—New training methods, which involve letting his sparring partners wallop him, is responsible for the improved showing of Fred Fulton, heavyweight of Rochester, Minn., according to Jack Reddy, the plasterer's new manager.

Reddy claimed today that Fulton is under orders to let his boxing mates in the gymnasium swing with unrestrained vigor without trying to do all the landing himself. The efficacy of this method was demonstrated last night, according to Reddy, when Fulton knocked out "Tiny" Jim Herman of Omaha, in the second round after himself being knocked down at the end of the first round.

"Fulton," said Reddy, "wants to do all the fighting and after stopping a few hard jolts has been ready to quit.

"Herman's knockdown punch last night showed that Fred can take 'em, for he bounded to his feet like a bantamweight. Usually he has been willing to stay down after taking a few stiff ones. We expect to continue the present method of training and look for continued improvement."

By the Associated Press.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Jan. 12.—An estate of $2450, of which $2250 is in real estate, was left to his widow by Billy Miske, St. Paul pugilist, who died New Year's day, according to the will filed for probate today.

Plans for the Miske testimonial boxing program here next Tuesday neared completion today. Word was received that Harry Heilmann of the Detroit baseball club and champion batsman of the American League, would be here to attend the card. He is said to have asked Babe Ruth, Yankee home run slugger, to come, too.

Several prominent boxers, including Tommy Gibbons, St. Paul heavyweight, and Mickey Walker, world's welterweight champion, are among the stars to appear on the program, the proceeds of which will go to Mrs. Miske and her three children.

Is Huggins Trying to Build Up Cincinnati to Beat John McGraw? Evidence Is All Circumstantial

Yankee Manager's Friendship for Mike Kelly, Garry Herrmann and the Sending of Carl Mays, Jakie May, Hargrave, Benton, Sheehan, Bohne and Daubert to Redland May Be Significant.

By J. Roy Stockton.

Has Miller Huggins had anything to do with the building up of the Cincinnati ball club to the point where it is conceded a fine chance to break the Giants' string of championship victories? Has the manager of the Yankees taken that way of avenging the insults heaped upon his head by the McGraw camp when Huggins was signed to lead the Ruppert-Houston baseball club?

It is common knowledge that McGraw was quoted at that time to the effect that the signing of Huggins was pleasing to the National League forces in New York; that here was just the kind of a rival to be welcomed—one who never would threaten the supremacy in New York of John McGraw and the Giants. Rivalry between the Giants and Yankees is bitter in New York. It has been a constant battle for supremacy. That's why the Yankees bought Ruth. That's why McGraw bought Bancroft and Meusel. That fight for popular favor caused the expenditure of great sums, even when the teams had sufficient power to carry off league honors.

Does Hug Advise Garry?

And now Cincinnati, the home of Huggins, has a team which is expected to give McGraw a battle. Garry Herrmann, owner of the Reds, is a close friend of Huggins. Baseball men will tell you that Herrmann never makes a trade without consulting Huggins. And in addition to the whisperings of baseball men, there is much evidence, all of it circumstantial, to indicate that Huggins may have had a large part in diverting baseball players to the Cincinnati club.

It will be remembered that Huggins and Mike Kelly, former St. Paul manager, always have worked together. When Huggins was in St. Louis and Kelly in St. Paul exchanges between the clubs were frequent. Griner, Riggert, Dressen—hordes of St. Paul players came to the Cardinals and went back to St. Paul.

Then when Huggins went to New York, St. Paul began sending its players there. Kelly and Huggins still were doing business. Elmer Miller was shifted back and forth so frequently that finally he jumped in disgust.

Huggins also is known to have the inside track with the Vernon club of the Pacific Coast League. Vernon draws heavily from St. Paul and also from the Yankees. That triangular trading condition is familiar to baseball men. It is taken for granted that Huggins gets first call when a man is good enough for the majors and that if there are shifts to the association Mike Kelly is the favored man.

Brooklyn Blocked Fournier Deal.

When Jakie May of Vernon was considered ripe for the majors Huggins had first call. Vernon, however, had its heart set on getting Jack Fournier in the deal. Waivers had been asked on Fournier and Vernon told Huggins that if Fournier could be landed for Vernon Jakie May would start for New York. All other National League clubs waived on Fournier, but Ebbets of Brooklyn held him up. It is understood that Huggins paid a personal visit to Ebbets and tried to steer him away from Fournier, but was unsuccessful. Therefore Jakie May stayed at Vernon.

Meantime Huggins built up his pitching staff until May no longer was needed. Then what happened to Jakie May? He was bought by the Cincinnati Reds, by Garry Herrmann, personal friend of Huggins, on Huggins' advice, it is said.

Other circumstantial evidence is found in what has happened to St. Paul players who are not needed by Huggins.

Huggins sent Pitcher Sheehan to St. Paul and St. Paul sent him to Cincinnati.

St. Paul sent Rube Benton to Cincinnati.

St. Paul sent Catcher Hargrave to Cincinnati.

Miller Huggins sent Carl Mays directly to Cincinnati.

Yanks "Found" Jakie May.

Going back to the Jakie May case it will be remembered that Huggins was with the Cardinals when Jakie was purchased from Beaumont by Bob Connery, Huggins' scout. Thus an original find of Huggins is now brought back by his friend Garry Herrmann.

Sam Bohne, now with Cincinnati, was with the Cardinals when Huggins was manager. Huggins sent Bohne to Mike Kelly. Kelly sent him to the coast. Then Garry Herrmann, Huggins' friend, brought Bohne back to the majors for Cincinnati.

It is said that Herrmann was acting on Huggins' advice when the deal was engineered sending Jake Daubert to the Reds.

It is possible that Huggins may have had a word to say to prevent the consummation of a deal which was to send Jeff Pfeffer of the Cardinals to Cincinnati. Huggins once stated certain reasons for not considering Pfeffer a man to be desired. Recently Herrmann was red hot in a deal for Pfeffer, but asked for a day or so "to think it over." Then he cooled off and in explaining his change of mind outlined the same reasons which had been advanced by Huggins in his efforts to dicker for Pfeffer. That, too, is merely circumstantial evidence.

A FRIEND OF THE REDS

An angle of the bitter inter-club fight in New York was brought to light by the recent Carl Mays deal. The Yankees asked for waivers and the Philadelphia Nationals claimed the submarine pitcher. Now the Phillies could not afford to pay any man $16,000 a year and that is approximately what Mays' contract calls for. What, therefore, did the Phils want with Mays' contract?

Hug Blocks McGraw's Plan.

It has been pointed out that McGraw expressed a willingness to give Mays a trial. There have been many deals between McGraw and the Phillies. You can have just one guess where Mays would have landed eventually if Huggins had permitted Carl Mays, $16,000 salary man, to go to the Phillies for the waiver price.

This McGraw-Huggins rivalry is a fine thing for Cincinnati—if the circumstantial evidence means anything.

Cincinnati now has a fine looking squad. If there are no accidents, the Reds have a fine chance to best out the Giants. And would Huggins weep many tears if the Giants were beat out of their annual share in world series honors? Huggins' reputation as a person who never forgets a sneer, is said by baseball men to add weight to the deduction that may be made from the chain of circumstantial evidence.

Oklahoma Easily Defeats Drake

Sooners' New Combination Crushes Bulldog Defense for 44—28 Victory.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NORMAN, Ok., Jan. 12.—Coach McDermott's new combination of Sooners stepped a brilliant pace tonight and defeated the visiting Drake basketball squad, 44 to 28..

Oklahoma's new five got away with almost perfect teamwork from the start and registered goal after goal during the first period, which ended 28 to 11 in Oklahoma's favor. It was not until the second period, after Coach McDermott began to break up his new quintet, that the Bulldogs were able to penetrate the Sooner defense successfully. This change of lineup in the second period and the immediate let-down of the consistent Sooner scoring and Drake's revival indicates that the Sooners' first string is now found.

Floyd McBride, sophomore forward, continued to prove the best of the Sooners with his eight goals from the field, although Fred Wallace, forward, who was shifted to guard, closely pressed McBride for honors with seven field goals. Carpenter of the visitors was their high point man with four field goals and a free toss.

U. S. G. A. After Player-Writers

Officials Plan Similar Step to That of Olympic and Tennis Bodies.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 12.—Golf player-writers may be the next class of amateur competitors to encounter official disapproval and possible disbarment for their publicity activities.

Closely following tennis and American Olympic authorities in proposing declaring player-writers ineligible for competition under their jurisdiction, it was learned today the United States Golf Association may take a similar step.

The U. S. G. A. already has a rule under which a player may be suspended from amateur championship competition if newspaper or magazine articles appearing under his name are not written by himself. This permits players to contribute their own material without loss of amateur standing. However, there is known to be a feeling among many members of the association that this barrier should be made more drastic and, although an official said today there is no definite proposal now at hand, the organization is watching the situation closely with a view to possible action in the near future.

Chick Evans, of Chicago, and Francis Ouimet of Boston, former amateur and open champions, are two of the most prominent amateurs now engaged in writing for newspapers or syndicates.

Max Marston, of Philadelphia, present national amateur titleholder, and Bobby Jones, of Harvard and Atlanta, the open champion, both are understood to have refused tempting offers to write syndicated articles after their victories last year. Previous to capturing his title at Chicago, however, Marston is said to have written for magazines.

U. S. G. A. TO CONDUCT TESTS OF GOLF BALLS

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 12.—Tests which may determine possible changes in specifications of the standard golf ball will be conducted by the United States Golf Association at the Jekyl Island Country Club, situated off the Georgia coast, it was announced today.

A party of players, headed by Howard F. Whitney, chairman of the rules committee, and Cornelius S. Lee, secretary of the U. S. G. A., expects to leave next Wednesday for the resort. A score of varieties of balls, including several of English make, will be tested as to length of flight, roll and general serviceability.

The association, at its recent annual meeting here, went on record as opposed to any fundamental changes in the game, but the question of ball specifications, which now fix the maximum weight at 1.62 ounces and maximum diameter at 1.62 inches, was left in the hands of a committee. The development of livelier balls has been an issue faced for some time by the U. S. G. A.

33 VIRGINIA PARK LOTS SOLD TO BUILDER

The Paul Jones Realty Co. announces the sale of 33 building lots in Virginia Park to L. W. Gerling, a builder and real estate operator with offices in Wellston. The price was not disclosed.

Gerling plans to build five-room brick bungalows on 40-foot lots, a type of which he has built and sold 68 in the past 12 months on Kienlen avenue and in that vicinity. This kind of bungalow is in demand and the decision to transfer his operations to Virginia Park is due to the fact that this is a choice location which will mean higher prices for the same construction Gerling will break ground soon.

This is taken as a forerunner of an extensive building program which will completely develop this tract, as a number of other building plans are awaiting early Spring.

The property, which is partially built up and improved, lies directly across from the Glen Echo Country Club on Lucas and Hunt road, about three blocks south of Natural Bridge road. It is well restricted and the homes on it range in cost from $7500 to $18,000 or more, although the resrictions do not call for these values.

The Jones Comany plans to increase the price on the remaining 130 lots, effective Feb. 15.

CANCER WEEK TO BE OBSERVED IN CITY

Educational Literature to Be Mailed Out — Physicians to Discuss Disease.

The St. Louis Committee of the American Society for the Control of Cancer starts its twelfth annual "National Cancer Week" today and will continue it until Jan. 20. In this seven-day period, the committee will mail out thousands of pieces of educational literature designed to acquaint the public with the fact that early diagnosis is one of the most certain preventives of cancer, and will supplement its mail campaign with physicians who will appear before clubs, fraternal and civic organizations to discuss cancer and its control.

Cancer week has been proclaimed by the St. Louis committee in the following statement issued from the committee's headquarters at 3427 Washington boulevard:

"St. Louis is participating this week in the twelfth annual campaign to acquaint the public with such facts about cancer as are known to the medical profession. It is difficult to measure past accomplishments with statistics, but the thing that has been emphasized in the past—that of early diagnosis of cancer—apparently has borne fruit in this community, because clinics have reported a decided increase in the number of persons applying for diagnosis who were found to be afflicted in the early stages of this disease.

Predisposing Factors.

"In addition, our knowledge of predisposing factors of the disease in the form of chronic irritation and infections have led to discovery and removal of many of these conditions and thus prevented cancer from arising.

"This year the St. Louis Committee is laying stress upon the importance of annual physical examinations as a means of detecting weak spots in the body from which cancer may develop. By recognizing and eliminating these points, the number of cases of cancer will doubtless be greatly reduced.

"Cancer does not develop in a healthy organ. For instance, cancer of the mouth is practically limited to persons with rough, neglected teeth and excessive users of tobacco. It is 15 to 20 times as frequent in men as in women.

"The most frequent manifestation of the disease and the most difficult to cure is cancer of the stomach. Here again, we are led to believe that coarse, highly seasoned food is a predisposing factor. This is borne out in a measure by the fact that the Chinese, who eat principally rice, are seldom afflicted with cancer of the stomach.

"The mortality statistics make it imperative that every available means be utilized to arouse the public to the need for prompt measures to prevent cancer. Between 90,000 and 100,000 lives are lost annually through cancer. In St. Louis alone more than two persons die of cancer every day.

Government Statistics.

"Government statistics show that in St. Louis in 1920, 852 persons died of cancer and 767 from all forms of tuberculosis. One of every 10 women and one of every 15 men over 40 years of age succumb to cancer.

"The St. Louis Committee urges that the warning signs of cancer be learned and heeded by everybody; that capable medical skill be employed to deal with this malady; that reluctance which sometimes prevents people from promptly seeking medical advice be overcome and that the false claims of quacks and charlatans, who advertise to cure this disease, be allowed to fall upon deaf ears.

"Our message to the people is one of hope. We preach that cancer is not inherited, that it is not communicable or contagious; that in the beginning it is not a general disease and that is can be treated successfully.

"In conclusion, let us give these few symptoms. A cancer may be:

"1. An obstinate sore upon the surface of the body, particularly if it is about the mouth, tongue or lips.

"2. A mole, wart or similar skin defect, which becomes irritated or changes in shape, appearance or size.

"3. An abnormal discharge from one of the orifices of body, particularly if tinged with blood, or an irregular or profuse bleeding.

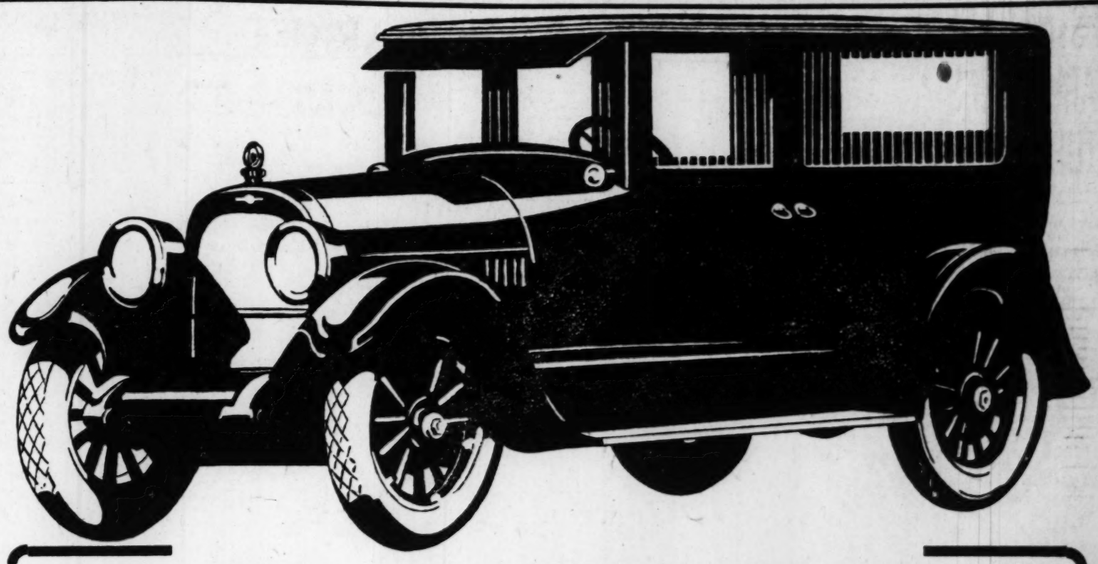
"4. A lump or swelling in the breast.

Pains in Abdomen.

"A cancer may be indicated by continued pain or even slight discomfort in the upper abdomen, particularly if aggravated by the taking of food—a condition usually described as dyspepsia or indigestion. It may produce increasing and continued constipation or abnormal sensations in the rectum or cause changes in the appetite; particularly, a sudden aversion to meat, or may, at first, cause only rapid loss of weight.

"These may be, and often are, symptoms of something beside cancer; but they are danger signals and you had best find out what they are. They show the absolute necessity of a thorough examination by a competent physician, especially if you are more than 35 years of age, for it is after this age that cancer takes its greatest toll.

"Remember that great loss of weight and changes in complexion and appearance of the skin are usually later symptoms of cancer—generally indicative of cancer in the incurable stages. Act before you get these symptoms."



Step on the Gas

If you have never felt the thrill which comes when a thoughtful salesman turns your car over to you and you first feel your engine pick up "on high;" if you have never heard the steady hum of perfect gear adjustments, nor seen the hills flatten out as you skim the motor highways in your own car, then you have missed a splendid experience—the invigorating, soul-satisfying sensation that you are master of time and space and of marvelous mechanism.

When you "step on the gas" you start more than the automobile which will bring you and your family so much pleasure; you start the blood to flowing more energetically, the mind to concentrating more keenly, the eye to seeing truer and more accurately, the hand to holding more steadily to the realities and to steering more confidently the course you want to pursue.

Any possession that so revitalizes—becomes therefore a necessary investment and the only question which confronts the buyer is what model to buy and how much to pay.

There's where the Post-Dispatch helps most. Beginning today and continuing throughout the week the reliable automobile dealers of St. Louis are holding their

REINVESTMENT OF JANUARY FUNDS FEATURES WEEK

Both Stocks and Bonds Reflect Return of Dividend and Interest Disbursements to Market—French Exchange Weak.

By Leased Wire from the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Jan. 12.—The Evening Post, in its weekly copyrighted financial review, says:

"Appearance of a strong reinvestment demand easily has been the feature of the past week in the financial markets. The influx of funds released by the January interests and dividend disbursements has made itself felt in both the stock and bond markets. In the former it has swollen the total of transactions, produced many strong advances and served to hold the market in the form of heavy profit-taking sales. In the bond department it has resulted in an unusually broad and strong demand. The movement testifies to the magnitude of the country's supply of investment capital and to its great purchasing power. It also serves to explain the reappearance of distinct ease in the money market. Such large supplies of funds should, it would seem, facilitate the development of business enterprises and have a supporting effect on prices.

Money Rates Down.

"The relaxation in the money market shows that the effects of the added demands of the holidays and the year-end are quite past. Time money has now fallen back to about 4½ per cent and is cheaper than at any time since last January. Commercial paper is selling on a similar basis; one must go back to the previous February to find as low a rate. The immediate decline finds ready confirmation in the sharp contraction of note circulation and discounts revealed by the latest Federal Reserve Bank statements. Earning assets have fallen $271,000,000 in two weeks and note circulation has contracted by $153,000,000. Reserves, on the other hand, have risen $88,000,000. Taking a longer range view and making the comparison with a year ago, circulation is $165,000,000 lower, earning assets are $219,000,000 less and reserves, despite the policy of putting gold into circulation, are $67,000,000 greater. What this all reflects is, of course, the slackening in business which has occurred since last spring, the thawing out of some frozen credits, and the continued large imports of gold.

"No little excitement was created by the Supreme Court decision upholding the constitutionality of the recapture clause of the Transportation Act. The decision was of interest both because it completes a series confirming the basic principles of the act and because of its probable effects on the weakroads. Under the provisions of this clause half of the earnings of the strong roads in excess of six per cent on valuation are put into a Government fund from which the weak roads can borrow, at six per cent, in time of need. While the advantages of this provision can be exaggerated, it will have a certain usefulness when large maturities must be met under adverse market conditions. What probably will be of more immediate importance, since the Government fund remains to be accumulated and since valuations are still a matter of dispute and potential litigation, is the stimulus which the clause probably will have on consolidations. If a strong road is in danger of having part of its earnings recaptured it may as well consider what properties it can buy with a view to altering its valuation situation.

New Low on French Franc.

"Fresh lows in French francs have shown how little effectiveness lies in Government attempts to control market positions. The French authorities have given up the claim that the decline in the franc is merely a matter of foreign attack; they recognize that there has been something like a 'flight' of French capital. The position has its ironical aspect in view of the fact that the committee of experts is to examine the means for getting track of exported German capital. Control measures are almost certain to be ineffective. Free markets acting in response to constructive economic forces are the only sound basis. The franc is suffering from the condition of the French budget; the real remedy lies in a reduction of expenditures and the restoration of a balance. This will be hastened, of course, by a reparations settlement.

"Firmness in stocks, weakness in foreign exchange and rather undecided movements in commodity markets marked trading in the short session financial markets. Accumulation of overnight buying orders in stocks brought an active and strong first hour, with demonstrations in a number of industrial specialties which later spread to standard stocks. With the subsidence of this early buying, however, profit-taking appeared and much of the early advance was given up. Nevertheless, the undertone remained firm throughout, oil shares in particular being helped by a general advance in gasoline prices throughout the Middle West. Railroad shares were rather neglected. Bond values continued to reflect a good broad demand.

Weakness Exchange Feature.

"Weakness was the outstanding feature in virtually all quarters of the foreign exchange markets Italian lire and Spanish pesetas being the only exceptions among the European currencies. A fair amount of business was done in the leading rates, but offerings exceeded the demand in most cases. French francs continued to attract attention by a further decline of 14 points to a new low price of 4.62½ cents. Japanese yen also sagged to a new low for over a year at 44 cents. Sterling at $4.76 was 3¾ cents lower and other rates moved in proportion. Strength in Italian lire also was a feature of the London market, where withdrawal of Italian balances still is going on. Lire rose 3¾ points to 4.40 cents and then reacted to 4.28 cents.

"A decrease of $21,791,900 in reserve is reported by the New York Clearing House Association for the week. Loans and discounts decreased $27,855,000, while demand deposits rose $6,897,000. These changes resulted in a reserve deficit of $4,402,000. Government deposits amounted to $32,422,000.

COTTON IS IRREGULAR ON NEW YORK MARKET

NEW YORK, Jan. 12.—Yesterday's sharp decline was followed by considerable irregularity on the opening of the cotton market today. First prices were steady at an advance of 7 to 25 points in consequence of March selling up to 34.10c and May to 34.20c. There was further liquidation, but it was smaller in volume, and the early buying was promoted by rallies on an early decline in Liverpool and rumors that preparations were being made to sell about 50,000 bales of cotton out of the local stock. After the first flurry of covering was over, however, the demand tapered off and prices reacted with March selling down to 33.48c and May to 33.65c. No special news factor was mentioned to explain the setback, and trading was comparatively quiet after the first hour.

The break to 33.55c for March was checked by the execution of scale down orders for the trade and there were rallies later on covering. March closed at 33.84 bid with the general market closing steady, net five points lower to 10 points higher.

It was reported that ocean freight room for 50,000 bales had been engaged for shipment out of the New York stock for the week. The amount of cotton on shipboard at the end of the week awaiting clearance was estimated at 152,000 bales against 115,000 last year.

Wall Street News and Comment

—SPECIAL DAILY—

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Jan. 12.—Realizing sales this morning held the market in check but did not bring forth any important reaction. Railway shares were somewhat heavy, down a point or so from their recent highs. The industrials, with one or two exceptions, held its ground fairly well, and in several cases operations for the account were renewed.

The feature in the second and last hour was the strength of the independent steel shares. Bethlehem Steel crossed 55 for the first time on this move, and Republic Iron and Steel gave an equally good account of itself.

The Bond Market.

Today's short session bonds showed the show of strength which has been so marked throughout the week. This applies to high grade, second grade and speculative securities alike. On the latter every Liberty loan issue is higher, both coupon and registered. The Treasury 4¼s held at 104 again today. In the savings class of railroad bonds the most advance was scored by the general 4s, up more than two points on the week while the 5s and 6s of deposit gained almost as much. Part of this rise may be ascribed to the offer of a change made to holders of these issues by the Reading company in connection with the segregation plan. The prime investment issues, however, without special attraction up almost as much.

The significant perhaps of the whole situation as a whole is the rise in bonds, such as Duquesne Light 5s, which at 105 today has surpassed the high record of a year ago. The junior bonds of the Southern Railway also have new highs this week, new highs recorded by the 4s, the 6½s and the new 6s, all secured under the general mortgage and junior to the consolidated 5s.

Relatively speaking, the feature of the week have been the heavy buying of New Haven issues with advances throughout and amounting in one case, that of the nonconvertible debentures 6s, 1947, to more than six points. The more active debenture 6s, 7s and the 7s are up from 2 to 5 points.

Foreign exchange securities have kept up well to their rest.

There is not much to say about the foreign department. French bills are easier in sympathy with the weakness in the franc exchange. The rouble on the week is comparatively trifling. Among European issues the feature has been the City of Copenhagen 5½s, up three points and among the South American group the advance in the Rio Grande de Sul 8s and Bolivia 8s.

New issues for the week totaled $76,493,000.

Foreign Exchange

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Jan. 12.—The Evening Post in its copyrighted foreign exchange review today says:

"Interest in European exchange operations during the past week was concentrated to a large extent in the movement of French exchange day after day, new low levels for all time, the record today having reduced to 3.63¾ compared with a high of 5.00 at the beginning of the week.

"The high rate reached on Monday apparently culminated a local buying movement coming at a time when the supply from what were referred to as Government agents had for the time been halted. Advantage was taken of this situation to hurriedly liquidate the accumulation of the preceding week, and from then on the market was one in which buying orders were so scarce that the unusual could not even be described as thin. Explanations which were looked for generally included reference to the political and financial situation in France, and an added incentive was furnished by a declining market in the increased circulation reported by the Bank of France. The chief moving factor, however, has now come to be understood as a transfer of capital from France to this country, which was confirmed to a great extent by complaints made by the French Government that processes of income to remain here instead of being transmitted to France. This action in itself further reduced buying power that might be expected in the market and for the time the situation was one in which there was no disposition to accumulate or retain credits in that country.

"Similar conditions, but to a lesser degree prevailed in the market for sterling exchange, the chief influence in causing a decline in sterling during the week being buying of dollars in London in connection with these movements there was an important factor in directing the course of sterling exchange in the selling of sterling for South American account and buying of exchange on South American points. Exchange on Brazil, Uruguay and Argentine moved up to a substantial extent during the week because of this demand. The presence of the English financial commission in South America was a strengthening influence on the South American exchanges, creating a belief that their financing may be arranged, but another factor is that it is now the period of the year when the last quarter of the globe is the seasons being the reverse of ours. South American rates, however, reacted sharply yesterday.

"Mid-Europe exchanges included movements to new low levels on both Hungary and Poland. Italian exchange demanded especial comment because of exceptional strength, which became pronounced yesterday, the movement of Italian making new high levels for all time, being the first time in years set above Belgian francs.

"Weakness was the outstanding feature in virtually all quarters of the foreign exchange markets, Italian lire and Spanish pesetas being the only exceptions among the European currencies. A fair amount of business was done in the latter, but offerings exceeded the demand in most cases. French francs continued to attract attention by a further decline of 11 points to a new low price of 4.66 cents. Japanese yen also sagged to a new low for the year, over a cent at 40 cents. Sterling at $4.26 was 1½ cents lower and other rates moved in proportion. Strength in Italian lire was also was a feature of the London market where withdrawal of Italian balances still is going on. Lire rose 23c points to 4.40 cents and then reacted to 4.28 cents.

RECEIVERSHIP FOR INDIAHOMA HELD UP

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

MUSKOGEE, Ok., Jan. 12.—The petition of trustees of the Gustav Wamsganz estate for a receiver for the Indiahoma Refining Co. was continued without prejudice today by Judge Williams of the United States District Court, who held that the evidence presented did not warrant such action. The action was taken in passing on the bill of exceptions to the report filed recently by Special Master Grant Foreman, which was adverse to the petition.

Judge Williams recommended as an alternative course the filing of suits against four officers of the company who purchased the Okmulgee northern railroad as a private enterprise and were able to pay themselves salaries aggregating $70,000 a year out of earnings of the nine mile railroad serving the company's refinery at Okmulgee. The stockholders should hold a meeting at once and make demand on the offending officers for the return of profits arising from the railroad deal, Judge Williams said. If demand is refused he announced, a finding as a matter of law that civil actions to recover damages can be filed. In meantime, he said, he would continue without prejudice the preseant application for receivership in case stockholders become dissatisfied with future performance of officers and decided to press receivership proceedings later.

Judge Williams upheld the report of Foreman in most of his findings. He approved the master's report as far as it concerned the company's retrenchment policy during the depression in the oil industry last year, but intimated this policy did not go far enough in the matter of salaries paid to officers. He held also that stockholders could enforce pledges of employes and other stockholders to purchase $204,000 worth of company stock. He said in his opinion pledges could be enforced. W. O. Schock, president of the company, had pledged himself to purchase 25,000 shares under this plan.

Judge Williams also upheld the bill of complaint in charges growing out of development of an oil lease by company officers at an alleged expense to the company of $50,000. As the transaction was an old one, Judge Williams said in his opinion that breach of faith on part of company officers did not warrant receivership. But there was no evidence, he said, that parties owning other half interest in lease ever had been compensated for $2000 they spent for the property. Besides W. O. Schock the other Indiahoma officers named in the railroad deal were J. J. Schock, E. E. Schock and J. A. Berninghaus.

CASHIER, TWO OTHER PERSONS SHOT IN HOLDUP OF BANK

Six Men Swoop Down on Institution in Chicago Firing as They Enter—Loot Less Than $500.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Jan. 12.—Six men today held up the Brightin Park State Bank here in typical wild west style, shot the cashier, a newsboy and a drug clerk and escaped in an automobile with less than $500 of the bank's money. Two of the robbers are believed to have been wounded in an exchange of shots with bank employes and policemen as they fled.

The robbers, all heavily armed, drove up to the bank just before noon. Five of them sprang from their automobile, leaving their chauffeur at the wheel with the engine running. Three of the men, armed with pistols, entered the bank firing as they went. Two men, armed with rifles, remained just outside the door.

Albert C. Tencsar, cashier of the bank, pressed a burglar alarm, and was shot through the abdomen and probably fatally wounded. Four other persons in the bank pastened to elevate their hands.

The robbers crashed into the teller's cage while the burglar gong clanged outside the institution and hurriedly scooping up the little cash on the desks, ran for the door. As their automobile got under way, a passing policeman opened fire as did bank employes. Two of the robbers slumped in their seats.

Three blocks away, Alphones Rosse, 9 years old, a newsboy, ran into the street and the robbers opened fire, shooting him as they passed, another bullet striking Harry Oszwski, a druggist.

104 CHARGED WITH SHOPLIFTING

Defendants in New York Court Mostly Women Workers.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 12.—The Holiday lure of silks and fineries brought 104 women and girls before Judge Kernochan today on charges of shoplifting. With few exceptions, the prisoners were girls and young women workers, who never before had been charged with crime. Thirty-eight girls had attempted to steal silk stockings. The others variously tried to take perfumes, lingerie, necklaces and gaudy beads.

All but the "old timers" were released with judicial admonitions on fines of $1 or $2.

TAXICAB VICTIM IDENTIFIED

Anthony Capelli Was Fatally Injured by Machine Tuesday.

The body of a man fatally injured by a taxicab at Seventh boulevard and Barry street Tuesday was identified at the Morgue yesterday as that of Anthony Capelli, 55. The identification was made by Anthony's brothers, Joseph J. Capelli of 7041 Mitchell avenue, a fire captain, and Frank Capelli of 2000A Wash street, with whom Anthony made his home off and on.

Anthony Capelli was injured by an automobile of the Rapid Transit Taxicab Co., operated by Joseph Haas of 1265 Louisville avenue. Haas and a woman passenger told police that the man stepped in front of the cab from behind another car, while the cab was going slowly. Death resulted the following day from skull fracture.

QUICK FEDERAL ACTION TO AVOID COAL STRIKE, SAYS JOHN HAMMOND

Bituminous Miners and Armed Camps Looking to Commission Chairman.

ARE we facing another coal strike in the spring?

Rumors persists that on April 1, when the existing agreement between the operators and the miners in the bituminous fields expires, the country will be plunged into a disastrous labor war with all its resultant injury to business and prosperity.

Can this be averted by Government action? An answer to that question was sought from John Hays Hammond, chairman of the Federal Coal Commission, and America's greatest mining expert.

Hammond believes that prompt action by Congress in carrying out at least some of the recommendations of the Coal Commission would go a long way toward preventing a strike if it did not remove the possibility entirely.

"I don't know whether there will be a strike or not," said Hammond, "but there is no doubt that both sides are today like two armed camps looking for trouble. A strike may be precipitated by extravagant demands on the part of the miners, but if that calamity does happen the operators cannot escape their share of the blame. When the Coal Commission interviewed last year and succeeded in having an agreement signed the miners were willing to make it for two years, but the operators absolutely refused to sign for longer than 12 months. If they had been more reasonable then, we would have no strike talk now."

Hammond's Counsel.

"Admitting the possibility of a strike what can the Government do?" he was asked.

"The first thing to be done and a step which should be taken at once is the establishment of a permanent board of inquiry as a division of the Interstate Commerce Commission, as was recommended by our commission. By April 1, when the existing agreement between the miners and operators expires, this board can be in full possession of all the necessary facts up to date and, if a strike were called, could place the responsibility where it belonged, and the public would do the rest. Congress should also at once authorize the President to take over the mines in an emergency, as was also recommended in the report of the commission. But that would be a step to be taken only in a very great emergency such as when a strike was prolonged to the extent that the great industries of the country were threatened with serious injury through coal shortage."

No Forced Labor, He Says.

"Should the Government take over the mines, how would it operate them?"

"Not by soldiers or by any kind of forced labor," replied Hammond emphatically. "Our commission reported against Government ownership or Government operation and I am personally decidedly opposed to either. A situation might arise where operation of the mines by the Government was of vital concern to our industrial life, but in such case I believe that the Government could and should do would be to establish fair wage scale and invite those who wished to work to do so guaranteeing them full protection. To attempt to force men to work is repugnant to American principles and has never proved successful in any country."

"Except in the case of such work as you have mentioned, I do not believe then in direct operation by the Government?"

"I don't believe it as necessary in the case of an ordinary strike. Government interference with labor is always a dangerous thing. What the Government can and should do is to see that the public gets the facts and that the case of the most important

QUICK FEDERAL ACTION TO AVOID COAL STRIKE URGED BY JOHN HAYS HAMMOND

Bituminous Miners and Operators Like Armed Camps Looking for Trouble, Coal Commission Chairman Declares.

ARE we facing another coal strike in the spring?

Rumors persists that on April 1, when the existing agreement between the operators and the miners in the bituminous fields expires, the country will be plunged into a disastrous labor war with all its resultant injury to business and prosperity.

Can this be averted by Government action? An answer to that question was sought from John Hays Hammond, chairman of the Federal Coal Commission, and America's greatest mining expert.

Hammond believes that prompt action by Congress in carrying out at least some of the recommendations of the Coal Commission would go a long way toward preventing a strike if it did not remove the possibility entirely.

"I don't know whether there will be a strike or not," said Hammond, "but there is no doubt that both sides are today like two armed camps looking for trouble. A strike may be precipitated by extravagant demands on the part of the miners, but if that calamity does happen the operators cannot escape their share of the blame. When the Coal Commission interviewed last year and succeeded in reaching an agreement signed the miners were willing to make it for two years, but the operators absolutely refused to sign for longer than 12 months. If they had been more reasonable then, we would have no strike talk now."

Hammond's Counsel.

"Admitting the possibility of a strike what can the Government do?" he was asked.

"The first thing to be done and a step which should be taken at once is the establishment of a permanent board of inquiry as a division of the Interstate Commerce Commission, as was recommended by our commission. By April 1, when the existing agreement between the miners and operators expires, this board can be in full possession of all the necessary facts up to date and, if a strike were called, could place the responsibility where it belonged, and the public would do the rest. Congress should also at once authorize the President to take over the mines in an emergency, as was also recommended in the report of the commission. But that would be a step to be taken only in a very great emergency such as when a strike was prolonged to the extent that the great industries of the country were threatened with serious injury through coal shortage."

Forced Labor, He Says.

"Should the Government take over the mines, how would it operate them?"

"Not by soldiers or by any kind of forced labor," replied Hammond emphatically. "Our commission reported against Government ownership or Government operation and I am personally decidedly opposed to either. A situation might arise where operation of the mines by the Government was of great concern to our industrial life, but in such case I believe that the Government could and should do would be to establish a fair wage scale and invite those who wished to work to do so guaranteeing them full protection. To attempt to force men to work is repugnant to American principles and has never proved successful in any country."

"Except in the case of such an emergency as you have mentioned, do not believe then in direct action by the Government?"

"I don't believe it is necessary in the case of an ordinary strike. The interference with business is always a dangerous thing. What the Government should and should do is to see that the public gets the facts and that there be one of the most important functions of the permanent board which we have recommended. If the American people know where to place the blame for a strike they can bring to bear on the offending side the most irresistible power in the world—public opinion. Neither operators nor miners could long resist that pressure.

Inspect Coal at Mines.

"There is another thing which the Government could and should do for the protection of the public against the so-called "fireproof" coal which is often dumped on the market during a strike. One way to stop that practice would be for the Interstate Commerce Commission to have inspectors at the mines who would refuse transportation to coal that was not properly graded. The State governments could also have inspectors at their borders if necessary."

Hammond was then asked if it was true, as frequently charged, that the miners were infected by bolshevism.

"There are a good many communists in the miners' ranks," he replied thoughtfully, "and they are by no means confined to the miners of foreign birth, either. Many of the communist leaders are native Americans, although it is true that their teachings spread easiest among the foreign element."

"Do you include John L. Lewis among the radical leaders?"

Radicals Fight Lewis.

"Most certainly not. The radicals are trying their best to get rid of Lewis and I believe that he is doing everything possible to drive them out of the ranks of his organization just as Gompers is trying to do in the American Federation of Labor. In my work with the Civic Federation I was much in contact with a number of labor leaders, and I have long been satisfied that labor unions are here to stay. I have no hesitation in saying that it is the part of wisdom for employers to back men of the type of Gompers and Lewis instead of letting union organizations get into the hands of men like Bill Haywood and Howarth, the communist leader among the Kansas miners."

Hammond was asked to sum up what he regarded as the achievements of the Federal Coal Commission.

"Well," he said with a smile, "if you are asking me to answer our critics I will have to be excused. Personally I feel satisfied with the President's statement in his message to Congress that our report was the best ever made on the subject.

Criticism Based on Ignorance.

"The trouble with a good many criticisms that have been made is that they are based on ignorance of what our commission was. We were blamed, for instance, for not preventing the strike in the anthracite field, but we were absolutely without authority to do anything of the kind. We were strictly a fact-finding body and I believe that our report contains the greatest amount of data that has ever been collected in the coal industry. That report gives a foundation of solid facts on which the Government can now proceed if it so wishes.

"As a matter of fact, I do not believe that abuses in the coal industry can be ended by outside interference. Reform in the coal industry must come and the one way to start that reform is to give the American people the facts. That is what our commission has done. As far as definite action went we did intervene and successfully in the bituminous field and brought about an agreement which prevented a market scare and stabilized prices. That action alone saved the Government in its purchase of coal much more than the $600,000 which was spent by the commission."

Diversity of Divorce Laws in America Laughing Stock of World, Rupert Hughes Says

Each of the 48 States has Enacted Its Own Notions and Prejudices Into Statutes, Novelist and Playright Asserts After Exhaustive Study of Conditions.

By Rupert Hughes

Author of "The Old Nest," "What Will People Say," and Many Other Plays and Novels.

NEARLY everybody, young or old or middle-aged, expects to get married or is married or has been. The divorce question is, therefore, of vital interest to practically everybody in the nation. And hardly anybody can be satisfied with its present status.

Whether marriage is to you a sacrament or merely an experiment, whether you believe in cheap and easy divorce or in none at all, you cannot feel contented with the methods now in fashion.

Whatever the laws may be, it is important to know what they are and what they really mean. But in our country the divorce laws contradict each other at every step. Our 48 states have 48 divorce laws, ranging from South Carolina, which grants no divorce on any ground whatever, to New Hampshire, which grants divorce on 14 grounds.

When people cannot be sure whether they are married or not, when they are married to one person in one State and another in another, when it is uncertain whether children belong to one parent or another, when it is uncertain whether children are legitimate or not—things are in a bad way.

Increase in Divorces

In 1900 there were 50,000 divorces in this country, in 1916 there were 100,000, in 1922 there were 150,000. This means that last year 300,000 men and women were divorced and at least half a million children deprived of one or the other parent. It means that about half a million people applied for divorce.

What the number will be next year there is no knowing, except that it is sure to be enormously greater.

In communities where divorce is not recognized, separations increased twenty-fold. And a separation is only a form of divorce without the privilege of remarrying.

A ghastly feature of the confusion is the fact that divorces granted in one State are not necessarily recognized in all other states. The situation therefore arises, and often occurs, where a good, well-intentioned woman is in the plight of the heroine of my moving picture called "Reno"—she is married to one man in one State, to another in another, to neither in another, and is a bigamist in another.

Her children belong to her in one State, to her first husband in another, and are illegitimate in a third.

If she lives with her second husband in certain States she is liable to arrest for bigamy. She cannot live with her first husband because he has also married again, believing himself free. And if he lives with his second wife in certain States he is liable to arrest for bigamy.

In Illinois men were actually sent to the penitentiary for marrying within a year after they were divorced. This law was passed in the interests of morality and recently repealed on account of the immorality it caused.

There is tremendous discussion everywhere, and many good people believe that the only way to save the American home from complete destruction is to abolish divorce altogether or make it excessively difficult. Yet among the five States in which there was a decrease instead of an increase in divorces, New Hampshire has the place of honor. And New Hampshire has more grounds for divorce than any other State in the Union.

In many States where divorce is easy the number of divorces is far less than in States where divorce is difficult.

The number of grounds on which divorce is granted varies amazingly, beginning with South Carolina, where the grounds are zero and nobody can get free of a marriage under any circumstances except death.

Next comes New York, which has only one ground, that of adultery, though a divorce is now permitted after one of the partners has abandoned the other for five successive years. And simple desertion is a crude but positive form of divorce practiced by thousands of people every year in New York as elsewhere.

New Jersey has two grounds for divorce—cruelty and desertion for two years. In spite of the fact that divorce is far easier in New Jersey than in New York, the proportionate number of divorces is much less.

Next door to divorceless South Carolina is North Carolina, which allows three grounds, including a separation of 10 years.

State Laws Vary

Five grounds are recognized in the District of Columbia, and nine States, Maine, Michigan, Indiana, West Virginia, Arkansas, Utah, Nevada, Oregon, Idaho.

Nine States recognize seven grounds: Massachusetts, Connecticut, Pennsylvania, Georgia, Florida, Illinois, Nebraska, Colorado, New Mexico; four States, eight grounds: Delaware, Virginia, Louisiana, Wisconsin; six States, nine grounds: Rhode Island, Ohio, Mississippi, Kansas, Oklahoma, Arizona; four States, 10 grounds: Alabama, Missouri, Wyoming, Washington; Tennessee has 11 grounds, Kentucky 12 and New Hampshire 14.

Where cruelty is a ground for divorce it is most elastically recognized and the seeker after divorce is at the mercy of the Judge. One will grant freedom to a wife whose husband has used profane language in her presence or has annoyed her by practicing on the slide trombone. Another Judge, in the presence of evidence that a husband has beaten her almost to death, neglected her and her children for years, or flaunted his infidelities in her face, will advise her to give him another chance.

Hopes to Awaken Country to Evils of the Divorce Situation

RUPERT HUGHES, novelist and playwright, has been roused to indignation and utterance by a study he has just finished of the laws and practices governing divorce in the United States. Each of the 48 States has enacted its own notions and prejudices into the statutes to the degree that the unhappy business of severing mismated couples is involved in a chaos of conflicting regulations that makes a confusion as unfortunate as it is disgraceful to our civilization. The findings are set forth in the article that follows, and are further amplified in a new film, "Reno," through which the author hopes to awaken the country to the evils and perils of the situation.

Ghastly Feature Formed to Be That Decrees Granted in one State Are Not Necessarily Recognized in All Other States—This Condition Depicted in Moving Picture Called "Reno."

In States where divorce is difficult, morals are usually admitted to be in a very bad way, and where divorce is secured collusion is incessant under thin disguises.

Almost the only ground on which divorce will not be granted is mutual consent. If both partners agree amicably on a divorce, they can only secure it if one or the other will make a contest and accept.

Marriage laws vary as widely as divorce laws. Maryland is the only State in which a religious ceremony is still required. The early Puritans, who did not believe that marriage is a sacrament, forbade ministers to officiate, as they considered marriage a civil contract. With this view other churches disagree, altogether.

The ages at which marriage is permitted also vary amazingly. A girl may marry at 12 with her parents' consent, in Virginia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maryland and Mississippi, and at 13 in New Hampshire; at 14 in 10 other States. In New York and many other States it is considered abduction to marry a girl under 18 without her parents' consent, and the eager husband may find himself in the penitentiary. If it had not been for the veto of the Governor of California, that blissful State would recently have forbidden a girl to marry at all before the age of 21.

Hopeless Tangle of Laws.

It would take volumes to describe the hopeless tangle of our marriage laws. They mean not only that people in love do not know what to do, but that people in wedlock do not know where they are. To try to break out of the tangle is to bring down upon one's head an avalanche of notoriety and abuse from papers, the pulpit and the courts.

People who are trying to arrange their lives in a strictly legal manner are drenched with denunciation as if they were criminals.

Attempts at solution are innumerable, of course, and the same chaos prevails among the doctors as among the diseases. Some declare that the salvation of the home lies in the abolition of the divorce, as in South Carolina. Others say that the solution lies in an increase of liberty and ease of divorce; these latter point to the fact that easy divorce has generally resulted in its decrease. Some even advocate divorce by mutual consent, and try to prove its value by referring to the fact that divorces have diminshed in European countries where it has been tried.

A uniform Federal divorce law is widely urged, and its liberal features are approved by great numbers of good men and women. The Capper divorce bill allows divorce on seven grounds.

But who is going to persuade the people of the 17 states which have more than seven grounds to give up the extra grounds? And who is going to persuade the 22 States that have fewer grounds or none at all to open new gates?

Whatever the outcome may be of the great civil war, the present situation is certainly exciting and in many ways unendurable. It makes our cherished country the laughing stock or the hissing and reproach of the whole world.

LABOR IN ENGLAND HAS CHANCE TO END STRIFE FOR TERRITORY, SAYS HARDEN

Points Out Possibility of New Economic Union, With Great Britain Co-Operating With France and Germany.

By Maximilian Harden,

The Noted German Publicist.

(Copyright, 1924.)

Special Radio Dispatch. BERLIN, Jan. 12.

IF the writer were Ramsay Macdonald he would hold a monologue, while en route to see the King, as follows:

"Fifty years ago Adolphe Thiers, first president of the third French republic, prophesied that internationally the most important event next to a union revolution would be the beginning of a Socialist Government in England. That great hour has come.

"In 1915 the golf club of my native town expelled me because I refused to regard every German as a Hun or a wild beast. In 1924 His Majesty requires me to form a cabinet despite the fact that my party hasn't a majority in the House of Lords.

"These two occurrences, now nine years apart, have the same cause. I lack what no politician eligible for the cabinet of England dare lack, exclusively national pride.

"The conservatives and liberals, who united by common fear of a property tax and socialization of basic industries, threatened by us, could easily form a new coalition.

Desire to Curb France.

"Why don't they, instead of furthering the creation of a new power which is so dangerous to capital and to the two historic parties. Because they perceive the necessity of curbing France, which stresses her continental power too loudly, by firm, clear policies, because both parties are too strongly engaged by those feelings of people who see in France the resting place of so many sons of Britain and would arm themselves against her only under unavoidable compulsion, and because they desire to unload this burden on the Labor party which is unfettered by tradition or otherwise.

"It is we who must show France a fist and make ourselves unpopular and already suffering under an internationally damaging reputation of liking the Germans, and sink back to the impotent opposition party as soon as the diehard of the Quai d'Orsay has become tractable.

"This wish prepares the ladder for us to mount into the Government; when the wish is fulfilled the ladder will be taken away and the carpenters will rejoice if we break our necks in falling. Do Baldwin, Asquith and Company take me for a duffer? I desire to be a peace maker, not a pace maker for the nobility and gentry who would like to swindle the labor squad out of the hard earned prize. They cannot work on us the trick which one white head and one bald head played on Woodrow Wilson five years ago in Paris.

Aim at the Obtainable.

"We desire what is desired: Domination of reason which never bows to brute force and to bring a peaceful democracy, self-determination of nations and the erection of a super-national structure, which shall unite all hostile nations. But we are a practical people, not other worldly idealogists, and will aim at things accomplishable.

"England has today no power to compel France to pay her debts to us instead of spending money to arm her Eastern allies. An appeal for revision of the Treaty of Versailles would throw into France's arms all the nations which that treaty created and protects.

"What does France want? Security against attack, money to order her badly disorganized finances, and as much coal and coke as are required for full exploitation of her ores. All three wishes can be fulfilled only through an understanding and collaboration with Germany. England must further this understanding instead of hindering it as heretofore. The ridiculously demagogic assertion that the Ruhr occupation has destroyed our commerce is refuted by figures published by the Federation of Industry.

Insurance Against War.

"It was clear that we must profit by the paralyzing of German mining and chemical industry. It is also clear that formation of a Franco-German economic union would be unfavorable for us at first. Nevertheless, an attempt to make the world believe good England desires and bad France prevents Germany's return to power and ability to dump goods, is stupid hypocrisy. The newly arising economic union would take care of the European continent, including Russia, and gradually recreate the purchasing power of 300,000,000 people.

"Since it would insure against war and militarism, it would find ample credit in America, and the whole chase for pledges, foreign dictatorship, territorial expansion and secret pacts would cease.

"It is our main task to restore the English laborer to the highest standard of life which he ever enjoyed. For this we must assure markets for the unconsumed third of our products where the cheapest competition cannot damage us.

"We labor men will prove that this aim can be reached only by honorable means, and that England, just as she existed after loss of her fairest daughter, America, can also be healthy and strong after losing European supremacy. And this proof will simultaneously show socialism has not only critical but constructive forces."

HEADS MEMEL INVESTIGATORS

Norman H. Davis President of League Neutral Commission.

By the Associated Press.

GENEVA, Jan. 12.—Norman H. Davis, former Undersecretary of State and financial adviser to the American delegation at the Paris peace conference, has accepted the presidency of the Lague of Nations Neutral Commission to investigate the Memel controversy.

This question involves the interest of Poland and Lithuania in the Memel territory on the Baltic, control of which was awarded to Lithuania, but in which important maritime rights asserted by Poland have become a matter of controversy before the League of Nations.

MEASURES AFFECTING WESTERN LANDS REPORTED TO SENATE

Smoot Bill Would Allot Unused Power or Reservoir Sites to Indians.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—Several measures affecting Western states were ordered favorably reported today by the Senate Public Lands Committee.

Under one of the bills, by Senator Smoot, Republican, Utah, the Secretary of the Interior would be authorized to grant allotments of lands to Indians on power or reservoir sites heretofore set aside, but unused. The Government would reserve the right, however, to develop the sites at any later date upon payment of any damages to crops, buildings or other improvements caused thereby.

The Secretary of the Interior would be directed under another of the bills, by Senator Jones, Democrat, New Mexico, to designate as stock raising lands, subject to entry, any lands the surface of which, is, in his opinion, chiefly valuable for grazing and raising forage crops, do not contain merchantable timber, are not susceptible of irrigation and are of such character that 640 acres are reasonably required for the support of a family.

A third measure, also offered by Senator Jones, would prohibit creation within the states of New Mexico and Arizona of any new forest reservation or the enlargement of the existing reservations.

The University of Arizona would be given patent to a tract of land near Tucson under a measure sponsored by Senator Ashurst, Democrat, Arizona.

New President for Loyola.

NEW ORLEANS, La., Jan. 12.—Elevation of the Rev. Edward A. Cummings, S. J., to Provincial for the Jesuit Order in Southern States, announced here today, will necessitate his resignation as president of Loyola University. A new president will be appointed within a week, it was stated at the university.

HEARING ON IOWA FREIGHT RATE CASE IS COMPLETED

Testimony Given to Support Claim State Pays Too High in Comparison to Missouri.

Hearing of testimony in support of the petition for application of the St. Louis basis on class and commodity freight from Iowa points into Texas, filed by the Board of Railroad Commissioners of Iowa, was concluded here yesterday by William A. Disque, examiner of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Present freight rates between Iowa and Texas points are higher on class and commodity freight than between St. Louis and Texas points. The Iowa advance varies with the location of shipping points and the articles shipped.

Testimony presented Friday and yesterday was of a highly technical nature. It included many maps and tabulations showing distances and freight rates between Iowa and Texas points, as compared with St. Louis and Texas points.

All were calculated to show that with very little additional mileage Iowa points are required to pay a considerable excess in freight over St. Louis. Other tabulations were presented to show that St. Louis has a relatively lower rate on freight from the East.

SCHWAB ABROAD FOR HOLIDAY

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 12.—Business generally will continue to prosper in 1924, Charles M. Schwab predicted today as he sailed on the Majestic for a month's holiday abroad.

"We are having good business now and we will continue to have good business," he said. "In fact business is improving day by day. I look for unfilled steel orders next month to show a greater increase over this month. Both the steel and automobile lines should show a healthy growth this year over last year."

GERMAN CHILDREN GUESTS AT DINNER ON U. S. LINER

Messages From Coolidge, Hughes and Smith Read to Poor of Bremerhaven Region.

BREMERHAVEN, Germany, Jan. 12.—Best wishes from President Coolidge, Secretary of State Hughes and Gov. Smith of New York were read to 1200 poor children of the Bremerhaven region, who were dinner guests today of officials of the United States Lines, on board the steamer America here. Each child was presented with a gift by Capt. Rand, the America's commander, and Capt. Blau, resident director of the United States Lines.

When the children dined and as the Filipino band on board played its liveliest tunes, a collection was taken up among the crew of the America, who subscribed $1100. The amount was turned over to the children's guardians.

How He Reads the Paper.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

THERE has been considerable discussion on the introduction of newspaper reading in the schools. Most people consider themselves good authorities on any subject. I am no exception. I therefore will explain how a newspaper should be read.

I usually have about 40 minutes to devote to any one evening paper. Needless to say, I always read the Post-Dispatch.

Now, let us commence to cover this paper. As an illustration we will use the St. Louis Post-Dispatch for Thursday evening, Jan. 3, Final Edition. The first thing to catch the eye is a small bracketed article, "New Light Sends Out Rays Over Wide Area." I think "bunk!" and my eye catches, "Thaw Seeks Release." I think, "That is the way it goes." Then comes "Complaint as to Oil Concerns of Leonard Wood Jr." I read this through for curiosity's sake but try to form no opinions. Then I read the weather forecast and complete the front page with the article on the tax fraud. There are other articles on the front page but I have no time to devote to them.

I usually neglect page two. On this instance I only read the article on the Mexican trouble.

On page three I read about the United Railways and the movie scandal. I think "These movie actors!" However, they are more to be pitied than condemned.

Now, I jump clear to page 15. This is a fairly good article, I suppose. However, I only glance over it.

Then comes page 16, with its editorials. I read nearly the whole page on general principle. This includes some of the uncouth articles in the "Letters From the People's" column. These articles are not to be ridiculed in their crudity.

On page 19 I glance over the article about the bank.

Page 20 has the article about auto accidents. I glance at it.

Page 23 has the article on K S D. If one is a radio fan, it is a good article to him.

Pages 24 and 25 are sport pages. I usually get a good idea what they contain.

Last of all comes the funny page. I never miss it.

I do not read the advertisements regularly, but do read them when occasion demands. AUGUST SLEMP.

Bonus as "Back Pay."

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

WHY not like the railroad men, call it "back pay," instead of "bonus?" How did "dollar-a-year men" become wealthy? Why did dollar-a-day soldiers become poverty-stricken? Why do people who made good money and became, during the war, ensconced in good positions say that the lost-out service man is selfish for wanting back pay? If it is dishonorable for Russia to repudiate debts to foreigners, how is it honorable for the United States Government to repudiate a debt to its own blood people? Why did not the Government put a luxury tax on wearing apparel during the war instead of waiting until after the war to l[ay] a luxury tax on wearing apparel, wh[ich] was just in time for a returning 2,0[00] service people to pay the luxury tax on a civilian outfit? There are a million other questions to ask, but why name them when we ex-service people cannot understand how our guardians got that way?

Is Segregation Practicable?

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

IN your editorial of Dec. 20, "Segregate Everybody," you assert "the segregation of whites and blacks could never be impartial, "and that segregation would only increase fear and make matters infinitely worse." Why is race segregation a success in the incorporated City of Webster Groves, and many other villages and cities in the U. S. A.? In no instance where the white and negro races are segregated has it ever "made matters infinitely worse." On the contrary, it has made matters infinitely better than the present conditions of the conflict of races where they intermingle with each other on terms of "social equality." Such was the political race bunk of the Republican President, Roosevelt, who said after his trip to South America, the race problem would solve itself by the natural process of interbarriage of the illiterate whites with the negroes. Is this the principle of race problem solution "West End Property Owner" suggests, when he states "economic and racial forces will make segregation natural and inevitable?" In other words, in the course of time whites and blacks will be absorbed due to "economic, political, social enlightenment," and all racial fear will cease! This is the theory of an evolutionist; it is not a fact capable of overcoming the "fear and nerves" of some white women and men.

WISE TAX POLICIES.

The Republican caucus of the House of Representatives has wisely decided upon a policy and program which puts tax-reduction legislation ahead of bonus legislation.

The one great need of the country is the reduction of taxes and the clarifying and simplifying of the income tax system. It is not only good governmental policy but it is good business. Taxes are necessary evils at best and at worst they may be disastrous in two ways—when they are excessive they not only burden the people but they tempt the Government to waste and extravagance. There is another reason, however, for tax reform. As Secretary Mellon pointed out, the excessive rates of taxation have resulted in the evasion of taxes. He has worked out a scheme by which he and the experts of the Treasury Department think that the rate of taxation may be reduced without impairing the needed revenue of the Government. In short, he insists that by cutting the surtax on the largest incomes 50 per cent, the Government will obtain more revenue from that source and thus permit of the reduction of taxes on smaller incomes.

Mr. Mellon, as the head of the Treasury Department, has worked out this method of maintaining the revenues at the necessary standard and at the same time reducing taxation, and good judgment suggests that his plan be given a fair trial. Of course, none of the rates that he has fixed need be regarded as sacred. We think it would be wise to try his rates, but they are subject to revision. The principle, however, ought to be adhered to in the shaping of the tax bill. The question of what the rates shall be to accomplish the object is a matter of judgment.

On the other hand, we do not regard as wise the proposed constitutional amendment to bar the issue of tax-exempt securities, which the Ways and Means Committee of the House has announced. Mr. Mellon says that his plan will equalize the advantages of investment in tax-exempt securities with investment in productive industry. Before amending the Constitution, would it not be better judgment to try a remedy which will not require any change of the constitutional law? The principle of permitting Federal, State and municipal governments to issue tax-exempt securities, and of noninterference with the securities of each government by other governments is embodied in the Constitution. We believe it to be a sound principle, and we believe it to be sound policy.

If the income derived from Federal, state or municipal governments were subject to taxation, the result would be merely to affect the price and the interest of Government securities. The price will be lower and the interest higher; so that the taxes to meet the payment of principal and interest on Government securities will have to be increased. If one government can tax the securities of another, it can control its finances. If the Government taxes its own securities, it merely takes the money out of one pocket and puts it into the other.

We do not regard the bonds issued by the Government for improvements or to meet extraordinary demands as either unnecessary or unproductive. Bonds issued by states or municipalities for necessary public improvements are just as much needed, just as productive, as money invested in so-called productive industry. Money invested in roads, streets, public buildings and public improvements of all kinds, not only provide the necessaries of life and growth to the nation, state and municipality, but they sustain productive industry. The money is paid out for materials and labor, and when the investments are governed by prudence, they represent sound policy. As a matter of fact, the improvement bonds, the money invested by Federal, state and municipal governments in improvements which were necessarily dormant during the war have been important factors in maintaining productive industry and contributing to the general prosperity. We have been living on constructive work which was held in abeyance and postponed during the war, when all our energies were directed to war work.

There is another consideration. If the securities of the various governments are subject to taxation by another, the market for these securities will be made extremely uncertain. Investors will require higher rates of interest in order to guard against the possibilities of high tax rates. The interest will be fixed, but the tax rates will be changeable.

The situation confronting us now is temporary. We are suffering from the costs of the war. We do not believe it wise to change fundamental principles or traditional policies, but to adopt measures which will satisfy our temporary needs without such drastic and possibly vexing changes. Productive industry is not now suffering from lack of money. Even speculation has more money than it needs.

The way to proceed is to reduce and adjust taxes on a sound basis, such as that suggested by the Secretary of the Treasury, and thus work out our salvation now without meddling with fundamental things. The taxes can be reduced, they ought to be reduced, and they must be reduced. The people demand this.

The Bok Prize Policy Committee is charged with packing the jury of award with League of Nations people. Perhaps the roll of international experts didn't offer any other kind.

CELEBRITIES MUST BE GOOD.

The righteous wrath that has fallen upon a movie actress must now, if logical, be turned upon a successful lady of letters. If reports are correct his popular novelist has imposed upon the credulity of a Court in a recent divorce action and has abducted another woman's husband with the apparent intention of making him her own.

But punishment of a litterateur, obviously, is more difficult than that of a film favorite. The writer could evade the ban by changing her name, with or without her publisher's connivance. There would probably be inconvenience in such strategy, humiliation and material cost, but her earning capacity at most would only be impaired, while in the case of the actress it is quite destroyed.

If it transpires that the censors cannot discipline a writer as severely as they would like to, let the censors do their own weeping. We have no tears to mingle with theirs. On the contrary, our inclination would be to help the culprits if possible. Perhaps that cannot be done. Yet a word of warning may be uttered. It is this: Celebrities must be good, within the censorious meaning of the term. That is the dictum of America's stone-flinging age.

LEE CHAPEL.

A plan proposed by the trustees of Washington and Lee University for remodeling, enlarging and modernizing Lee Chapel has evoked earnest and moving protest from Virginia. This sentiment is not confined to Virginia; it is national.

The trustees, it is explained, are governed, in part, by practical considerations. Like many another university, Washington and Lee has grown rapidly in the last few years. This growth has brought difficult problems to many institutions. In the case of Washington and Lee, Lee Chapel, which has served as an assembly hall, is no longer adequate. The present student body requires a larger auditorium. It is probably true, too, that the site of Lee Chapel is the ideal location for the proposed building. The fact that the trustees' project has been approved by the National Federation of Fine Arts is authentic aesthetic sanction.

But there are more things in heaven and earth than were ever dreamed of in the philosophy of utilitarianism or aesthetics. To the soul of Virginia and to the soul of the nation Lee Chapel is the legacy of a gallant soldier and gentleman whom all Americans revere. Gen. Lee occupies a place of distinctive tenderness in American history. And there was no finer chapter in his honor-bright career than his acceptance of the presidency of Washington University after Appomattox and the dignity and diligence with which he performed his labors there.

His service to his country in that post is beyond all appraisal. It was a demonstration of supreme citizenship. Its impress upon the impressionable youth of the stricken South that came within its influence was inestimable. Men of intellect and vision preached reconciliation in those hard days. Lee taught it and lived it.

For that reason and for many others the little chapel which Gen. Lee planned and whose construction he supervised is truly a shrine. Its preservation is a sacred obligation in the judgment of all Americans who thrill with emotion at the memory of their great dead.

A SUMPTUARY LAW'S VICTIMS.

Bad liquor is reported to have killed 2467 persons in the United States in 1923, an increase of 856 deaths, or more than 30 per cent, over the previous year. A reader of the Post-Dispatch ghoulishly gloats over the reports of deaths from bootleg liquor. He says: "Philadelphia has 875 poison liquor deaths. All right. Let the boozers have plenty of booze; feed them up on the stuff and let us get rid of that kind of stock. They are undesirable citizens and the country will be well rid of them." This no doubt is the sentiment of many fanatical prohibitionists. They would shed tears over the sufferings of victims of "drink" in the days before the Volstead law gave such a stimulus to the manufacture of "white mule" and other dangerous concoctions.

The fanaticism that resulted in the passage of the Volstead law ignores the facts of history and challenges human nature. This growing fatality list is proof that the law is not being enforced and that the task of enforcing it is getting more difficult year by year. And, there being no likelihood that a serum will be discovered that will change human nature, it would seem that we are destined to have, as a result of prohibition, an annual death rate from bootleg and other Volstead products that will vie with the death rate of the malignant diseases.

POINCARE'S POPULARITY.

The late senatorial elections in France resulted in an overwhelming indorsement of Premier Poincare and his policies. He was returned to the Senate with 794 votes out of 819 polled. Five Republican Union Senators, in a telegram to the Premier, affirmed that they would "energetically" support his policy "in behalf of France and the republic."

For what has France to thank Poincare? A year has now elapsed since he ordered the army into the Ruhr. The invasion has not yielded a penny in reparations, but has cut off payments which, up to the time of the invasion, were only technically in default. It has dried up indefinitely the source of any further payments. It has plunged Germany into financial ruin, has held her on the brink of political chaos and has made in the German people a more implacable enemy than they ever were before. It has estranged France's foremost ally, Great Britain, and has lost to her political friendships all over the world.

As to the French people, life has been made harder. Cutting off the German coal supply has raised the price to the French people. The franc has fallen from 6.73 cents a year ago to 4.93. This represents a minimum in the rise of all prices since a year ago.

His doctors say that Leon Trotzky, the soviet war lord, must take a long rest in quiet surroundings. Well, there's Hiram Johnson's band wagon.

MENACE OF "MAH JONG."

A correspondent of the Christian Science Monitor urges American players of the Chinese game of "Mah Jong" to consider the fact that they may be setting a bad example to the Chinese in playing this game. It appears that, while the game is played among all classes in China, there are certain associations in that country which play for very high stakes—"as much as $1,000,000 has been lost in a night at it."

There is always someone to take the joy out of life. Here is a new game which involves considerable brain work, with its outlandish and curious counters and new things to learn, remember and put in practice. And brain work, even at games, is a vital necessity for those who spend afternoons or evenings and perhaps whole nights, relieving the tedium of lives that would otherwise be one long, boresome monotony. Because some foolish persons the other side of the world go to excess in making Mah Jong a ruinous gambling device, should we debar ourselves from its innocent pleasures? Whether we play the game or not, Chinese gamblers will gamble. The confirmed gambler will find means to gamble. And any game will do to bet on. This is simply another demand that pleasure be foregone because some use pleasure for ruinous ends.

MAGNUS JOHNSON, who represents in the Senate what Zinovieff terms our "indigent peasantry," is not satisfied with the outcome of his milking match with Secretary Wallace and wants to meet the winner of that contest again with woodsaws and sawbucks. About the time some Wall street banker beats him calling hogs Magnus will conclude that there is not so much difference between us all as he imagined.

The new Constitution devised for Illinois failed because the country was on one side and the city of Chicago on the other. It looks as if our new Missouri Constitution might fall in the same sort of fight. Here is what Editor Blanton of the Sikeston Standard says about it:

> Certain paid lawyers are speaking over the State in favor of the new Constitution to be voted for on Feb. 26. Jan. 18 the Standard will send out as a supplement the old Constitution and the new Constitution. Read them both and then vote NO on the whole works. Most of us have been getting along fairly well under the old Constitution and know nothing of the workings of the new. It is evident that St. Louis and Kansas City want the new as they are raising money to pay speakers to go over the State. Usually what is good for the big cities is bad for the country.

Come, friend! That cannot be altogether true, or at least should not be true. We have progress in common, even if in some things we are not quite as thick as we should be.

Sir: The New York Herald took a poll on the "seven wonders of the United States." A majority picked the Grand Canyon of the Colorado, in Arizona, as the leading wonder. Probably those who voted for the Grand Canyon had seen it, but apparently the editor of the Herald had not, for the picture that appeared was a view of the Royal Gorge of the Arkansas River, on the Denver & Rio Grande main line in Central Colorado. Our West is simply so big that it is confusing. H.

GOOD-BY, SOLITUDE!

(Newell, S. D., Valley Irrigator.)

That roving monastery of the plains—the white topped sheep wagon with its lone inmate, the sheep herder—is no longer the dismal, unromantic thing of days gone by. At least it need not be.

One big outfit in Harding County has supplied its sheep wagons with radios, and others are following suit. Strung up over the dusty top of the dusty canvas tops are the aerials. Inside are the rest of the works. Now when Ole Oleson stops his trekking for the day, puts his woolies to bed for the night, he listens to Galli Curci from the Edgewater Beach hotel or learns the latest world news instead of being compelled to hear the interminable bleating of his charges.

In a presidential poll conducted by Good Housekeeping Mr. Coolidge has received 52,274 out of a total of 81,203 votes cast, his nearest opponent being Mr. McAdoo with 6611. Which serves notice upon us fairly enough what is about to happen. The readers of Good Housekeeping are women, and women are crazy about Mr. Coolidge. People have tried to tell us that women best like big, masterful men, but human experience is against it. Women prefer little men, and a man like Little Cal, who stands up straight and looks bravely out of his collar, infatuates them. In our opinion the presidential race is all over but the spouting. Lacking an issue, we have found one—a cause as old as the human race.

The MIRROR of PUBLIC OPINION

A NEW SPIRITUAL LEADERSHIP.

FRANK GLENN in the January Century.

THE next President should be a man who can give the nation what may be termed spiritual as well as political leadership. I mean that he should be a man of wide-ranging intellectual interests, in touch with the new ideas, the new theories and the new spiritual values that have been thrown up by the sciences, philosophies and adventures of the modern mind. In modern society the world over is being menaced by possibility of disintegration. The world's moral order cannot be pulled together by any one political star play by any one statesman. The whole reconstruction of civilization must be watered by the living springs of a new humanism. Humanity needs a spiritual revivification that only some new religion can bring, sweeping the world like a new religion. If the next President should be a man whose mind was in touch with the great basic ideas that must underlie such a social renewal, he could give the whole world a new spiritual lead by the use of the simple device of putting the prestige and the attention-getting value of his office back of certain ideas. Our country is so big that few men beside the President can get its attention and force it to think all at once about certain ideas. The tragedy is that we have come to expect the Presidency to become a task that will kill the President a desk slave and prevent the average President from giving the spiritual leadership to the nation. If we can only find before next November a man big enough to rise above these obstacles!

AMERICAN AVIATION IN 1923.

From the New York Herald.

IN THE history of aviation 1923 will go down as a year which was remarkable for the range and importance of its accomplishment. In this, the twentieth year of mechanical flight, records in every field were made and broken in swift succession. Hardly a week passed that did not bring interesting news, often thrilling news, of the activities of men in the air. And the spectacular performance of these feats Americans led the way. Thirty-three world records were established by American fliers in 1923. The first night airway, connecting air mail to cross the continent in its entirety, was developed and operated in the United States; a dozen big flying meets were held in this country; the refueling of the plane in flight was accomplished; and the practicability of flying in a dozen peace-time activities was demonstrated again and again. Of the 33 world records made, 22 are officially listed by the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce of America to the Naval Bureau of Aeronautics and 11 to the Army Air Service. Lieut. a navy Lieutenant, A. J. Williams, broke the world's record for speed at 243.67 miles an hour. It was another navy flier, Lieut. David Rittenhouse, who established the world record for speed in a seaplane, 177.38 miles an hour. The army won the credit for the spanning of the continent from Long Island to San Diego by Lieuts. Kelly and Lieut. Macready in a non-stop flight that took 26 hours and 50 minutes. The same men made a world record for duration of flight when they flew for 35 hours, 4 minutes and 31 seconds over San Diego. This record was broken by army Lieutenants—Lowell H. Smith and John A. Richter—who flew for 37 hours, 15 minutes and 40 seconds over San Diego. The United States still holds the world's air law which will practically assure encouragement for private enterprise in the air, made no notable progress in commercial aviation in 1923. The year seems certain to bring further advancement in flying.

Many Leading Educators Will Speak at Tenth Annual Convention.

The tenth annual convention of the Vocational Education Association of the Middle West will open at Hotel Chase Wednesday. In conjunction with the convention will be the annual conference on commercial education, conducted by the United States Bureau of Education, and the Federal Board for Vocational Education also has called a conference on education of apprentices. J. C. Wright, director of the board, will have charge of the latter conference.

The two conferences will be held on the opening day, the conference of the Federal Board for Vocational Education in the morning and afternoon, and the United States Bureau of Education conference in the evening.

Prominent Men to Speak.

The program for the United States Bureau of Education Conference will include addresses by Arthur H. Carver, of the Training Division of the Industrial Relations Department, Swift & Company, Chicago; Emery Filbey, Dean of University College, University of Chicago; R. G. Walters, director of the Department of Commerce, Grove City College; and Leverett S. Lyon, dean of the School of Commerce and Finance, Washington University. Glen Levin Swiggett, of the United States Bureau of Education, will be chairman of the conference. The program for the conference of the Federal Board for Vocational Education has not been announced. The main convention program will not be opened until Thursday morning.

The object of the association is to study problems relating to vocational education and to bring results of this study to public attention for the purpose of fostering types of education that will meet the vocational needs of youth and the reasonable demands of industry.

The association has five distinct branches, Industrial Education, Commercial Education, Agricultural Education, Home Economics Education, and Vocational Guidance. Each of these branches will hold separate meetings daily. The Agricultural Branch will hold its sessions at the Missouri Botanical Garden; the Commercial Education Branch at Soldan High School; the Industrial Education Branch at Central High School; and the Homes Economics Education Branch and the Vocational Guidance Branch at the Chase Hotel.

STREET CAR CREW HELD

Charged With Criminal Carelessness for Killing Woman.

The crew of the Bellefontaine street car which ran down and killed Mrs. Anna Heitmeier, 26, of 1224 Dillon street, at Florissant avenue and King's highway, Wednesday, were held by a Coroner's jury yesterday to answer charges of criminal carelessness. Motorman James L. Perkins and Conductor William Parrish were released on bonds of $5000 each.

Two passengers on the car testified it was going about 28 miles an hour as it approached King's highway and that no bell was sounded as the woman stepped in front of the car. She suffered a fractured skull and internal injuries.

WOMAN ACCUSED OF HOLDING SON, 13, VIRTUALLY A PRISONER

Said to Have Attired Him in Dresses and Kept Him From School.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LANCASTER, Pa., Jan. 12.—Brought before a local Alderman last night to face a preliminary hearing on a charge of having obtained $750 under false pretense, Mrs. Elizabeth Yackley collapsed when welfare authorities charged her with having held a 13-year-old son virtually a prisoner in her home since birth. Police and school authorities charged that the woman had dressed her son in girl's wearing apparel since birth.

Mrs. Yackley said the boy is sickly, but refused to explain her purpose in attiring him in dresses. Confronted with the charge that the boy has never attended a public school, she declared that she supervised her son's education at home and that she had hired a young woman as an instructor. The young woman, it developed, has had little education and visited the home only on occasion. Mrs. Yackley said the City Superintendent of Schools had given his approval to the educational plan, but it developed that he had forced the charges after he had received complaints from neighbors.

Judgment was suspended because Mrs. Yackley said she was going to leave the city.

ANOTHER CONCERT FOR CHILDREN, SATURDAY

Wood Wind Instruments of Orchestra to Be Demonstrated—Composition of Former St. Louisan on Program.

THE second of the current series of free concerts for which the Post-Dispatch has engaged the Symphony Orchestra will take place at 10:30 o'clock Saturday morning at the Missouri Theater, Grand boulevard and Lucas avenue. Tickets will be distributed between 2 and 5 o'clock Friday afternoon at drug stores in all parts of the city, which are listed herewith.

Rudolph Ganz, director of the Symphony Orchestra, will conduct the program and make his accustomed talks concerning the meaning of each composition and the instruments used. At the first concert, on Jan. 5, he explained to the children all the string instruments—violin, viola, violoncello, double bass and harp. With the second program he will proceed to the woodwind section—that is, instruments blown with the breath and made of wood. At later concerts he will explain the brass instruments and the percussion battery. By the end of the series, children attending all the concerts will have an acquaintance, by eye and ear, with all the instruments making up a modern orchestra.

The woodwind family is particularly interesting, as it contains several instruments of quaint tone which are not popularly familiar. Instead of devoting an entire composition to each instrument, as was done in the case of the string choir, the conductor will merely have the performers on the various woodwind instruments play passages showing their quality of tone, range and technique.

Instrument Erroneously Named.

Besides the well-known flute, there will be a demonstration of the shrill small flute, or piccolo. Next will come the oboe, which has a sharply sweet tone and is much used for expressing melancholy strains; and its contralto sister, the English horn, which is neither English nor a horn. It is made on a larger scale than an oboe, and has a turned-up bell at the end. It was called in French "cor angle," or bent horn; and this term was erroneously translated as if it had been "cor anglais," or English horn.

The clarinet, queen of the woodwind instruments, will be demonstrated next, so as to show its rich lower tones, its high soprano register, and its remarkable agility. The clarinet's big brother, the bass clarinet, which has a range an octave lower and supplies one of the most individual tone-colors in the orchestra, will follow.

The bassoon will appear then—an instrument with a tube bent on itself and played through a mouthpiece thrust in its side. The bassoon, in Italian, is called "fagotto," from its fancied resemblance to a bundle of faggots. It is the bass voice of the woodwind section; and it has an odd gruffness of tone which, together with the great speed at which it can be played, makes it invaluable for comic effects. It is the clown of the orchestra. With it will be shown the great double contra bassoon, which sounds the deepest note in the whole orchestra.

Interesting Program.

The program will be of special interest, including a set of "Rustic Sketches," by Paul Tietjens, a former St. Louisan. The concert will end with Elgar's rousing march "Pomp and Circumstance," which is sure to set every pulse tingling. The program follows:

1. Overture to "Mignon".... Thomas
2. Explanation of the Woodwind Instruments:
   (a) Flute and Piccolo.
   (b) Oboe and English Horn.
   (c) Clarinet and Bass Clarinet.
   (d) Bassoon and Contra Bassoon.
3. "Malaguena" ..... Moszkowsky
4. "Rustic Sketches" ..... Tietjens
   (a) "Peaceful Meadows."
   (b) "The Hen."
   (c) "Barn Dance."
   (d) "Evening Song."
   (e) "Fairies in the Moonlight."
5. March, "Pomp and Circumstance" ..... Elgar

As at the first concert, tickets will be available for white children more than 10 years old who are students in public, private or parochial schools, grade and high. A special concert for negro children will be given on March 1. With favorable weather a large attendance is expected, as nearly 2000 children were present at the concert on Jan. 5, despite a temperature of 8 below zero.

With the generosity shown during the previous two seasons of these children's concerts, the management of the Missouri Theater donates without charge the use of its playhouse and staff of ushers.

A dose at bedtime of DR. CALDWELL'S SYRUP PEPSIN Made them feel jolly again

Good Health and Happy Old Age

THE chief concern of elderly people is their health, and that is best assured by regular daily bowel movement. There is no truth, however, in the notion that because you are old you need a "strong physic." In fact, just because you are old a mild laxative is better for you. The trouble with purges and cathartics and physics is that they shock the system and weaken it and make the muscles of digestion flabby. Dr. G. H. Brown, V. S., of Frederic, Wis., nearly wrecked his stomach with purgatives. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin restored his health, as it did Mrs. J. S. Etheridge's, of Milledgeville, Ga.

Does Not Gripe

You can be sure of satisfactory evacuations every day if you will take a spoonful of Syrup Pepsin at night when you retire. You will not need to take it very long as a few doses will soon encourage the bowels to act for themselves. The popularity of this wonderful family remedy has become so great that it is now the largest selling liquid laxative in the world. Because of its mildness and freedom from griping it is especially ideal for the extremes of ages, for children and for elderly people.

Effective at Small Cost

Get a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin at any drug store. The formula is on the package, and the cost less than a cent a dose. Take it when you feel heavy, sleep poorly, have headache or night cramps, for these are also symptoms of constipation. Give it to the children when they are restless, feverish or have a cold. Syrup Pepsin will keep you and the family free from constipation, a condition that lowers the vitality 25 per cent and raises the blood pressure 28 per cent. Freedom from constipation lessens the pain of kidney trouble, neuritis and rheumatism.

Two Years' COUGH Stopped By Mentho-Laxene

Twice Gassed Soldier Says Quick Help Saved Him

"During the war I was gassed twice," writes Mr. H. G. Cooksey, 915 Sarah Street, West Homestead, Pa. "I have suffered from a severe cough for two years. Tried numerous remedies, but they failed to ease my cough. One day I coughed so much it almost stopped my breathing. My wife sent for the doctor but could not get him. So, going to the drug store, she bought two bottles of Mentho-Laxene, and made it into a syrup. After taking the first bottle my cough got much better, and after the second bottle I have not been troubled with a cough for over two months. It's worth its weight in gold to me."

Science Wins Again!

Science wins over "guess work" every time—and science produced the concentrated essence known to millions as Mentho-Laxene—for coughs due to colds. It requires many intricate processes and many months of time to produce Mentho-Laxene. Imported Japanese Menthol is blended with Wild Cherry, Grindelia and other medically endorsed essences. Physicians, druggists and prominent men and women all over the United States freely and publicly proclaim its virtues and commend its freedom from injurious narcotics. Mothers feel safe in giving it to children of any age. Mentho-Laxene costs little—less than one-half cent per average dose—but that is the least in its favor. Its "mighty healing power"—its "quick action" and its "thorough efficiency"—appeals to all.

Read This Unusual Guarantee!

To anyone who has a non-tubercular cough due to colds, catarrh, bronchitis, bronchial asthma, whooping cough or spasmodic croup: Stop Suffering! Obtain a bottle of Mentho-Laxene from your druggist—use it regularly as directed for twenty-four hours and if in any manner you think it unworthy, send us the empty bottle (which cost you not over 75c) and we will send you by return mail one dollar (25c more than you paid). We ask no questions—we only want the empty bottle and your address. Could any offer be more fair? (Our annual business of half million dollars warrants this).

$1,000 Reward! If every letter published is not the genuine, unsolicited, unpaid for expression of the users of Mentho-Laxene.

Many Here Praise Mentho-Laxene

Mighty Healing Power Proven to People Here

Gentlemen:—After taking five different kinds of cough remedies and receiving no benefit whatever, I bought a bottle of the most wonderful cough remedy sold on the market today—Mentho-Laxene! I had been there to a years with bronchitis and every winter I suffe[illegible] to be under the care of a doctor. The same happened this year. Somehow the phlegm would not come up as it ought, until I had taken one-half of a bottle of the wonderful Mentho-Laxene. Now I feel much better and will always be glad to recommend Mentho-Laxene.

Thankfully yours,
JOS. B. PIOT,
709 N. 31st St.,
East St. Louis, Ill.

Baby and Little Girl Helped by Mentho-Laxene

Dear Sirs:—Am writing a few lines in regards to your Mentho-Laxene Cough Medicine. Am now using my second bottle and I think it the best medicine on the market. My baby had such a cough, we thought she had whooping cough. I read so much of your medicine and I had tried almost every medicine but yours. We didn't have any rest at night for three weeks. Since she sleeps fine. The first couple of nights I got up and gave her a dose in the night but after a few days her cough was gone. Now I have a bottle for my older girl and sure wouldn't take anything else.

MRS. R. PROBST,
913 Buchanan St.,
St. Louis, Mo.

"Best I Ever Used"

Dear Sirs:—I want to write you in praise of Mentho-Laxene. Last June I caught a cold that left me with a bad cough which kept getting worse. I went to the country for ten days, thinking that would help me; but it didn't, so I went to a doctor. He gave me some medicine which, instead of helping me, it made me sick, and I was off from work for eight days. Then I bought a bottle of Mentho-Laxene, I started to use it and the first dose helped me. Before a week was up I had forgotten that I had ever had a cough or cold. That is the only cough medicine I ever used. I can never say enough praise for Mentho-Laxene and want to recommend it to anyone as being a REAL Cough Medicine.

Truly yours,
ALFRED TRACHSEL,
2100 Waverly Place,
St. Louis, Mo.

UNIONS RATIFY WAGE OFFER OF CONFERENCE

Five Per Cent Increase in Printers' Scale Ratified by Workers Following Award.

Through the functioning of the Men and Management Conference of the employing printers of St. Louis and their union employes, wages negotiations, which in other days would have taken the form of controversy and might have developed into a test of strength, give promise of adjustment through compromise to the satisfaction of both sides.

A request for an increase of 10 per cent, cut to 5 per cent by the Men and Management Conference, has been ratified by the unions and is expected to be accepted by the employers at a meeting next Tuesday.

Efficiency Is Promoted.

The peaceful solution of what might have been a serious difficulty has drawn attention to the Men and Management Conference, which has been quietly in operation for almost two years, and which has eliminated numerous causes of friction and promoted efficiency and economy in the conduct of the printing plants.

Formerly there were contracts between the unions and the employers, in which were incorporated the by-laws of the unions, the lack of flexibility of which sometimes made them irksome and led to disputes and stoppages.

The Men and Management Conference was organized to minimize these disagreements, which impaired efficiency and increased the cost of production, to the detriment of the industry, and on May 9, 1922, an agreement was signed by leading employing printers and representatives of the unions of the allied crafts in the printing industry.

Settlement by Mediation.

Clause 5 of the agreement, which has contributed most to avoidance of friction or smoothing it out when it has occurred, follows:

"It is recognized that new machinery and changed equipment (and perhaps the same equipment with different character of output) may require different methods of operation if the plant is to function efficiently. Therefore, as regards shop practices, it is declared that as occasions arise where, in the judgment of the foreman, a practice other than that previously existing will tend to increase the efficiency of the plant in which he is employed, he may make such change. All changes so made by the foreman shall be immediately effective and remain in operation pending a decision on any objection which may be made. If at any time the change works unsatisfactorily to the employes, the matter will be referred to the President or other authorized representative of the union having jurisdiction. If, in the judgment of the president or representative, the practice works no hardship upon the men, it will stand. If the president or authorized representative is of the belief that the practice is unjust, he will confer with the employer. If the president and employer fail to agree, the subject will then be referred to this conference."

Action Ratified by Union.

When request was made for a 10 per cent increase in wages, the employers refused it on the ground that the condition of business was not such as to make it possible. The question was referred to the Men and Management Conference, which recommended a 5 per cent increase. The different unions ratified this and action upon it will be taken by the employers as a whole Tuesday.

The proposed increase is based on the scale that has been in effect and not on the wages which actually have been paid, which are in numerous instances more than the scale.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE FOR GERMAN RELIEF DRIVE NAMED

Fund of $200,000 to Be Sought in St. Louis to Provide for Children.

Henry S. Priest, general chairman of the campaign to raise $200,000 in St. Louis for the relief of German children, announced last night the names of St. Louisans who have become members of the Executive Committee of the organization. The names follow:

Festus J. Wade, M. L. Wilkinson, Ed Mallinckrodt Sr., James W. Byrnes, E. D. Nims, E. A. Faust, Charles Nagel, Julius T. Muench, C H. McMillan, Murray Carleton, W. K. Bixby, F. Widmann, Adolph A. Meyer, F. W. Lehmann, Charles Rebstock, Hugo Koehler, Dave Sommers, Aaron Waldheim, Daniel K. Catlin, Otto J. Gossrau, G. Riesmeyer Jr., I. H. Lionberger.

In addition to the Executive Committee, a special Advanced Gifts Committee is being named. It is expected to have this committee completed before Tuesday. It will be made up of about 20 persons and will seek large gifts from wealthy St. Louisans.

The campaign is scheduled to begin Jan. 25 and continue until Feb. 1. It is expected that about 300 men and women will participate in the soliciting of funds. The organization has established headquarters in room 304 Hotel Statler.

The St. Louis campaign is part of a nation-wide movement to raise $10,000,000, following investigations by Americans of conditions in Germany. The reports of these investigators indicate that about 7,000,000 German children are undernourished.

CUT IN TRACTION SERVICE

Increase of Auto Traffic in Illinois the Reason.

The increase of automobile traffic which resulted from the building of hard-surface roads throughout Illinois has caused the Illinois Traction System to curtail the number of its trains, starting today. Formerly the system had two evening trains leaving such points as Decatur, Bloomington, Springfield Danville, Champaign and Peoria at 9 and 11 p. m. Under the new arrangement trains will depart from these points at 10 p. m. only.

The new service will be considerably faster between points named and the company announces that there will be no change in the service between Springfield and St. Louis. The company will shortly embark on a program of power improvements between Springfield and St. Louis, which will involve an expenditure of $600,000.

AN OBLIGING BEAUTY DOCTOR

A Beauty Specialist Gives Home-Made Recipe to Darken Gray Hair.

Mrs. M. B. Gillespie, a well-known beauty specialist of Kansas City, recently gave out the following statement regarding gray hair:

"Anyone can prepare a simple mixture at home that will darken gray hair, and make it soft and glossy. To a half-pint of water add 1 ounce of bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and ¼ ounce of glycerine.

These ingredients can be purchased at any drug store at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. This will make a gray-haired person look 20 years younger. It does not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and will not rub off."

We Re-upholster Furniture
Think of it—on easy credit terms
Being large manufacturers of upholstered furniture, and owing to the fact that we sell our entire output at retail in our own store on Market street at Eleventh, we find it a necessity at times to take in additional work (re-upholstering) to give us the volume of output we require to cover our above overhead charges. This is the reason we are advertising now. Any chair, whether cane or overstuffed, a davenport or any piece of upholstered furniture can be brought back to its "new-day" affection with the family. We are able to supply new covers, and the work will be guaranteed the best that mechanics can produce. A phone call from you will bring our estimator to give you prices on your work; also the lowest possible credit terms. Olive 891, Central 3983.

GIRL, ALONE IN OFFICE, ROBBED OF PAYROLL

Between $600 and $700 Obtained by Three Young Men at Box Company.

Saturday is payday at the Woods & Down Box Co., Thirteenth and Mullanphy streets, nad Miss Ella Westman, the bookekeper, was busy and alone in the office at noon yesterday when three young men entered.

"What do you want?" she inquired, thinking they had come for employment.

"Don't look at us and don't move," was the reply. "Where's the money—the payroll?"

Miss Westman looked enough to see that two of the men had drawn revolvers and were holding handkerchiefs to their faces while the third, neither armed nor masked, had slipped behind a counter and gone to the safe where between $600 and $700 in payroll and other cash was kept. The safe door was not locked and the man turned the knob the right way to open it. He took all the money.

Warning the bookkeeper not to watch them, the robbers ran out with the loot. But again Miss Westman looked and saw a Ford coupe drive away from the corner, north on Thirteenth to Howard and west on Howard.

62 Murders in St. Louis in 1923 in Which the Killers Have Not Been Caught

ALL CLEWS LEAD INTO BLIND ALLEYS AND ONLY ACCIDENT WILL NOW BRING SLAYERS TO JUSTICE

Operations of Rival Gangs Engaged in Settling Their Grudges According to Their Own Peculiar Ethics and "Bootleggers'" Wars Afforded Most of the Casualties — Case of Marie Bowers, Taken From Her Escort by Negro and Shot, Stirred the City as No Other Crime of the Year, but Police Failed to Find the Murderer—Escort Uncertain in Details of Identity.

WHEN the year 1923 closed its books and became history, it left 62 murders in St. Louis and its environs in a state known to the law as unsolved. That is, no one has been caught and charged with any of the crimes. Forty-five of these were committed within the city and the others within its police zone; that is, so near St. Louis and so clearly the work of its criminal class, that the St. Louis police were called upon to lend aid and assistance in, if not actually to take charge of the efforts to trail and arrest the murderers.

So far as is known now, these murders are unfinished police business; they are unsolved for all time. If the mystery surrounding any of the 62 is cleared away, it will be by forgotten circumstance, an accident wholly unlooked for, but, of course, always a possible event. Somebody, suddenly conscience-stricken, may tell or somebody, unnerved by being caught in the vortex of other crimes, may reveal facts of which he has knowledge that will bring about a solution of some one of them and the punishment of their perpetrators. Many crimes have been solved in this way.

But the known facts attending each of these 62 cases have been fully threshed out and all its clews followed until they have led the police into blind alleys that will take them nowhere.

Besides the murders there were a dozen homicidal killings by automobiles in each of which the drivers fled from the scene, leaving no clew to their identity. This is homicide under the Missouri law, a degree of murder which the law puts into the heart of every automobile driver who kills a pedestrian and then runs away. These killings, of course, are not here listed among the unsolved murders.

The homicidal flood began early last year. With scarcely a pause in its devastation of the previous year, it flowed into the new one to mark its first victims on Jan. 11 with the killings of Frank Placenti and Raymond Cirello, who were shot down together on the street in the vicinity of Seventh and Wash. The next week witnessed four more which included the killing of Sam Sokolik and his son, Julius, in their Biddle street butcher shop by robbers, and from that time forward the list of slain increased steadily, week by week, sometimes two or three at a stroke, until it reached the appalling total of 62 on Dec. 8 with the death of Edmund J. Herold, Kirkwood merchant, who was shot by holdup men in his store. The city proper had walked up its total of 45 only three days earlier with the killing of Elmer Runge.

In this staggering death roll, there are murders of every description and degree of savagery represented. There were gang murders such as that of Runge; Italian vendettas and bootlegger wars which took their toll of victims; robberies in which at least 10 persons lost their lives and remained unavenged, and various and sundry other slayings which belong to no particular classification, but simply represent human reversions to brutality. What else but that in the case of Marie Bowers, the 16-year-old telephone operator who was dragged into an alley and shot by an unidentified negro on the night of Nov. 19?

Crime Stirs Police and Populace

Probably no crime of the entire year stirred the city as did this of the telephone operator who met her death near Chouteau avenue and Twenty-first street when walking home from a picture show with her 19-year-old fiance, Clarence Level. But the efforts of the police came to naught when, after capturing the suspected negro, they were forced to release him because Level wavered in his identification.

As far as the authorities were able to learn, Level was the only person who saw the crime committed and it was upon his ability to recognize the slayer that they pinned their hope of a conviction. When eventually the clew to whom all clews pointed was caught and even Level couldn't say positively that he was the man, what more could the police do?

For two days after the murder Level himself was held on suspicion and vigorously cross-questioned, but the examination failed to shake him in any detail of his story.

The two had walked across the Twenty-first street viaduct on their return from a picture show in the vicinity of Union Station, he told the police, and had stopped at the Chouteau intersection to wait for a street car which would take them the remainder of the distance to Miss Bowers' home at 1240 South Vandeventer avenue. While they were waiting a negro, whom he described, appeared around a corner, put a pistol to his side and ordered them into a nearby alley. Level, thinking it was a holdup, parleyed with the man, remarking "You won't get much from me." "I'm not looking for money," he said the negro replied as he seized the girl by the arm and started to drag her farther into the darkness. When she pulled back and screamed her assailant shot her through the body and fled, firing another shot at Level as he ran. Level then carried her body to the mouth of the alley and ran after a passing street car to summon help. Two men and a woman testifying at the inquest, said they saw a tall man run east through the alley immediately after the shooting. Level in chasing the car ran west.

Last Hope of Police Gone

The detectives on the case finally attributed the crime to a negro called "Beans," who left the city within an hour following the shooting after telling some of his pool-room associates that he had got in trouble, and at 3 a. m. on Dec. 15 they arrested the man in his room on Franklin avenue, but the negro offered an alibi which the police were unable to disprove and Level himself seemed uncertain of his identity. In releasing him the police declared that their one hope of solving the crime was lost. Marie Bowers' death, brutal and cold-blooded as it was, went into the long list of unsolved murders and in all probability it will remain there.

But there are scores of other instances in which police activity failed just as it failed in the Bowers murder and in which the officers, after arresting suspects, were balked by the inability or refusal of witnesses to clinch the case. On several occasions their investigations extended to crimes committed in St. Louis County or on the Illinois side, especially when those killings bore evidence of St. Louis connections as some 17 of them did. In one instance—that of the murder of County Constable Edward P. Neu—they solved a baffling murder committed outside their field of jurisdiction and turned the prisoners over to the county authorities, but in the majority of cases what vigilance they have shown has been fruitless so far as conviction and punishment of the criminals is concerned.

Too often they have encountered that warped code of gang ethics which forbids even a dying man to name his assailant. In the gangster's code of morals there is only one unpardonable crime, and that is "snitching." He holds the law in contempt and doesn't want its assistance in settling his private disputes and if he is shot by another gangster he cherishes as long as life will let him, the hope of gaining vengeance himself. If death overtakes him before his mission is accomplished he goes to his grave depending on his associates to settle the score for him.

Thus one gang killing brings another and another until the gang itself may be threatened with extinction—a predicament in which the notorious Egan gang now finds itself.

The Gang's "Positive Identification"

After each killing that has the earmarks of a gang affray the police round up suspects, often confident that they held the guilty person in their grasp. They produce circumstantial evidence and explain the crime satisfactorily to everybody except the law. There they fall down. A policeman's theory doesn't convince juries after the dying victims themselves have refused to talk, as they customarily do, so there is nothing to do but release the prisoner and wait for his "positive identification" which often follows in the form of another gang killing with the former prisoner this time the victim.

At least 24 of the unsolved murders in the St. Louis district are traceable to wars of rival gangs or internal strife over "snitching" or the division of loot. Notable among them were the killings of "Whitey" Doering, St. Louis gangster and postoffice robber, in a roadhouse near Marion, Ill., on Nov. 8; the assassination of Jacob Mackler, attorney for the Hogan gang, on Feb. 22, and the murder of "Little Red" Powers, Egan gunman and bitter foe of the Hogan faction, in a roadhouse on Olive Street road in the county three days later.

Doering died as he had lived—with his finger on the trigger, intent upon "getting his man." But somebody got him first. Taken to a hospital at Herrin, he expired still refusing to name his slayer or tell the cause of the shooting.

"Hell," he said, "it's nobody's damn business."

Versions given by others of the shooting differed. Some said it was done in a holdup, but the Marion authorities held to the theory that he was shot by one of his pals, another St. Louis gangster, who seized upon a favorable opportunity for settling a personal score.

Mackler, as attorney for the Hogan faction, was official mouthpiece for the clique and was bitterly hated by the Egan clan. He had been threatened by Eganites before and the police were not surprised when he was waylaid in his automobile at Twelfth and Howard streets and shot by men in another machine. The police rounded up several gangsters, but soon gave up hope of apprehending the slayer. He will be the next to be killed, they said.

Sure enough, before Mackler had been buried "Little Red" Powers was sent out of the world as he slept in an Olive Street road roadhouse in the county. At the same time Martin Wilson, alias Jim Smith, who was acting as his bodyguard, was fatally shot. Powers had been a sort of second lieutenant for the Egan faction and was a mark the police never missed in corraling Eganite suspects after shootings. He had been arrested 41 times and never convicted once, but his sudden and violent end in the county roadhouse was evidence that the courts of gangland had done some convicting on their own account.

Cases of the same type were those of W. J. B. ("Lucky Bill") Crowe, Elmer Runge, Walter Dahm, Andrew Kane, Harry Londo, State Representative William McGee, Wilford Grant, his wife, Mrs. Rose Grant, and their chauffeur, Wilbur Stalnaker.

The Grants and Stalnaker were from Chicago, but evidence obtained after their killing in Plantation Inn at Wellston on the night of Oct. 23 indicated they were victims of an underworld feud involving St. Louis gangsters. Grant was known to be a safe blower with a reputation for double-crossing his associates. Stalnaker, who lived for several hours after the shooting, contended the affray resulted from a holdup, but the fact that the Grants were riddled with bullets testified that the assassinations were for revenge.

Crowe was fatally shot on the night of April 11 in his flat at 1529A Chouteau avenue. His death was never officially solved although several arrests were made and the police believed once they had the slayer in tow. John Crowe, a brother, who was present, agreed to tell the Coroner what he knew about the shooting, but at the inquest he refused to talk on the ground that he might incriminate himself. The shooting was believed to have resulted from a quarrel among Egan gangsters over division of the loot from a payroll holdup. Although there was never a theory that Elmer Runge killed Crowe, it is known that he was present and his murder, which occurred on Dec. 5, is thought to have been an outgrowth of Crowe's death.

Murder Laid to Underworld Romance

Rivalry in an underworld romance involving the widow of a slain Egan gangster is declared to have led to the killing of Dahm, the "sheik of the Cuckoos." He was found shot to death in an alley behind 1029 Chouteau avenue Aug. 2. Detectives say they got an "inside" story from one of his associates which indicated he had been paying attentions to the widow, who was also courted by another man. The widow, it seems, preferred Dahm and urged him to kill the other fellow; then upon his refusal to do so, sought to intimidate the unwelcome suitor herself with a story that Dahm had threatened to "get" him. A few days later the rejected lover and two of his pals, went to the widow's home, beat her up and then betook themselves to Dahm's hangout where they "got" the "sheik." The widow, with eyes blackened and face bruised, was arrested.

"You can't get any information out of me," she told the detectives, and they didn't. Neither were they able to find any other evidence strong enough to support indictments.

Strong circumstantial evidence also was obtained after Kane's death which occurred on the night of Aug. 5 at Seventeenth street and Cass avenue, but had as little result. He had incurred the enmity of an Eganite and it was said the two engaged in a fist fight in a saloon a few days before. His opponent got the worst of it and is alleged to have said: "You won't last another week." The prediction proved true.

It was in the September outbreak of the Egan-Hogan feud that Representative McGee lost his life together with Elmer Malone. They were shot down at Jefferson and Cass avenues Sept. 9 by men in an automobile who also fired at "Jimmie" Hogan, whom the Eganites had made several attempts to "get" for the murder of Constable William P. Egan, leader of Egan's Rats.

And there are numerous other cases of gang killings. These, however, suffice to show the circumstances which the police encounter in trying to trace them. A glance over the list discloses the following which also come under that peculiar brand of murder that is most rampant in St. Louis:

Others Classed As Gang Murders

William Coffey and James Mumpton, shot on Aug. 18 in a stable near St. Louis and Semple avenues where they had been drinking.

"Big Bill" Rush of the Cuckoos, killed in his saloon at Madison on April 7.

Joseph Powderly, whose body was found in the Mississippi River on June 3 following the report of a shooting at Long Lake, Ill.

William J. Tabor, found shot to death in a yard on Lackland road three miles west of Wellston April 12. He had been arrested 34 times since 1918 and is credited by the police with giving them what information he had about his gang associations which probably accounts for his death.

Robert (Chubby) Fitzgibbons, who died May 1 from bullet wounds inflicted April 23 in an alley near 726 North Vandeventer avenue. At city hospital he refused to identify anybody, declaring "I'll take care of this myself."

William Grewley, teamster, fatally stabbed near Sublette on May 2.

Hubert Malter, stabbed in a saloon fight on Sept. 8.

Frank Beebe, shot on June 20, presumably in retaliation for the murder of another man, and Bernard N. Deaver, safeblower, who was shot in the Mt. Olive Inn in St. Louis County on Feb. 12.

Harry Londo, notorious gangster and gunman, who was lured to Eighth and O'Fallon streets on the night of Nov. 22 and shot from behind, presumably by a man named "Mike" with whom he had an appointment.

All of these have been placed in the unsolved list and the chances are they will never get beyond their present status.

Italians who engage in vendettas or kill each other in "bootlegger" wars present much the same problem as do the gangsters. It is easy to pick up clews and arrest sus-

City of Cleveland, With a Million Population, Hires a Boss to Run Its Affairs

LARGER THAN ST. LOUIS, IT EMBARKS ON THE CITY MANAGERSHIP EXPERIMENT

Council, Elected on Proportional Representation Plan Under New Charter, Chooses William R. Hopkins, Lawyer and Financier to Guide Through Shoals of New Venture—He Has Made Success of Big Enterprises and He Accepted Place on Condition That He Be Chosen Unanimously and Given Free Hand.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post Dispatch.

CLEVELAND, O., Jan. 12.

WITH a new city manager at the helm in place of Mayor Fred Kohler, who for two years has guided the municipal ship through the narrows of administrative economy, Cleveland this week was launched upon a vast uncharted sea of city government—uncharted for such mammoth cruisers as Cleveland at least—and other great cities which have entertained hopes of similar ventures are eagerly watching to see what will be the outcome of the voyage.

It is not without some presentiments of disaster that Cleveland sets out upon its big experiment. Some of its ablest political navigators see dangerous shoals ahead. But Cleveland's citizens have looked with favor upon the example set by smaller cities with managers and have decided that a city manager shall direct the course of Ohio's metropolis.

Using the new proportional representation plan of voting for the first time last November, they elected 25 Councilmen from the city's four districts. The Councilmen have chosen William R. Hopkins as the first manager and the experiment is under way with a treasury balance of $1,800,000 to start with, thanks to the "economical business administration of Fred Kohler," as Kohler himself expresses it.

More than 100 American cities now operate under city managerships. Among them are Akron and Dayton, O.; Norfolk, Va., and Grand Rapids, Mich., but Cleveland is by far the largest ever to put its affairs in the hands of a boss. The 1920 census gave its population as 796,836, and experts now estimate that it has a million inhabitants.

It was only after a long and bitter fight that the city manager plan won its right to a trial here. It had bitter enemies from the first and it still has them, as well as a host of doubters, and public men may be found on all sides who predict that it will end in failure. Fred Kohler is one of them. Now that he has vacated his office and is just a plain citizen, with only the power of his vote like any other citizen, he is making way gracefully for his successor, but is taking opportunity to remind the people that he kept his pledge to "keep the city within its income" and he questions the wisdom of the voters in giving up their constitutional right to elect their own Mayor by placing that power entirely in the hands of a Council.

FRED KOHLER.
The retiring Mayor of Cleveland, as he appeared in the uniform of a policeman when he was a member of the force. This is his favorite photograph, showing him when he was walking a beat not so very long ago.

Kohler Some City Manager Himself

It is plain that Kohler does not relish the idea of being left out in the cold after his unusual administration of thrift and economy. He might have been re-elected had the manager plan not been adopted and he is reluctant to leave the office where he was a "one man army," where he ruled with a fist of iron, ousting cabinet members who failed to do his bidding and spurning the advice or solicitation of politicians.

The chances are he would have been re-elected and that possibility clearly foreseen by disappointed party bosses, accounted in a large measure, he believes, for the strength shown in the fight for the managership.

Party whips had no particular personal desire to see the city go under a city manager's rule, but they did want to get rid of Fred Kohler at all costs.

The former policeman who rode into office as an independent two years ago on the crest of a reaction against party regimes, had been a continual source of embarrassment to bosses. Shortly after he took office he made a public announcement that he owed allegiance to no party, would pilot the city as he saw fit and would save money by cutting non-essential jobs off the city's payroll. Starting with a cash deficit of $892,000, he followed his declared policy throughout his term and emerged with a cash bilance of $1,800,000. Political leaders were scoffed at. Men mentioned by them for public office failed even to receive consideration. All of which was disconcerting enough to machine leaders looking for patronage, and now, he contends, the politicians, with their chief obstacle removed, will let the manager plan go to destruction at first opportunity. And even some of the staunchest supporters of the manager plan concede that his view is not entirely without logic.

But to most of those who have thrown their strength behind the new move, it is evident that the adoption of the managership represents the will of the people, thanks to the proportional representation ballot, and not a strategic move of political bosses as Kohler suggests. In fact, it is known that most political leaders opposed the plan as they did when it was presented before Kohler's election two years ago. And it is further known that the proportional representation system of voting which made it possible worked havoc upon political machines. Under this system voters are permitted to cast their ballots for 10 choices for the Council. If the first choice fails to elect its man the other choices count for the candidates for which they are cast. If the first and second fail, the third is taken and so on down the list until the tenth choice is reached. Thus, theoretically, at least, the system insures minority representation in legislative bodies if not in executive administration.

Insuring Minority Representation

In November, when it was tried first, the theory proved correct. It brought a veritable political millenium in Cleveland and its propagandists made good on their promise that it would insure minority representation. Political parties and factions dissolved into non-partisan blocs or groups as a result of the innovation and candidates running for seats in the Council on strictly Democratic or Republican tickets were "snowed under" in their party strongholds. There were over 300 candidates for the Council.

Four independent candidates won seats in the body, lessening the hold of both major parties on the reins of government. Only three of the 25 Councilmen, however, were elected on first choice ballots. Besides the four independents, 14 Republicans and seven Democrats were elected, but apparently their stand on municipal questions had more to do with their votes than their party affiliations.

It is easy to see, then, why adoption of the proportional representation system and its result in the Council election brought dismay to the strictly partisan camps, for under it bosses sacrifice party rule as far as the manager is concerned. If the minority has a voice in naming the Council, then it also has a voice in naming the manager, for the Council has power to appoint him and to oust him upon obtaining a majority vote for his dismissal. In reality the Council rules the city to a greater extent than does a Mayor.

WILLIAM R. HOPKINS.
Cleveland's new City Manager, who will direct the affairs of the largest city in the world to adopt such a form of government. He has just taken office, following his unanimous selection by the city council of 25 members, which was elected in November by the proportional representation system of voting.

The new Council's unanimous selection of Hopkins for the managership came as a surprise. Time for appointment of the executive found a large number of candidates in the field, but Hopkins' name was not on the list. He had not even been mentioned as a possibility. After a meeting of the newly elected body it was suddenly announced that the entire assembly was for him and a few days later he was unanimously chosen. Wherefore it is fitting to get better acquainted with this man who, as Cleveland's first manager, will guide the destinies of America's fifth city until the Council sees fit to displace him.

Served One Term in Council

Hopkins comes under that classification of "self-made" men who are accustomed to conquering difficulties and is entering office with the confidence of most of Cleveland's citizenship, including even outspoken opponents of the managership. Born of comparatively poor parents 56 years ago, he gained his education in the Cleveland public schools and Western Reserve University chiefly by his own efforts, working at one job or another until his legal training enabled him to set up in the practice of law. His rise to his present position is another of those romantic stories of a struggling youth whose arduous efforts won reward after years of strenuous labor.

From the time he was graduated from the university in 1896 as the leader of his class he has devoted his attention chiefly to railroad and municipal transportation problems. It was in this field that he gained the experience which Cleveland's public men consider renders him especially fitted to direct municipal affairs as manager. Once before he entered politics. That was in 1897. He was elected to the City Council and while serving there introduced the first resolution for the 3-cent fare, which later was championed and fought through to realization by Mayor Tom L. Johnson. Later he conceived the idea of relieving Cleveland's transportation ills through the construction of a belt line freight railroad encircling the city and serving all the intersecting lines. Finally, after years of labor, he interested New York capital and put through the project which was to become one of the greatest booms toward development the city has ever known. He is now president of the prosperous Belt Line and Terminal Realty Co. and has a fortune of his own.

Council Gives Him Free Hand

Just before the World War Cleveland came near to getting a subway. That, too, was Hopkins' idea. By the same dogged persistence he had shown in bringing his belt line dream to realization he overcame opposition to the subway and had formed a syndicate to build the system when the war came and forced his backers to withdraw from the project. Some believe he will carry it through yet, but on that point he is silent for the present.

And there are other enterprises which he has guided to success. Several times he has gone outside of Cleveland with his ventures and returned richer in capital and experience. He developed water-power projects in North Carolina, Tennessee and New York, which he eventually sold at great profit to the Aluminum Co. of North America and the Niagara Falls Power Co. But the achievements in Cleveland's civic development suffice to show why the Council, casting about for a manager, thought of him and why the voters look forward to his regime with confidence.

Hopkins himself explained to the correspondent recently the terms upon which he agreed to take the post.

"I was informed by a delegation of City Councilmen that my name was being considered for the managership several weeks before the official vote was taken," he said. "At first I was a trifle reluctant to re-enter politics, but I was tempted and here I am. It was understood, however, that I would not accept the position unless I received every vote cast. They informed me that the Council was behind me as a unit, and assured me of their hearty support in one and all of the measures which as chief executive I will undertake.

"It is also understood to the satisfaction of all concerned that I will select my own cabinet without the aid of Democratic, Republican or other political leaders, and will serve the people of Cleveland to the best of my ability without intervention of party bosses. What action I will take in regard to outstanding issues left over from the previous administration I am not at liberty to state until I have consulted members of my cabinet."

Public Resentment Against Mayor

Kohler leaves his duties satisfied that he has done what no other Mayor for years has accomplished and there is some reason for his conviction. Like Hopkins, he, too, was a self-made man who rose from a policeman's job to the position of Mayor of a city of a million inhabitants and did it without the aid of political machines. In fact he did it in spite of them and throughout his term he was engaged in a constant fight with party leaders. He clashed with his cabinet and the City Council on nearly every issue that arose from the time he entered office until he got out of the city hall a few days ago to make room for Hopkins. His Councilmen he termed a "flock of fools" doing the bidding of their bosses.

City Manager Hopkins photographed at his desk.

Kohler as Chief of Police, the position to which he rose from the ranks before he entered politics and became Mayor.

Saving money for the city was one of his chief passions. He went into office promising the voters that he would do it and the $1,800,000 balance turned over to the new administration testifies that he kept his word. He accomplished it largely by eliminating needless employes from the city payroll, winning thereby the undying hatred of party bosses. However, there were many things about his administration that brought him into popular disfavor in many quarters in spite of his independence from party intervention, and chief among them were his methods of fighting an issue. He became very irritating to some by his practice of erecting huge signboards at prominent points and proclaiming his policies, while at the same time denouncing his foes, in vigorous legends executed in bright yellow paint. Many took offense at the autocratic attitude evinced by his habitually frequent use of "I," "Me" and "Myself." Judges and other public men referred to him as "Czar of Cleveland" and openly criticised his belligerence toward his cabinet and the Council. But Kohler says that he was successful and he cares not what the rest of the world may think.

The former Mayor will sever relations with politics and business to make a trip around the world. He has made all necessary arrangements, secured passports and is ready to sail.

"Sorry to leave, but determined to come back with a bang," is his attitude.

His prediction as he prepares to leave Cleveland is that his yellow signs will come down, that crooks who bought one-way tickets out of Cleveland will return, that political ward-healers will again find the city's payroll a convenient feed box and stool pigeons, meddlers, reformers, social workers—who are in reality sociable workers—uplifters and disloyal "up off guys," will again appear. But he cares not now. His job is done.

"I put Cleveland back on the map. Good or bad, I alone have been your Mayor. I not only preached economy but practiced and accomplished it. I gave you the best I had all of my time, energy and experience. If my administration has been a failure, it is my fault alone; if it has been a success it is also my fault." Thus does Fred Kohler salute the people of Cleveland as he withdraws.

The new city charter, under which the city manager system was installed, it is true, does apparently make the City Council supreme but its verbiage indicates clearly that it is because the Councilmen are the representatives of the people. They may be likened to the shareholders of a great corporation. The Councilmen are the board of directors. They elect an executive to operate the [illegible] for them. He is the city manager, its boss, the operating duties are on his hands. The responsibility is centered in him. He cannot dodge it, if he would, and at the same time is given a free hand in the operation [illegible] this, the city will pay him $35,000 a year. Theoretically, it is a great plan for a city. How it will work in practice in a municipality of a million remains to be seen. Cleveland has a larger population than St. Louis. The Missouri metropolis doubtless will find a sister big city in Ohio worth watching in the next few years.

VISION OF CENSORSHIP ALARMS HOLLYWOOD AFTER DINES SHOOTING AFFRAY

Depressed Over Hard Luck by Which Scandal Involving Only Few Persons Brings Whole Colony Into Disrepute Before World

Just What the 25,000 Persons in That Community Engaged in Film Business Think of the New Year Escapade That Is Regarded as Even a Harder Blow at Its Standing Than Taylor and Wallace Reid Cases Because It Is Cumulative.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Jan. 12.

A CONSPIRACY of silence has settled down over the movie colony here, both among actors and producers, following the episode that attracted country-wide attention on New Year's day, when Horace A. Greer, chauffeur for Mabel Normand, shot Courtland S. Dines, her host at a little party in Dines' apartment, wherein Edna Purviance was a third party.

Enough things have happened out here to attract unpleasant attention to the colony and, for more reasons than mere sympathy for the two actresses who suffer under the white light of publicity of the unpleasant kind, everybody regrets that the incident occurred. There is a feeling that there is a hard "kick-back" coming, a reaction that again will put the morals of the colony on trial before the world, with a prejudiced jury sitting in judgment.

The film people, remembering the lessons learned from the "Fatty" Arbuckle scandal and during the investigation of the murder of William Desmond Taylor, will not pass judgment on the present case; or if they do, but guardedly. The situation is reminiscent of that other conspiracy of silence which followed the murder of Taylor here in February, 1922, though apparently there has been no general order, such as is reported to have gone out from one of the large studios at that time, for employes to keep their mouths shut on the penalty of being barred from pictures.

MABEL NORMAND.
This shows her in various film poses. She has been one of the most popular actresses at Hollywood, but many predict that her high film days are over because her name now has been connected with two scandals that have reacted heavily against the moving picture colony—the Taylor murder and the Dines shooting.

Another photograph of Dines, showing him shortly after his graduation from Yale University.

Meanwhile there come reports from every point of the compass that various towns and states have put a boycott on all films in which Miss Normand appears. So far these have not been numerous, but they are straws that show that the wind is blowing against all taint of scandal in the films; that the public is demanding that the pictures that it goes to see shall be made by persons who do not figure in the newspapers in scandalous roles.

The greatest fear that pervades the colony here is censorship.

Rob Wagner, magazine writer and one of the best-known scenario experts in Hollywood, frankly admits that the Dines shooting will have a bad effect upon the film industry.

"Every incident of this kind fortifies the people in this country who are in favor of censorship," Wagner says. "Even if a picture is barred in only a single state, say Pennsylvania, where the censorship is especially strict, it means that 8,000,000 people are unable to see a production. This may mean the difference between success and failure to the maker."

The future of Mabel Normand and Edna Purviance is at present difficult to foretell. Miss Purviance until recently has been associated only with the comedies of Charlie Chaplin, opposite whom she has played for years. She has not been prominent in the social activities of Hollywood nor has she been extensively written about, for she is regarded as only a minor movie personage. Chaplin gave her her first starring opportunity in his "Woman of Paris," which he directed himself, and which is just being released.

It has been understood that she was to appear in other serious pictures following this production; also that Chaplin was said to have chosen her to appear opposite him as usual in his next comedy. On the morning after Dines was shot the comedian said that he considered Miss Purviance in no way to blame for the incident and did not feel that any publicity arising from it should be influential in changing his plans.

"It is not certain, however," Chaplin said, "that Miss Purviance will appear opposite me in my new comedy. We have been making trials of different girls and although I have been considering her seriously, my script really calls for a smaller type. I can't decide whether to make a change in the script and allow Miss Purviance to take the part or to try another leading woman."

Chaplin denied that his choice would be influenced by the shooting of Dines.

If he lives up to this decision, to stick by Edna Purviance, she will doubtless come through the scandal with little hurt. Her name has not received the prominence given to Mabel Normand's and she has been quizzed but once by officers investigating the case.

Mabel Normand, however, is in grave danger of disappearing from moving pictures. The fact that she was connected with the Taylor investigation militates against her; also that she has been in the films for a longer time than actresses who depend upon personal attraction last.

All her recent work has been done under the direction of Mack Sennett. It is said Sennett is contemplating moving his studio to San Francisco, where he will be the only producer of importance and his stars will not be tampered with so much by rival directors. Many of the stars in legitimate productions started with him—Gloria Swanson, Marie Prevost and others—and their success has convinced every fly-by-night producer that, if he can get a young woman who has served Sennett under contract he has a person of great talent. Because of this condition and certain added financial inducements, offered by the San Francisco Chamber of Commerce, he has about made up his mind to go where he will not be bothered in this way so much.

It is whispered that, if he does this, he will not direct Miss Normand in more pictures, and whether any other producer will take her up is doubtful.

HORACE G. GREER, ALIAS JOE KELLEY.
Greer is the chauffeur who shot Dines. Los Angeles police believe he had fallen in love with his attractive employer and that when she would not leave the Dines apartment, Greer fired in a jealous rage.

COURTLAND S. DINES.
Young oil broker, prominent socially in Denver, where his father, T. S. Dines, is a prominent lawyer, who was shot while celebrating New Year's day in his bungalow at Los Angeles with Edna Purviance and Mabel Normand, by Miss Normand's chauffeur because he had advised Miss Normand to send the chauffeur, who had come after her, home alone. After the shooting, Miss Purviance said of her relations with Dines, "We are engaged and yet not engaged, if you know what I mean. That is, it was tacitly understood we would marry sometime, though he had given me no engagement ring." Dines, who is still suffering from a bullet wound in the right lung, denied he was engaged to Miss Purviance. He has been in the oil business.

Meanwhile, the question of Hollywood morality has been raised again by the latest scandal. From every part of the country queries are coming in and the usual denunciations have been made.

It is, of course, extremely difficult to generalize on the moral conditions of a group of approximately 25,000 people, which is a fair estimate of the number of persons engaged in the production of motion pictures and in the allied arts here. According to Chamber of Commerce figures, 10,000 young men and women of less than legal age come to Los Angeles each month to seek jobs in motion pictures. As the largest screen service bureau here limits its extra list to 10,000 names, the great majority of these newcomers must either find a niche in some other line of work or return to their homes.

Of course, with the unemployment and part-time employment attendants upon the production of motion pictures, it is inevitable that the moral standards of some of the extra people will be lowered. But the industry should in fairness be judged only by those who, being consistently in demand at the studios, are really a part of it.

Every vagrant in Los Angeles, when questioned, says that his occupation is that of a motion picture extra. If the truth were known the extra girl, with a job, has perhaps as high a moral standard as her sister anywhere who works. She is paid from $7 to $15 a day, according to her physical attractions and the state of her wardrobe, and can live well on this amount, even with occasional lay-offs.

It is the tag-ender and the hanger-on to the film colony that is largely responsible for the charge of immorality and degeneracy that are brought against Hollywood.

As for the stars, who are the natural target of all complaints because of the wide range of persons to whom their actions are of interest, there is undeniably a "fast set" which is careless of its actions and is of low moral tone.

This set apparently neither increases nor decreases from the pressure brought to bear by the more reputable film people. Like all fast people, they are made in various ways to feel that the more proper members of their set disapprove of them.

The "burnt child fears the fire." Hollywood has had two great scandals—the Arbuckle case, which resulted in the pictures of Roscoe Arbuckle being barred in every state in the Union, and the Taylor murder, which is as yet unsolved and is chiefly a stain against the film colony because of the suspicion that some of them aided in suppressing the facts of the case. These have been supplemented by minor scandals that have hurt the colony greatly, too.

During the past year there has been the revelation that Wallace Reid, film star, was a drug addict; but the sympathy of the entire country was aroused by Reid's fight, which resulted in his death.

It would be idle, of course, to deny that many things go on among motion picture people that would not meet the approval of the staid and correct. So do such things go on among other sets where there are comparatively idle men and women with more money than they need. It is easy money, too, and it is often spent in foolish ways. Many things that occur are hushed up and many go unpunished that should be punished. There are plenty of pitfalls for the young and unsuspecting and ill-advised. Newcomers, especially girls, if they are pretty, must watch their step.

Mary Pickford recently sounded the note against the flocking of thousands of young people to California in search of extra jobs, when only actual privations may await them. Miss Pickford, like all of the intelligent observers of the industry, recognizes that herein lies the danger to the position of the industry as a whole.

"I wouldn't tell the girls and boys not to come," she said; "for the screen might lose much talent, but I would advise the boys and girls who go to the studios to be prepared to work for five years if necessary before reaching stardom, and if they should fail, be prepared to take up some other career.

"The girls should be accompanied by their mothers. I have always found my mother a great help. The mothers can counsel and help them as nobody can. But these boys and girls should think about it a long time before coming and feel pretty sure that they have the talents and the screen features."

Both Mabel Normand and Edna Purviance were at one time in their similar careers leading women for Charles Chaplin. Both had the experience of being so dominated by the personality of the strange tragic clown of filmdom that both almost went under when the moment came to leave his guidance for artistic adventure of their own.

Mabel came first.

In those days the trade rule of the films was that no actor or actress was ever named by the company. Mary Pickford, anonymous, was then beloved as "that curly-headed Biograph girl."

Soon, in the semi-incognito of Vitagraph Mabel, Miss Normand was laying the cornerstone of Keystone with John Bunny, the two playing in that early series of films with the characteristic "made-as-we-go" plots. Then it was with "Fatty" Arbuckle. Do you remember "Fatty and Mabel," "Mabel's Busy Day," "Fatty and Mabel Adrift," "He Did and He Didn't," "The Bright Lights"?

Mabel Normand's story is that she discovered Charlie Chaplin one day at a matinee in Oscar Hammerstein's old New York vaudeville house, the Victoria, since become the movies Rialto. Her telegram about the new man with the cane, she tells, went forward that evening to Mack Sennett, boss of the Keystone, and a hundred million dollars' worth of fooling have been the result.

The whole series of Keystones in "the second manner" followed, with Mabel playing leading lady to her late find.

Mabel now became a leading woman. She did "Dodging a Million," a war-fever thing called "Joan of Plattsburg," "Back to the Woods," "Peck's Bad Girl," "Sis Hopkins," and, a director having unearthed her earliest effort, "The Diving Girl," confected by the then young David Wark Griffith, and having had his eyes opened to certain therein demonstrated facts, she was displayed in "The Venus Model" and "The Perfect Thirty-Six."

Her last film of public record was "Molly O." That was made in 1921 and was still in the shelves when the shot rang out in Taylor's study which has warped her life.

After the Taylor crime a definite movement to bar her pictures grew in various parts of the country. Policy dictated that she retire for a while. She sailed to Europe on June 14, 1922, two months later Mary Miles Minter, the other girl involved in the love affairs of Taylor and the scandal of his death, had sailed in the opposite direction, for the Orient.

"Molly O" was released, but the movie goers had not forgotten. Many theaters boycotted the film and in others seats remained empty. Then "Molly O," like its leading woman, was withdrawn.

No luck has attended Mabel since then. Fitful attempts have been made to revive her popularity. There was a joking tale of her engagement to Prince Ibrahim, nephew of the Khedive of Egypt. The nephew married someone else. Apart from that the record is of case ever since.

EDNA PURVIANCE.
She is widely known as Charlie Chaplin's leading lady, having appeared in many films with him. Recently, he has starred her in a notable film called "The Woman of Paris," which is just being released. She has not been a big figure in filmdom and, if Chaplin should drop her, as a result of the Dines shooting, which it is said he may do, her future would be uncertain. She was with Dines in his bungalow when Mabel Normand joined them on New Year's day following their attendance upon a New Year's eve party the night before.

Passing of Mabel Normand From High Place in Pictures Is Predicted Because of the Connection of Her Name With Taylor Murder Case as Well as With Dines Affair, and Prompt Action of Many States in Barring Her Films.

disaster. She skirted death during her first collapse after the Taylor murder and the trial of scandalous publicity which was her share in that event. She recovered, then broke her collarbone in a fall from a horse on Coronado Beach last August. Then she dislocated a knee when she fell from a ladder on a movie location.

When she left Chaplin she handed him over to a newcomer, Edna Purviance by name. Edna was from college, taken from a class play to be thrust into the limelight of appearance on the same screen with Chaplin.

The Chaplin-Purviance vehicles need not be enumerated. They are still remembered and, periodically, revived. Midway through the association of the two the rumor gained currency that they were engaged to be married. The rumor died of constant repetition. Edna left Chaplin. She seemed to have left a bit of spark behind.

The tale which is now told is that Chaplin made a gesture of chivalry—the most chivalrous one he could make—when, lately, he released his first production as a director, with Edna as its leading lady.

By a curious coincidence, it was from Miss Purviance that Mabel Normand first learned of the Taylor murder.

She heard the news over the telephone, Edna Purviance telephoning it from her bedroom in the Purviance cottage, separated from the Taylor bungalow by a lawn.

Miss Purviance, awakening from untroubled sleep, turned to telephone Miss Normand on a matter of friendly inconsequence. She twitted her with the fact that she had seen her the night before emerging after dark from Taylor's home.

Perhaps she asked if there was truth in the rumor that Taylor and Mabel were engaged.

At that moment, the early morning suburban peace was disturbed by a shrill cry. Taylor's houseman, Henry Peavey, entering the study with the dust broom, had found his master stone cold over his desk, with a bullet hole in his back. He ran for the open with his news and turned blindly toward the Purviance home, where, through the open window near her bedside, Miss Purviance could overhear all the details as Peavey yelled them to the servants downstairs.

Still holding the telephone in her hand she relayed the story, bulletin fashion, to the deeply interested girl at the other end of the wire.

This is the story she told plus the facts which later were assembled when Miss Normand, Mary Miles Minter, Miss Purviance and hosts of other less famous figures were all examined by Los Angeles police:

Until some hour which she believed to be not later than 9 of the last night of Taylor's life, Mabel Normand was with the marked man. She explained her visit at this hour as a business one, based on a project to do a film under his direction. Later she revised her story, admitting a certain amount of sentimental attachment, and finally completing her account with the statement that she had called to ask Taylor to return to her a number of love letters.

Doctors said Taylor was shot down from behind, near midnight.

Attention was centered on Miss Normand as the woman in the case, until the discovery that Mary Miles Minter had also written love letters to Taylor suggested that it was a matter of the woman in the case. So it proved to be. The Minter letters were found. They were passionate. The Normand letters were not found. She, however, admitted that "they might have been misconstrued."

Other women were found. Taylor had led a double life of a curious, fiction-like quality.

He had left a wife in New York in 1908 after seven years of apparently contented married life and after the birth of a daughter. At that period he was an art dealer and a partner of others in an antique furniture and jewelry shop. In 1908 he simply vanished, leaving home one morning never to reappear.

Suspicions, veering constantly from this police pickup to that in the first 24 hours, finally settled on one Edward F. Sande, Taylor's butler, when Claire Windsor, another beautiful movie star, volunteered that Taylor had often hinted that he would "get" that Sande.

Working upon a theory that Sande had a blackmailer's knowledge of Taylor's married and other pasts, the police arrested the man in Carlin, Nev., five days after the crime—whereupon the case against Sande blew up, or, more properly to speak, gradually petered out.

This turn in the investigation dampened ardors, so that the murder is still a mystery now, in spite of the fact that many different branches of the manifold police powers of the nation have consistently worked on the

Fiery, Itching Skin Cleared With Sulphur

Any breaking out of the skin, even fiery, itching eczema, can be quickly overcome by applying a little Mentho-Sulphur, says a noted skin specialist. Because of its germ destroying properties, this sulphur preparation instantly brings ease from skin irritation, soothes and heals the eczema right up and leaves the skin clear and smooth.

It seldom fails to relieve the torment and disfigurement. Sufferers from skin trouble should get a little jar of Rowles Mentho-Sulphur from any good druggist and use it like a cold cream.

Cocoanut Oil Makes A Splendid Shampoo

If you want to keep your hair in good condition, be careful what you wash it with.

Many soaps and preparad shampoos contain too much free alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle and is very harmful. Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo (which is pure and entirely greasless) is much better than anything else you can use for shampooing, as this cannot possibly injure the hair.

Simply moisten your hair with water and rub it in. Two or three teaspoonfuls will make an abundnce of rich, creamy lather, and cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. The lather rinses out easily, and removes every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excess oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves it fine and silky, bright, fluffy, wavy and easy to manage.

You can get Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo at any drug store. It is inexpensive and a few ounces will last everyone in the family for months.

NEWER FORM OF OIL ENDS RHEUMATIC PAINS

Of 5,783 Cases Less Than 3 in 100 Are Reported to Have Failed to Get Relief.

From Germany, which gave to the world those two great pain relievers—Aspirin for headache pain and Novocain for painless dentistry—comes news of another great discovery of a newer form of oil which is bringing quick relief from the pain of rheumatism in a remarkable percentage of cases where all other methods had failed.

These German scientists found that rheumatism, in an enormous number of cases, is due to an internal infection, such as poisonous pus in a dead tooth or an infected tonsil, or in the intestines. These poisons being absorbed by the blood are carried to the joints and muscles, where they set up inflammation and intense pain. Sometimes these infections cause rheumatism, in other cases neuritis, neuralgia or gout.

Once the cause of the trouble was known, these German scientists worked to perfect an oil intended to penetrate directly to the tortured nerves and inflamed tissue of the joints and muscles themselves and neutralize these poisons in much the same way that bicarbonate of soda or magnesia neutralizes an acid stomach. Often even in the most severe and stubborn cases, inflammation, swelling and pain quickly disappear with the very first application.

So astounding have been the results from this remarkable oil that the American distributors have authorized local druggists to lend you a bottle for trial with his personal written guarantee. You simply deposit the price with him as evidence of good faith. Then if you do not get immediate relief, simply return the bottle and every penny of your deposit will be instantly refunded. Ask for the oil by name—Buhler Oil. Sold by all good druggists in this city, such as Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., Judge & Dolph (3 stores), Keiffer Drug Co. (2 stores), Enderle Drug Co. (6 stores) and Johnson Bros. Drug Co.

Note: The written guarantee of relief or money back on Buhler Oil is especially designed for those people who have doctored for years without results. We do not want to keep one penny of your money unless Buhler Oil gives you relief from pain.

MORE TIME IS SOUGHT OF CONGRESS ON BRIDGE PROJECT

Delegation to Plead for Delay in Time Limit on Condemnation of Land.

President Kinsey of the Board of Public Service, Director of Public Utilities Hooke and City Counselor Hald departed yesterday for Washington to appear this week before the Interstate Commerce Committee of the lower House of Congress to ask for an extension of time for the condemnation of land necessary to the construction of the East Side approach to the free bridge.

The Board of Aldermen Friday authorized the sending of Director Hooke and City Counselor Hald by special resolution, and President Kinsey joined them. He will also join the St. Louis committee now in Washington seeking to bring the next Democratic national convention here.

The land condemnation powers sought by the committee expire Feb. 10, having been extended by Congress nine times. The tenth extension is being opposed by the Chamber of Commerce of East St. Louis.

THE 62 UNSOLVED MURDERS IN ST. LOUIS AND ENVIRONS IN 1923

Kiely was killed in the presence of his wife, April 30, by men who were looting their home at 2301 North Fourteenth street, and George Sutter was a victim of holdup men who shot him in his saloon at 2202 North Fifteenth street, May 10, when he turned sharply about at the command "stick 'em up." Onas Cruzan tried to stop two young men whom he caught driving his automobile away from his home, 2000 East Warne avenue, last March, and was fatally wounded by one of them. Eleven suspects were arrested, but none was identified by his wife, who witnessed the shooting.

Mysterious Fairground Park Shooting.

A most unusual case was that of Rudolph C. Ritter, purchasing manager for the J. S. Merrill Drug Co., who died May 9 from a bullet wound inflicted by an unidentified assailant as he was riding in an automobile through Fairground Park on the evening of April 11. Detectives who worked on the case thought the shooting was done either in an attempted holdup or in revenge for a slight accident on the west approach of the McKinley Bridge shortly before, but neither theory was ever verified.

Other killings the police never were able to explain were those of Robert Dwyer, 20-year-old son of Phil Dwyer, Democratic politician, and Simon Gottlieb, a real estate operator. Young Dwyer was shot four times on a lot at Vandeventer avenue and North Market street the night of May 30 and died June 3 at city Hospital. He told his father he had been shot by a man to whom he had refused to lend money, but the affair was never cleared up. Gottlieb met his doom in his office, 2202 Wash street, Oct. 13. Two men resembling negroes or dark-skinned foreigners were seen running from the office but were never apprehended.

Nobody ever found out who shot Phillip Accardi from ambush when he and his brother and brother-in-law were boarding a street car at Ninth and Biddle streets last Jan. 30; neither has the shooting of Roger Vogel at Eighteenth and Morgan streets on Nov. 14 been explained, and as for the killing of Peter McKeon, a "huckster" found shot to death in an alley in the rear of 1010 South Twelfth street, June 11, not even a tangible theory has been advanced.

The case of Herman Smith, shot at Lawrence and Folsom avenues last May is not likely to be solved; neither is that of Wesley R. Smith, found shot to death on Kehr's Mill road in the county. The murder (if indeed it was a murder) of John A. Blaesy, found last Feb. 7 in a back yard at 1233 South Seventh street with his skull fractured and his face mutilated, is still a mystery, as are also the deaths of three negroes—William Lee, a policy ticket seller, found shot near Kimmswick last April; May Ruffins, found slain and badly mutilated in an alley at 3714 Easton avenue, April 11, and another named Blackford, found with his throat slashed in the street at Twenty-first and Chestnut on Sept. 9. The only information the police ever obtained about the fatal shooting of Isaac Young, a negro cabaret singer, June 13, in Suburban Inn, a cafe in Weilston, was that it was done by a white man in the mistaken belief that Young had entered the cafe as a customer.

The murders of Constable Edward Poulsen at Jennings May 20, of William (Buck) Daley at Granite City Aug. 9, and of Morris Fleishman, Staunton, Ill., merchant, Sept. 25, in all of which St. Louis gangsters figured, have all remained unsolved.

To Make Rich Red Blood

Revitalize your worn-out and exhausted nerves and increase your strength and endurance. Take Organdi Iron; not organic iron which people usually take, but true organic iron—Nuxated Iron—which will make the iron in your blood and nerves like the iron in your vegetables, fruits and meats. One dose of Nuxated Iron is guaranteed to be approximately equivalent in organic iron content to eating one quart of spinach, one quart of lettuce, vegetables or half a dozen eggs or like taking extract of beef from one hundred pounds of meat. Nuxated Iron is partially predigested and ready to enter immediate absorption into the blood. Assimilation by the body begins as soon as iron just as it comes from the tablet of strong acids or small grains of iron fillings.

Over 4,000,000 people annually are using Nuxated Iron. It does not injure the teeth nor disturb the stomach. Within a few days you will often note a remarkable gain in your strength and endurance. If you are not entirely satisfied with the results obtained by the manufacturers it may be returned to any druggist from whom you obtain satisfactory results.

Beware of substitutes. Always insist on having genuine organic iron. Regular $1.10 Package. Nuxated Iron Monday.... 79c

Imperial Ball Friday to Be Climax in Series of Brilliant Social Events of the Season

Wedding of Miss Alice Busch and Louis Hager Jr. to Take Place Saturday Night at Grant's Farm, Home of Her Parents.

THERE has been a hiatus in post-holiday season gayeties, to be bridged over this week by some of the most important social events of the winter, and society will have a last fling before the end of the formal season.

The highest peak on the horizon is, of course, the Imperial ball Friday night, which each year marks the climax in a long list of brilliant events sponsored by notables in St. Louis society. As usual, it will be at the St. Louis Club.

Scarcely second in interest will be the wedding the following night of Miss Alice Busch and Louis Hager Jr., at Grant's Farm, the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. August A. Busch. Hundreds of her friends will motor through the historic old grounds to see the veiled Prophet's Queen of 1922, and one of the most beautiful of all his consorts, become a bride.

The remainder of the week's calendar, in reverse order, is equally as interesting. Thursday there will be a large debutante luncheon honoring Miss Lauralouise Price, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Vincent L. Price. Mrs. Cevedra Blake of the Kingsbury Apartments will be hostess, and the following young women will be guests: Misses Jane Parsons, Lucy Terry, Rachel Lee Cuendet, Julia Lawnin, Mary Elizabeth Edwards, Marie Nugent, Isabelle Smith, Katherine Sipple, Grace Layman, Mary O'Fallon, Frances Compton, Eleanor Simmons, Audrey Faust, Dorothy Cramer, Margaret Chandler, and Mrs. Price, mother of the honor guest. Wednesday night, Miss Doris Drummond will become the bride of Alonzo C. Church Jr., son of Mrs. Rolla Wells, at a quiet though one of the most notable ceremonies of the winter, at the home of her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene R. Cuendet.

Wednesday, Lindell Gordon Jr. will give a debutante dinner; Tuesday Mrs. J. B. S. Lee of Philadelphia, sister of Mrs. Edwin T. Regent, and one of the most feted visitors, will have a dinner given for her by Mr. and Mrs. Firmin V. Desloge, and tomorrow Miss Carolyn Bailey will give a luncheon for Misses Jeannette Brown and Carolyn Jones, guests of Miss Mary Lemon Sipple. Scattered through the week there will be numerous pre-wedding parties for the two brides.

For the following week there are three parties of note. On Jan. 25 Mr. and Mrs. Samuel C. Davis will give a dinner dance at the Log Cabin Club for Miss Marie Christy Tiffany, and on the 28th Mr. and Mrs. Paul Bakewell Jr. will give a dinner dance at the Florissant Valley Country Club for the married set. Costume balls, welcomed by the younger set because of their informality, are always of interest. Such an affair will be given by Miss Elizabeth Luyties and her brother, William H. Luyties, the evening of Jan. 29 at the Luyties home in Brentmoor, when the guests will affect the costumes worn in the French cafes of Montmartre by members of the artists' colony. The ballroom at Luyties will be converted into a restaurant, where there will be supper and dancing for its 40 guests

Misses Elizabeth Morse and Alice Pettingill will entertain friends each Monday morning in February at Hotel Chase with Richard Wagner's opera, The Nibelungen Ring. Miss Morse will read the opera, while the accompanying music will be played by Miss Pettingill, and colored slides made especially for the occasion are to be projected on a screen to illustrate the scenes. The Ring is divided into four operas, "Das Rheingold," "Die Walkeure," "Siegfried" and "Gotterdaemmerung." The recitals, which are to begin at 11 o'clock, are being sponsored by many of the prominent society matrons.

Tomorrow evening the Players of the Artists' Guild will give an entertainment, when Miss Sarah L. Tower will give readings from poetry of the hour, followed by "Philanthropy," a play in one act, directed by Mrs. Archer O'Reilly. The first group of poems to be read by Miss Tower are by Edna St. Vincent Millay, and the second by Robert Frost. The cast for the play comprises Mrs. Herman von Schrenk, Mr. and Mrs. Richard E. Gruner and Dr. James B. Costen.

Tuesday evening Dr. and Mrs. Leland Boogher will be host at a dinner honoring Alfred G. Robyn, New York organist, who has been in St. Louis for the past few days. Later there will be a reception for Mr. Robyn's old friends and a group of St. Louis musicians.

Another dinner party planned for Wednesday is to be given by Mrs. James Franklin McCourtney at the St. Louis Woman's Club for 24 guests.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert N. Warmack of the St. Regis Apartments and their daughter, Miss Annie Laurie, will depart at noon tomorrow for Belle Air, Fla. They plan to sail from Tampa for Cuba to attend the festival there in February, and their return cruise will take them to Key West, Miami and Palm Beach. They are expected home in about two months.

—Strauss

Miss Elizabeth Boeckeler, whose engagement to Godfrey Macdonald, son of the late Lieutenant-Colonel Godfrey Harrison Macdonald of New York was announced Friday.

Miss Eleanor Simmons, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wallace D. Simmons, gave a dinner party last night at their home, 46 Westmoreland place, in honor of Miss Helen Bruce Page of Boston who, with her mother, is at the Forest Park Hotel. Miss Page is the fiancee of Thomas N. Berlage, formerly of London. She will depart Tuesday for her home.

At left: Miss Jane Parsons. She will be honor guest at a debutante tea given by her mother, Mrs. John B. Denvir Jr., Sunday afternoon, Jan. 20.

—Strauss

Miss Marie Carr Taylor, who was honor guest at a buffet luncheon last week, given by her aunt, Mrs. Clarkson Carpenter. Later the guests attended a skating party at the Bellerive Country Club.

Mr. and Mrs. William Bagnell of 12 Westmoreland place will leave soon for a winter visit with their daughter, Mrs. Huey Hughes of Dallas, Tex.

Mrs. Bagnell's niece, Mrs. Lionel Skipwith of Richmond, Va., is visiting here. She is dividing her time between her mother, Mrs. Samuel Johnston of St. Charles, and her aunt. She will remain two weeks longer.

Mr. and Mrs. John T. Davis Jr. of 47 Portland place will depart about Jan. 20 to spend the late winter in Miami, Fla.

Guests for Whom Parties Have Been Arranged Are the Misses Carolyn and Emerin Keene, Mrs. G. Herbert Walker and Mrs. Patrick Bellinger.

ATTRACTIVE out-of-town visitors are again in the limelight, and the hospitality for which St. Louisans are noted is being brought into play. They attended Miss Wright's school in Bryn Mawr, Pa., with a number of St. Louis young women. Mrs. Hill will entertain 20 guests at luncheon Friday at the St. Louis Woman's Club in their honor.

Mrs. G. Herbert Walker of New York is with her mother, Mrs. James H. Wear. Mr. Walker, who was here for a few days, has returned home. Former St. Louisans, the Walkers have been much feted by old friends. A dinner by Mrs. Walker's sister, Mrs. Max Kotany, and a luncheon by Mrs. John Dwight Filley are among the entertainments given.

Two younger matrons, Mrs. Patrick N. Lynch Bellinger of Washington, and Mrs. John Cary of Okmulgee, Ok., are visiting their respective parents. Mrs. Bellinger is with the Theodore Benoists, and Mrs. Cary with Mr. and Mrs. Herman Steinwender.

ANNOUNCEMENTS OF WEDDINGS AND ENGAGEMENTS

The marriage of Miss Junalta Schopp, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward H. Schopp of 5916 Waterman avenue, and George William Meletio, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Meletio of 6931 Pershing avenue, took place at 4 o'clock Wednesday afternoon, at the Grace Methodist Episcopal Church, the Rev. Schuett officiating. The guests included only members of the two families, and Mr. and Mrs. George Lockett Edwards Jr., who attended the couple. A wedding dinner at Hotel Chase followed, after which Mr. and Mrs. Meletio departed on their honeymoon to Chicago. They have taken an apartment at 809 Leland avenue. The bride wore a navy blue satin afternoon gown, trimmed with tucked ecru net, and a hat of navy blue satin. Her flowers were pink roses and lilies of the valley. Mrs. Edwards was gowned in black satin, trimmed in ecru lace and a black satin hat. The bride was educated at Hosmer Hall. Mr. Meletio is a graduate of Washington University and a member of Sigma Nu.

The wedding of Miss Genevra Sturdevant of the Buckingham Hotel and Craig Lathian Overholser of East Liverpool, O., was solemnized Wednesday afternoon, at the Maple Avenue Methodist Church, the Rev. Dr. William Forney Hovis officiating. A family dinner followed at the hotel. Mrs. Eugene L. Shrader, sister of the bride, was her only attendant, and Mr. Shrader was best man. The ushers were Arthur Kehl, Felix Boldt and E. Carlton Bloodworth. After an Eastern honeymoon trip the couple will make their home in East Liverpool.

Mrs. Overholser is a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Albert M. Sturdevant and a niece of W. L. Sturdevant of the Buckingham. The bridegroom is a son of Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Overholser of Sibley, O. His mother and sister, Miss Maxine, attended the wedding.

One of the first socially important weddings in the new year is that of Miss May Scullin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Harry Scullin of 5218 South Broadway, to Henry Prenatt Green, son of Mrs. Charles Green of 1517 Longfellow boulevard, which took place at 5:30 p. m. Wednesday, at the SS. Joseph and Mary Catholic Church. Monsignor Brennan performed the ceremony in the presence of 450 guests. A reception for the many friends of the couple was held at the Scullins' home after the ceremony and a dinner for the bridal party followed later. Pink roses decorated the home, with all white flowers in the dining room. Mrs. A. H. Sullivan was her sister's matron of honor and only attendant. William H. Bixby was best man and the following men ushers: A. H. Sullivan, John Aid, Sidney Runyan and Kenneth Green.

The bride was gowned in a cre-

Smoke and Water Damage

Our losses to stocks were smoke and water damage only. We had no fire loss to our merchandise.

Our Annex Building received the brunt of the damage, all floors and stock rooms being exposed to the dense smoke pall and fire fighting apparatus, also the seepage of water through walls and roofs, our basement being flooded.

Our Main Building suffered smoke damage only, but all floors and stock rooms were exposed.

Our Warehouse, 4th and St. Charles Streets, containing case upon case of merchandise, was flooded on all floors and basement.

All merchandise has been distributed to their respective departments and will be placed on sale at the lowest prices in years.

Merchandise Which Was Exposed to Smoke and Water to Be Sold at Once

It is our purpose to give our patrons every advantage of the low prices made possible by insurance adjustments.

Practically every department in the store suffered some loss and such merchandise will be offered at prices that will move it quickly.

This is indeed a rare opportunity for economy and the first time in our history that circumstances forced us to sacrifice our huge stocks in a sale of this kind.

At This Writing

—it is impossible to give a detailed list and prices of all merchandise.

The insurance underwriters have just completed their work, and a force of a thousand people will work diligently to arrange all sale merchandise on counters, tables and racks in both buildings by Monday morning. Yellow and black Insurance Adjustment Sale cards will indicate the sale goods.

Our Advice Is to Come Early Monday and Visit All Departments.

New Merchandise

At the time of the fire we were making preparations for our Big Annual January Sale, and were in readiness to announce same.

All of this special merchandise will also be offered at this time at the very low sale prices intended for the sale.

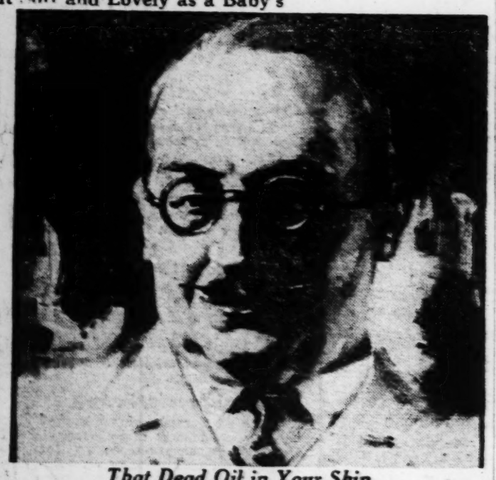
I Will Make You a Beautiful Woman in One Day

Will Lighten Your Skin Five Shades and Make It Soft and Lovely as a Baby's



That Dead Oil in Your Skin

The Cause of Sallow, Muddy Complexions

By DR. PAUL ROXLEY

This is frankly to women and girls with muddy, dull and lifeless complexions, who want to be relieved of their embarrassment—quickly. Also to women who want to look younger than their years.

It offers to make them over in less than five minutes. To leave the skin as soft and white and lovely as a baby's. And to remove fine lines, freckles, blackheads, oiliness—all as if by magic.

It offers a written guarantee to do those things. So the user assumes no risk.

No claw pack. No harsh chemicals. No bleach, but a delicate cream-poultice, composed of plants and flowers. A secret blendine that has amazed the world of science.

Dead Oil in Skin.

Dermatologists of note and skin specialists have long been agreed upon the cause of bad complexions.

It is an oil that solidifies in the pores of the skin. A dead oil that provides a natural breeding place for germs.

The healthy action of this oil is to keep the skin soft. And in that way it serves a useful purpose.

But frequently it hardens in the pores and prevents them from acting. Impurities accumulate. Germ life multiplies. Bacteria by the million feed in it. Under a microscope a skin thus clogged is not a pretty picture.

Then comes a muddy, ugly skin. Blackhead follow. Also shallowness, greasiness, roughness and eruptions.

With two fingers, press a spot on your face or nose. You will see the oil come out. It is the source of most skin trouble.

To remove that oil and destroy the germs has long been the problem of science.

Now Removed Instantly.

Now I offer a scientifically tested way to remove it. A method without parallel in dermatological science.

I have used it for years in my private practice, charging wealthy women large fees to apply it. Many internationally noted social leaders attribute their beauty to this method.

In five minutes it removes every impurity. It cleanses every pore, sterilizes it, removes the germs and combats them.

With your own eyes you can see the blackheads, the germ-infected oil come out. Then go to your mirror. You will scarce ly believe what it tells you.

Beauty in 5 Minutes.

Note that your skin is four to seven shades lighter. Mark its natural, radiant bloom, the freedom from blackheads and freckles. The absence of the fine lines which tell a woman's years. You will call it magic.

These are the scientific facts. Highest authorities subscribe to them. Anyone who looks at your face notes them quickly. And your own mirror proves them to be true.

Now, I agree to do these things for you. To give beauty advance charm. the skin of a baby today.

And I guarantee it in writing. Hence it is folly not to make the test.

Full directions come with it. Not a clay pack, remember. An exquisite cream poultice. You apply it, let it remain five minutes. Then in all.

FOR HOME USE

The secret preparation—Fayte—used in working these amazing skin transformations is now obtainable for home use. Your dealer will supply you or we will send direct for a limited time, if you mail the coupon below.

Under the Tea Table

—six feet of interest to every woman

HE feet in the middle have comfort at the sacrifice of style. One must, indeed, want comfort to be seen in shoes like those.

The feet to the right have style—and discomfort—which is too high a price to pay for style.

The feet at the left are smartly and becomingly clad—up to the last tick of Fashion's clock—yet, they are comfortable beyond belief.

Johansen Feeture Arch Shoes support the arch firmly—yet they are flexible, yielding to every movement of the foot. Made in the newest leathers and materials. See the styles we have just brought out.

NEWS OF MISSOURI FOLK AT NATIONAL CAPITAL

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—What Champ Clark used to call "the tripartite glory of the U. S. A." was demonstrated in Washington Thursday night when the U. S. Supreme Court, headed by Chief Justice Taft, were the guests in whose honor President and Mrs. Coolidge entertained at the second state reception of the season.

Although the Justices did not appear in wigs and robes as in the days of John Marshall, brilliancy was lent to the scene by the beauty of the gowns worn by the women guests and the gay uniforms of the diplomats.

Interested spectators of the scene, unfamiliar to them, were the sons of President and Mrs. Coolidge. Both looked boyish and happy, and they held quite an impromptu reception of their own, much to their secret dismay, if the truth must be told. Calvin Coolidge Jr., who is musical in his tastes, spent the greater part of the evening watching the gyrations of the leader of the Marine band and seemed fascinated by the "President's own" musical organization. He was heard to confide to a friend that he would like a chance at the "big bass drum" from which a diminutive drummer managed to get much noise.

Notables of the Senate and House were present, and altogether the throng numbered 3200.

Among the women of the Missouri colony whose gowns were specially observed were Mrs. Selden P. Spencer, black velvet, with sequins of dark blue, made in semi-draped fashion; Mrs. Frederice Dent Grant, who was one of the guests in the blueroom, cloth of silver with overdress of silver lace draped on one side and diamond ornaments; Mrs. Leigh Palmer, wife of the new head of the Shipping Board, blue chiffon trimmed with bouquets of silk forget-me-nots, a long train completing the costume; Mrs. Breckenridge Long, gray chiffon velvet, made with a court train and trimmed with rare old lace; Mrs. Cleveland Newton, pink chiffon and chantilly lace, made with a one-piece effect, with semitrain, and Mrs. Howard L. Hodgkins, in black velvet and pearls.

An unusual event occurred in a Washington Theater on Monday night when three women who had been honored as "first ladies of the land," one the present incumbent of that post and two predecessors, sat in the same theater in different boxes watching John Barrymore's "Hamlet." All eyes were on the trio between the acts. They were Mrs. Calvin Coolidge, Mrs. Woodrow Wilson and Mrs. William Howard Taft.

Representative and Mrs. Sam C. Major of Missouri and their daughter, Miss Sarah, have taken an apartment at the Chaumont for the winter.

Miss Bessie Mckeldin, daughter of Mrs. Leigh Palmer, wife of the newly elected chairman of the United States Shipping Board, who claims Missouri as his native State, is considered one of the most beautiful debutantes of the season. Miss Mckeldin and Miss Janet Moffett, daughter of Rear Admiral and Mrs. William A. Moffett, will open a tearoom for the benefit of the fund for the fatherless children of Greece, Jan. 19. This tearoom is being sponsored by many of the most distinguished men and women in Washington and doubtless will be a fashionable rendezvous for the remainder of the season.

Miss Mekeldin has been entertained and feted during the last few weeks and tomorrow will be the guest in whose honor Miss Moffett will entertain at luncheon. She was one of the debutantes assisting at the home of Mrs. Edwin Denby, wife of the Secretary of the Navy.

Col. and Mrs. James Carson Breckenridge will entertain at dinner next week in honor of Major-General and Mrs. George Barnett. Mrs. Breckinridge entertained a party of friends for the concert of the Marine Band at the Marine Barracks, of which her husband is in command.

Mrs. Bessie Bruggeman was one of the speakers at the evening meeting of the General Board of the General Federation of Women's Clubs on Thursday night. Mrs. Bruggeman told of her duties as chairman of the Employes Compensation Commission. She wore a silver lace gown, embroidered in rhinestones. She went to the White House reception after the meeting.

Miss Bertha Coontz, who came to Washington for the holidays, has returned to school. Admiral Coontz has gone to New York for several weeks. Mrs. Coontz was among those at home at the Navy Yard last Monday. Mrs. James Carson Breckenridge also was at home on Monday when she had assisting her a number of the women of the Missouri colony in Washington.

At the meeting of the Missouri Society next week, stories of Missouri will be told by the members of the Missouri delegation. Representative Cleveland Newton, president, will preside.

Proposed Amendments Indorsed.

The North St. Louis Business Men's Association Thursday night indorsed all of the 21 proposed amendments to the State convention to be voted on at the special election, Feb. 26. The amendments were discussed at meetings.

A Famou

For 40 years—due

By Edna W

For two score years I have been famous beauty. For 32 years a stage star. Yet I still play young girls' parts. And I look as young and winsome as I did when I began.

The reason lies in beauty helps for which I searched the world. I have supplied them to many others, and they secured like results. I know them to be the best helps in existence. So, by countless requests, I have now arranged so all who wish may get them.

A new white clay

Famous beauties have for ages used some facial clay. French experts first taught me to use it, many years ago. Then all clays were crude and muddy, as many are today.
Since then science has found ways to multiply their benefits.

The clay I now use is based on years of scientific study. It is the pure clay which experts proved bring the maximum results.

It is refined clay, with the useless and removed. It is white and clean and dainty. It embodies several added factors which bring multiplied results.

This super-clay, which I call
White Youth Clay, will bring surprising new ideas of what clay can do.

New bloom at once

New beauty and new bloom come quickly to the user of Youth Clay.
It purges the skin of all that clogs the causes of sallowness, blackheads and blemishes.

A Famous Beauty

For 40 years—due to a French-type clay
By Edna Wallace Hopper

For two score years I have been a famous beauty. For 32 years a stage star. Yet I still play young girls' parts. And I look as young and win-some as I did when I began.

The reason lies in beauty helps for which I searched the world. I have supplied them to many others, and they secured like results. I know them to be the best helps in existence. So, by countless requests, I have now arranged so all who wish may get them.

A new white clay

Famous beauties have for ages used some facial clay. French experts first taught me to use it, many years ago. Then all clays were crude and muddy, as many are today. Since then science has found ways to multiply their benefits.

The clay I now use is based on 20 years of scientific study. It is that pure clay which experts proved to bring the maximum results.

It is refined clay, with the useless part removed. It is white and clean and dainty. It embodies several added factors which bring multiplied results.

This super-clay, which I call my White Youth Clay, will bring to anyone new ideas of what clay can do.

New bloom at once

New beauty and new bloom come quickly to the user of Youth Clay. It purges the skin of all that clogs it—the causes of sallowness, blackheads and blemishes.

It brings the blood to the skin to nourish and revive it. The result is that rosy afterglow which so amazes and delights.

It firms the skin, combats all lines and wrinkles, reduces enlarged pores. Thus many women, in 30 minutes, seem to drop ten years. And my smooth, baby-like complexion shows what constant use will do.

One must use clay

Every girl and woman should use clay in justice to herself. No one can look her best without it. None can keep her bloom and contour, as have I. Users of clay stand out in any crowd.

But the clay of today is this new-type clay—my White Youth Clay—which science has perfected.

Edna Wallace Hopper's Youth Clay is now supplied by all druggists and toilet counters. Price, 50c and $1 per tube. Also my Youth Cream, which should follow the clay. Also my Facial Youth, my famous liquid cleanser. Also my Hair Youth, which brought my luxuriant hair. My Beauty Book comes with each.

I urge every girl and woman to use these matchless helps. Let them bring you what they brought to me and mine.

Got the Real Thing

"For five long years I suffered with stomach trouble and what the doctors called gall stone colic, and all said nothing but an operation would do me any good. A friend who had taken your medicine advised me to try it, and I found it to be the real thing. I feel better than I have in eight years and I am praising God for Mayr's Wonderful Remedy." It is a simple, harmless preparation that removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. Sage Tea Turns Gray Hair Dark

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this famous old recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, at a small cost.

Don't stay gray! Try it! No one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it, and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy and attractive.

Chop Ten Years Off Your Age!

There is a great deal of talk going on all over the world today respecting the rejuvenation of the aged by the so-called gland treatment.

All of this is mostly idle conversation, as this matter is as yet entirely in the experimental stage.

However, for those suffering from impairment of vision, glasses frequently enable one to chop ten years from their apparent age, as that drawn and strained look about the eyes quickly disappears when you are fitted with the particular glasses you require to normalize your vision.

Over 20 years' specialization in the correction of defective vision by properly prescribed glasses, and the most modern and up-to-date laboratory facilities for the grinding of lenses, guarantee your complete satisfaction.

Frederic J. Libby, executive secretary of the National Council for Prevention of War, with headquarters at Washington, today will open a three-day campaign of speech-making in St. Louis, discussing the abolition of war through the co-ordination of all peace-working agencies in this country for co-operation with similar agencies of other nations.

Born and educated in Maine, graduating from Bowdoin College and Andover Theological Seminary, Libby studied at Oxford and at German universities. He served as pastor of the Union Congregational Church at Magnolia, Mass., for seven years, and later visited and studied conditions in Japan, China, Australia, New Zealand and islands of the Pacific Ocean. He taught seven years at Phillips-Exeter Academy. In 1918, he went to Europe with the Quaker Relief Committee, returning after the war as the society's European commissioner for reconstruction. He worked in Germany, Poland, Austria, France and Serbia. He became a Friend.

Has Record Behind Him.

Returning to this country, Libby started to organize a movement to bring together all forces working to abolish war. He is credited with being instrumental in 1921 in bringing together 17 national organizations supporting the plan for the limitation of armaments into the National Council for the Prevention of War. Under his direction as executive secretary, the council has grown in two years to include 36 national organizations and has developed contact with European peace-seeking groups.

Libby returned recently from a speaking tour in England. His purpose here is to explain the purposes and activities of his organization, which is described as composed of "various elements—the absolute pacifists, the League of Nations Union supporters and the labor groups supporting an international league based on public opinion, not coercion."

His Speaking Schedule.

Libby's St. Louis speaking schedule is as follows:

Today — 4:30 p. m., Christ Church Cathedral; 8 p. m., St. Louis Community Forum at Sheldon Memorial Hall, subject "National Defense Act and Its Significance to Us."

Tomorrow—9:30 a. m., Teachers' College, subject, "The Character of the Next War;" noon, the Town Club, subject, "War Against War;" 3:30 p. m., Council of Jewish Women at Temple Israel; 4:30 p. m., conference with the committee on International Affairs of th College Club.

Tuesday—8:50 a. m., Soldan High School; 3 p. m., International Study group of League of Women Voters in library of Sheldon Memorial, subject, "International Agencies for World Peace;" 6:30 p. m., Central Y. W. C. A.; 8:30 p. m., Current Topics Club at Temple Israel.

CONTEST OVER AN ESTATE VALUED AT $75,000 SETTLED

Suit to Set Aside Will of Mrs. Martha Hewitt Dropped After Six Years.

Contest of the will of Mrs. Martha Hewitt, who left an estate valued at $75,000, was ended yesterday by Circuit Judge Miller issuing a formal order sustaining the document. It was said that the case had been compromised. The terms were not made public.

Suit to set aside the will was filed six years ago by Mrs. Hewitt's three sons—John, Thomas and Edward Hewitt. They averred that their mother was not of sound and disposing mind when she executed the document about a year before her death naming their sister, Mrs. Hattie L. O'Rourke, with whom Mrs. Hewitt lived at 1323 South Jefferson avenue, as chief beneficiary of a substantial part of her estate.

A jury once set aside the will, but a new trial was granted on the ground that the verdict was against the evidence. Mrs. Hewitt was past 90 years old at her death on Jan. 18, 1916. Seven children survived her.

Carter to Address Men's Club.

W. Frank Carter will address the Jewish Orphans' Home Men's Club, Tuesday evening, at the Washington hotel on "Youth." The annual election of officers and directors will be held. The object of the organization is the building of a home for the Jewish orphans of St. Louis and surrounding territory. A site for the home comprising over four acres has recently been purchased on Oakland avenue, opposite Forest Park.

GALLSTONES

Dr. E. E. Paddock, Dept. 101, Kansas City, Mo., says about one person in ten has infected gallbladder or gallstones and neglect often leads to surgery. But many people are too old, weak or ill for dangerous operation. These people reasonably wish to avoid suffering and obtain relief with medicines. The Doctor began specializing on these troubles 25 years ago and his treatments have been of untold value to thousands all over the U. S. Hundreds of letters testify to health restored and freedom from suffering. Rather than suffer or let conditions grow worse and before you decide on surgery write the Doctor for his FREE BOOKLET describing gallstones and explaining this home treatment.

ELECTRICAL DISPLAY TO HELP ADVERTISE THRIFT WEEK

An electrically lighted display at Grand and Washington boulevards to represent a gigantic bank book with an American eagle hovering above will be a novel feature of the local observance of "Thrift Week," Jan. 17-23. Beneath the eagle will be a bust of Benjamin Franklin, known as the Father of Thrift in America, whose birthday opens Thrift Week.

Through the co-operation of the Flying Club an airship will fly over the city three days during the week and drop leaflets preaching thrift. Industrial concerns will place Thrift Week cards in pay envelopes. Talks on thrift will be made at meetings of various organizations. Budget books will be distributed by banks and citizens will be urged to keep household budgets.

Brown Brothers Featured With Female Impersonator at American—Four Marxes Head Musical Comedy at Shubert-Jefferson.

A NEW arrival in the prolific family of so-called revues, and a musical comedy compose the fare offered this week to theatergoers. Both open tonight. One is the "Black and White Revue of 1924," featuring Julian Eltinge, female impersonator, and the Brown Brothers of Saxophone fame, who will hold forth at the American. The other is "I'll Say She Is," at the Shubert-Jefferson, and its principal players are the Four Marx Brothers, comedians.

"Outward Bound" Makes Stage History

NEW YORK, Jan. 12.

IN "Outward Bound," a play by young Sutton Vane of London, which reached the New York stage Monday night at the Ritz, there are three acts and four scenes, but only one stage setting—that of a faithful ocean liner carrying seven pasengers. It is apparently a fully equipped and regular ship. There is even a bar, well stocked with black bottles, and there is a bartender-steward who polishes the glasses with professional aptitude.

Nevertheless, there gradually develops something uncanny in the atmosphere of the boat. Nobody can remember a destination. There is no crew. At night there are no lights to port or starboard. It is for Prior, a young dipsomaniac on board, to gather from a pair of lovers, supposed suicides for love's sake, the idea—confirmed as truth by the steward—that all hands are dead; that the ship is bound "for heaven and hell—they are the same."

This is the situation which makes Mr. Vanes' drama a mystery play of the infinite. It is touched with a most extraordinary imagination. It mingles humor, pathos and surprise into a most absorbing fineness. It is the real news of the present dramatic season. It goes briskly enough, with an abundance of comedy lines. But there are moments when the theater rests under a breathless hush. There is a finale which leaves the audience spellbound under the magic of a new dramatic hour.

Big Business Snobbery.

BIG Business is represented pompously on the death-ship by one Lingley, of Lingley, Ltd. He calls a board meeting in the face of the dread emergency, as Prior says, "to discover if we have immortal souls and if it is well to pool them." Social pretense is on hand in the person of Mrs. Cliveden-Banks, who snubs little Midget, the scrubwoman, and would be exclusive even in death. The Rev. William Duke completes the company on board—a young preacher from the slums who fears needlessly that, being dead, he has lost his job.

In the last act the situation is changed by the arrival of the Great Examiner, who proceeds to separate the sheep from the goats. Leading to this climax, we have not so much the development of a plot or story as the gradual crescendo of a mood. First comes the suggestion, and then the march, the gathering of forces. Emotion drifts in like a fog, as light-footed and just as irresistible.

In such a play, there is need of inspired and imaginative acting, and no cast of the season has been so consistently fine. Perhaps there is reason to single out Alfred Lunt as Prior, since he has the important task of setting the mood at the very beginning. Lyonel Watts is extremely good in the role of the curate. The young suicide-lovers who pervade the play and have the last scene to themselves are played by Leslie Howard and Margalo Gillmore.

She realizes the beautiful poignancy of the final scene, and brings it to full life with thoroughgoing faith. One will long remember her cry in that last act and her swift rush out into the darkness. The cast is admirably completed by Beryl Mercer as Mrs. Midget, Lyonel Watts as well-mannered Duke, Dudley Digges, as the surprisingly offhand Examiner; J. M. Kerrigan as the urbane steward, and Eugene Powers as the strenuously assured Lingley. The playwright is an English actor, and his drama is at present one of the reigning successes of the London stage.

Andre Charlot's Revue.

IT is not the English girl so much as the English joke which is glorified in "Andre Charlot's Revue of 1924," which was presented Thursday night at the Times Square Theater. Judging from the choral numbers, this importation from London offers no great threat to the American home. But it seems that these English invaders have the right idea about sketches. Their highly original notion is that a short sketch should be short. Most of the turns are highly entertaining.

The success of the piece rests mostly on the three principals. Costuming, settings and so forth are quite secondary. Beatrice Lillie, Gertrude Lawrence and Jack Buchanan are worth a good deal more than their weight in gold cloth and velvet hangings. Miss Lillie is that

Norma Talmadge and Joseph Schildkraut, in "The Song of Love"—Grand Central, West End Lyric and Capitol.

Claire McDowell, George Hackathorne and Lloyd Hughes, in "Judgment of the Storm"—Kings.

In the same act with Miss Sanderson at the Orpheum is Frank Crumit, featured comedian in "Tangerine," of which she was the star. They have several duet numbers, and are assisted by Herman Huppfel, pianist and composer. Thomas E. Shea, dramatic actor, appears in excerpts from three plays, "Richelieu," "The Bells," and "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde." Janet and Jay Velie present songs and dances. Miss Velie had the title role in the Cohan piece, "Mary," and her brother was with Ed Wynn in "The Perfect Fool." They are aided by Muriel Pollock, pianist. Glenn and Jenkins return in their funny blackface skit, "Working for the Railroad." The bill is completed by Rome and Gaut, comic dancers; Remos and three midgets, equilibrists, and the McGood-Lenzen troupe of acrobats.

Elsie Janis on Jan. 27.

ORPHEUM announcements are Elsie Janis, on Jan. 27; Nora Bayes, Feb. 3, and the S. S. Leand Paul Nolan and a company.

The Columbia's featured bit is a comedy playlet "Pinched," played by Edward Sprague, Nesbit Scoville, and Alice and Herbert Duffy. Other items include Earl Faber and Margie King, in "Smart Bits;" the Amaranth Sisters, dancers and athletes; the Gene Oliver Comedians, Andrus and George, in "Husbands a la Carte," and Swain's happy family of cats and rats. The film is A. T. Locke's "Alimony," with Grace Darmond, Warner Baxter and Ruby Miller.

Gattison Jones, Elsie Elliott and Hal Fisher's collegiate orchestra lead the program at the Grand Opera House, in a song and dance turn. The bill includes Cooke, Mortimer and Harvey, cyclists; the Temple Four, blackface comedians; the Ling Foo troupe of magicians, Dan Caslar and the Beasley twins, Conn and Albert, Evans and Pearl, Cissie Shannon and J. L. Beatty, and the Jennier brothers. The burlesque show at the Gayety is "Jig Time," with Claire Devine,

PASSION PLAY ACTORS WILL BE IN ST. LOUIS JAN. 23-30

Will be Present at Exhibit of Their Handicraft in the Coliseum.

The actors in the Passion Play of Oberammergau who are touring this country to exhibit articles of handicraft to raise funds for their fellow villagers, will be in St. Louis from Jan. 23 to 30, at the Coliseum.

Their wood carving, pottery and paintings will be placed on exhibition at the Coliseum, and they will be there to tell about their lives. Anton Lang, who plays the "Christ" in the decennial Passion plays, is their leader. They have refused a large sum for the right to make motion pictures of their drama, and other attempts to commercialize it.

Arrangements for the St. Louis visit are in charge of Frank R. Tate, Central National Bank Building.

"Flaming Barriers;" "The Song of Love," On Film Programs

"Judgment of the Storm," Hunchback of Notre Dame," Darling of New York" and "Alimony" Are Other Local Features.

AT the Missouri Theater this week "Flaming Barriers," featuring Jacqueline Logan, Antonio Moreno and Walter Hiers, is the photoplay attraction. The story is by Byron Morgan. This is an automobile story, with variations such as a forest fire, airplane dashes, motor racing and the like. The story concerns Patrick Malone, an inventor who devises a fast motor fire truck, but lack of finances makes it impossible for him to market and exploit the truck. His daughter, Jerry, believes in the truck, as also does Joseph Pickens, the "Squire," who is unscrupulous in his business dealings and is trying to get hold of the invention and marry Jerry. An Eastern concern interested in the truck sends Sam Barton to act as an adviser to Malone. A great forest fire breaks out that threatens the town and Barton seizes this as a psychological time to demonstrate the efficiency of the truck. Pickens does his best to thwart Barton's plan. When the town seems hopelessly in the path of the flames, Pickens abducts Jerry and tries to get away. Barton starts in pursuit, and the thrills begin. The story leads thrilling airplane nose dives, tail spins and a head-on collision. Also a heroic stand of hundreds of men battling the fire.

Mack Sennett's latest comedy, "Picking Peaches," featuring Harry Langdon, will be presented. Eileen Van Biene, "The Crinoline Girl," is held over for the second week.

C. Sharpe-Minor, on his fourth week, will present a novelty organ number called "Little Old St. Louis."

Norma Talmadge in "The Song of Love," a story of the desert, is the picture attraction at the Grand Central, West End Lyric and Capitol theaters. Joseph Schildkraut, noted stage star, and Arthur Carewe, who was last seen as Svengali in "Trilby," have the principal masculine roles.

The Grand Central will feature Art Lee Utt at the new organ, playing his special arrangement on "I Love You," which introduces the refrain from Victor Herbert's "When You're Away." The organ, introduced last week, is now installed in its entirety with all effects and instruments connected. It is the only organ in St. Louis which has a "rising console," attaining an elevation of six feet as the organist plays.

"The Song of Love" has the atmosphere of "The Sheik," except in its story the love affair of a white man and a native girl is related. Rose-of-all-the-world is a favorite dancing girl with whom a fanatic leader of a desert tribe is in love. He plans the overthrow of the French rule. A secret service man is sent by the French to discover the chieftain's plans. He disguises himself as a Sheik. Rose-of-all-the-world is delegated to learn his identity and business, but instead she falls in love with him gives him the information he seeks. She discovers that his love was a trick and she is heart-broken, but continues to love him.

At the Delmonte Theater this week the feature picture is "The Man Life Passed By." The Novak Sisters — Jane and Eva — are starred with Hobart Bosworth and Cullen Landis.

Percy Marmont has the title role of a man whose bitterness against the world nearly proves his own undoing, until love takes a hand in the person of the daughter of his worst enemy. Hobart Bosworth is "Iron Man" Moore, who ruined the unrecognized inventor. Jane and Eva Novak have sister roles as his daughters. Cullen Landis is the father's secretary, in love with the younger daughter. The Graves Brothers Company presents the tabloid musical comedy "Sputters."

The principal attraction for the week at the Kings Theater is "Judgment of the Storm," a photoplay written according to the specifications of a widely known school of photoplay writing. In the cast are Lloyd Hughes, Lucille Ricksen, George Hackathorne, Myrtle Stedman and Bruce Gordon.

This is a melodramatic story in which a young collegian learns that his mother is the proprietor of a notorious gambling den in "the big city." He goes to this gambling house and there is a tragedy in which his best friend is killed. This friend also is his sweetheart's brother. To atone for the death of his friend, the hero "binds himself out" to the slain young man's family. The big climax comes with a terific winter storm in which the young man and his gambling house mother are reconciled when they find themselves both trying to save the lives of two children who are exposed to the rigors of the storm.

"The Hunchback of Notre Dame" goes into its second week at the Pershing. The Rivoli's feature is Baby Peggy in "The Darling of New York." The Columbia has Grace Darmond in "Alimony."

What They Are Doing in The Movie Studios

Dustin Farnum and Patsy Ruth Miller have been engaged by Vitagraph for leading roles in "A Tale of Red Roses," the next David Smith production, adapted from the novel by George Randolph Chester.

Vitagraph will soon release "The Man From Brodney's," a romance adapted from the novel by George Barr McCutcheon. J. Warren Kerrigon heads a cast including Alice Calhoun, Miss DuPont, Wanda Hawley, Pat O'Malley and Kathleen Key. A battle between hordes of natives and the white guests at a chateau on the Island of Japat provides one of the thrills.

Anna Katharine Green, the author of "The Leavenworth Case," which Whitman Bennett translated to the screen, is now 77 years old. She lives in Rochester, N. Y.

House records established only a few months ago by "The Covered Wagon," at Grauman's Egyptian Theater, Los Angeles, have already been broken by "The Ten Commandments," Cecil B. De Mille's production for Paramount, by $338. The gross receipts for the week ending Dec. 13, were $25,470. In addition there is an advance sale of $13,500, which is another record for the theater.

"The Covered Wagon" has begun an engagement in Paris. An elaborate presentation which drew many distinguished Parisians was given the James Cruze Paramount production at the Madeleine Theater on Dec. 21.

The complete cast for Gloria Swanson's next Paramount picture, "A Society Scandal," which was begun a few days ago at the Long Island Studio includes Rod La Rocque, Ricard Cortez, Mrs. Ida Waterman, Allan Simpson, Mrs. Converse, Frazer Coalter, Mrs. Catherin Proctor, Yvonne Hughes, Wilfred Donovan, Cornelius Keefe, Catherin Coleburn, Marie Shelton and Dorothy Stokes.

Patsy Ruth Miller has been signed by Paramount to play the leading feminine role in the forthcoming Herbert Brenon production, "The Breaking Point." Herbert Brenon, who will produce this Paramount picture, recently finished "Shadows of Paris," starring Pola Negri, and also produced the preceding Pola Negri picture, "The Spanish Dancer."

William de Mille has begun the Paramount production of "Icebound," an adaptation by Clara Beranger of the prize stage success of the same name by Owen Davis. The turning of the first crank was something of an event at the studio, inasmuch as it marked the first William de Mille production in the East. Heretofore he has made all his pictures at the West Coast studios.

Leslie Austen, who plays the hero lead in "Let No Man Put Asunder," began his stage career with the Ben Greet Players and has supported such stage stars as Ethel Barrymore, Annie Russell and Arnold Day. Picture fans remember him as playing leads to Pauline Frederick, who has the leading role in this picture; Mae Marsh, Alice Brady and Madge Kennedy.

Pageant Chorus to Sing 'New Life' on Tuesday

AN imposing body of performers will unite for the first St. Louis presentation of Ermanno Wolf-Ferrari's oratorio, "The New Life," Tuesday night at the Odeon. There will be the Pageant Choral Society of 200 voices, the entire Sympathy Orchestra, the boys' choirs of the Church of the Ascension and of St. George's Episcopal Church, and two soloists—Mrs. Karl Kimmel, soprano, and Gwilym Miles, baritone, both of this city.

The work is based on "La Vita Nuova," 'a curious little volume in prose and verse, written by Dante about the year 1292. It tells, with terrible violence of emotion, how the poet, at the age of 9, fell in love with a girl one year younger than himself, in Florence, and describes the bliss and sorrow of that love to its earthly end—the death of the beloved one at the age of 24.

Who the maiden was we are not told. In the beginning of the work Dante calls her "the divine mistress of my spirit, who was called Beatrice by many who knew not what name to give her." The writing of "La Vita Uuova" led to the conception and composition of Dante's stupendous masterpiece, the "Divina Commedia," in which Beatrice, from the beyond, sends the shade of Virgil to guide the poet's erring soul. "La Vita Nuova" has been termed "the most delicious work produced by the Middle Ages; all is softness, tenderness, silent longing, pious sentiment."

Novel Use of Piano.

THE oratorio is written for two mixed choirs, boys' choir, soprano and baritone solo and full orchestra, including seven kettledrums, organ and pianoforte. The piano has novel employment; sometimes it accompanies the soloists, and again it is used as an orchestral instrument. There is one passage for strings, piano, two harps and the septet of timpani.

The compostion opens with a prologue, which glorifies love as the conqueror of death, and leads through a mighty chorus enlisting orchestra, organ and choirs to the first part, in which the poet celebrates the beauty of love. It begins with a ballata for baritone, "Sweet Rose of the Morning," with choral accompaniment. A "Dance of Angels," for orchestra, succeeds; and then comes an arioso, "Ye Ladies All," for baritone. A florid sonetto for baritone ensues, "Within My Lady's Eyes;" the dance recurs; and then the chorus sings a canzone, which brings the first part to an end.

Intermezzo Between Parts.

BETWEEN this and the second part comes an intermezzo, "which casts the first shadows of death over the poem. It is a transfigured, somber glorification of death, and is founded on two sonnets inspired by the death of Beatrice's father." The intermezzo is partly for orchestra alone and partly for baritone and chorus.

The second part is a lament over the death of Beatrice, who is represented by a solo violin, and terminates with the words, "She lives in light." The soprano soloist appears in the prologue and finale.

Frederick Fischer will conduct the performance. "The New Life," completed in 1901, had its first performance at Munich in 1903. It has been given in this country by the North Shore Festival Society of Chicago, the Oratorio Society of Bridgeport, Conn., and the Festival Society of Ann Arbor, Mich. The program here will also include the prologue to Bossi's "Paradise Lost."

DRAINAGE AND LEVEE MEN TO MEET THIS WEEK IN ST. LOUIS

Flood and Low Water Control on Lakes-to-Gulf Waterway to Be Discussed.

The National Drainage Congress will hold its twelfth annual convention jointly with the Levee and Drainage Contractors' Association Wednesday and Thursday at Hotel Jefferson.

The program includes reports of authorities on new ideas in land reclamation or flood protection and an effort to present the whole scheme so that each engineer may gain a national perspective.

The effect of drainage development on rainfall and wild animal and plant life, the relation of colonization to the reclamation of wild land, the prospects of expansion of the farming area in relation to the outlook for reclamation, and what drainage reclamation has accomplished, are to be discussed by Federal and State experts Wednesday afternoon.

Progress in mastering the Everglades will be detailed Thursday morning. That afternoon there will be addresses on flood and low pressure control in the Mississippi Valley and on the "Lakes-to-the-Gulf" waterway. A dinner and smoker will be given Wednesday night.

Arliss Says Actor Should Feel Emotions He Conveys

I ALWAYS hesitate (writes George Arliss in the Illustrated London News) to give any opinion on the art of acting. On the judgment of other arts I am more courageous. I feel sure that I could offer valuable suggestions to the house-painter as I watch him at his work, or to the man who comes to put in the new stove, but I have not the same confidence in my ability to offer any really useful hints to actors. I think that the technic of the actor's art is more or less on hard and fast lines that can be laid down with some certainty, but, beyond that, the art of acting is so dependent upon the temperament and the method of the individual, the art of concealing art is so subtle and variable that it seems futile to offer one's own impressions.

But Mr. Grein has done me the honor to invite my opinion on "Acting and Feeling," so I offer it merely as it applies to myself without suggesting that it will be of value to another member of my own profession. Mr. Grein has cited several cases designed apparently to show that it is not necessary for the actor to feel his part in order to move his audience.

There can be little doubt that in certain telling situations supplied by the author, an actor who is master of his art can move an audience without himself being moved, and I have known many instances where the play is so appealing that even a bad actor incapable of great feeling has succeeded in creating a deep impression upon his audience.

Truest Acting From Within.

BUT if it is suggested that it is an actual advantage for the actor to abstain from feeling the emotions that he is intended to arouse, then I am bound to say that this is entirely contrary to my own conviction. However great an impression an actor may create by this method, I can never be convinced that he would not have made a still deeper impression if he had felt the emotion himself. Surely the best and truest acting must come from within and not be merely external.

I am not in favor of an actor who is so emotional that he gives a different performance every night; as a rule he is a temperamental performer but not a good actor. In my opinion the best actor is likely to be the man who forms an absolutely fixed opinion of his character during the period of rehearsal, and maintains his creation during the entire run of the play. But that is not to say he may not improve it in detail, and I fail to see how he is to enrich his performance if he does not feel it.

He cannot be guided by laughs or applause from the front. To guage success by these audible punctuation marks is most dangerous and is likely to lead to destruction. Then, how are we to get these sudden flashes that enrich a performance, and that only appear when an actor comes in contact with an audience—how are we to get them if we do not feel?

Eyes Are Best Assistants.

COQUELIN had a great personality, and could act while thinking of other things with less detriment to his reputation than the majority of actors. I find that if I think of other things my audience follows my example, and I am recalled by hearing cough, cough, cough from different quarters of the house. If I then pull myself together and think of what I am doing, I can generally succeed in bringing the audience back again. And I can't help wondering what happened to Coquelin's eyes when he was thinking of other things.

An actor who has ever played in the "movies" will have discovered that the camera registers thought through the eyes; the most fleeting emotion is recorded, and the camera has no mercy on the actor who is thinking of other things or is incapable of imagination, and what the camera sees, the audience sees—in a lesser degree perhaps, but sufficiently plainly. My opinion is that the eyes are the actor's most valuable assistants if legitimately used, and that they cannot truly register an emotion that is not behind them.

The instance given by Mr. Grein of the young lady who was overcome by her emotion and burst into such floods of tears that the audience were dissolved in laughter is no argument against feeling. She didn't know her business; she was not a trained actress.

Mustn't Lose Self in Emotions.

ACTING is an art, not merely an exhibition of emotions. An actor doesn't lose himself on the stage; if he did, there would be nothing to prevent his walking off the stage in his transports of emotion and finishing his big scene in Piccadilly Circus. But his emotion need be no less sincere because it is harnessed; it may be just as true.

In real life we have to exercise control. When we are in the greatest distress we are generally conscious that we must not make an exhibition of ourselves, but we do not feel our grief any the less poignantly. And so in feeling on the stage, the fact that we are conscious of our audience and of the mechanical limitations of the theater should not prevent the trained actor from deep feeling.

My opinion is that the practiced actor is at his best when he feels the emotion that he is attempting to convey to his audience.

unusual person, an admirable female clown. She manages to be slim, beautiful and enormously funny at the same time. Miss Lawrence's chief contribution is an exceedingly deft delivery of a refreshingly audacious song. Jack Buchanan is an excellent dancer with a good sense for burlesque.

As in all British musical shows, there is quite a number of fearful jokes, but many good ones as well. And there is not a little joyousness in the lyrics. This revue is far less professional than is customary in such shows in this country, but even in an entertainment so brisk and pleasant a touch of amateur spirit is more than welcome.

"The Miracle" on Tuesday.

STILL another postponement delays the premier of "The Miracle," at the Century, until Tuesday night. Leo Carillo, in "Gypsy Jim," by Oscar Hammerstein II and Milton Gropper, comes Monday night to the Forty-ninth Street Theater. A comedy with the inspired title of "Fanshastics," by Lawrence Eyre, will be presented Wednesday at Henry Miller's Theater. In the cast are Grace George, Laura Hope Crewes, John Miltern, Byron Churchill and others. "The Road Together," by George Middleton, starring Marjorie Rambeau, opens Thursday at the Frazee.

Opening Monday night in Atlantic City is "The Show-Off," a three-act comedy by George Kelly, author of "The Torchbearers."

Inside information regarding Duse's shift in management from Morris Gest to the Selwyns and Fortune Gallo brings certain statistics to the surface Gest paid the tragedienne $2000 a performance, plus $750 a week for her company. This gave her a weekly bankroll of $4750. The new managers increased the figure to $6000.

Eleanor Painter appeared in "The Chiffon Girl" Monday night at Bridgeport, Conn. . . . "For All of Us," with William Hodge, will move Monday night from the Forty-ninth Street Theater to the Ambassador, and Alice Delysia's musical revue, "Topics of 1923," will go to the Winter Garden.

Sally Long, film actress and former "Follies" girl, has joined the second offering to be sponsored by the new regime at Provincetown Playhouse will be "Fashion," which was written in 1845 by Anna Cora Mowatt, first feminine playwright in this country.

"Abie's Irish Rose," which has run longer in New York than any current play, will close in another week at the Republic Theater. . . . There are plans for moving "Roseanne" from the Greenwich Village Theater to the Century Roof. . . . By the end of the month, "Little Miss Bluebeard," with Irene Bordoni, is to close at the Lyceum, and will probably be followed by Clemence Dane's new play, "The Way Things Happen," starring Katherine Cornell.

John Barrymore has canceled the four weeks in "Hamlet" with which he was to regale Chicago, and will close his tour in a fortnight. . . . Cyril Maude has been called home by the illness of his wife, and his role in "Aren't We All?" is being played by G. P. Huntley.

Carle Dramatizes Cobb Story.

A FARCE comedy, with chorus and incidental music, has been made by Richard Carle from Irvin S. Cobb's novel, "Fibble, D. D." * * * "Sally" is expected to make a return visit to New York in the near future for the purpose of exhibiting Shirley Vernon in the role renounced by Marilyn Miller. * * * Eugene O'Neill has made a dramatic arrangement of Coleridge's poem, "The Ancient Mariner," and it is to be played this season at the Provincetown playhouse.

A play called "The Ruby Fan" is being adapted from the Hungarian original for Pauline Lord. * * * E. H. Sothern and Julia Marlowe gave a free performance of "Twelfth Night" for school children Wednesday afternoon at the Great Northern Theater, in Chicago. * * * "Love in a Cottage," starring Emily Stevens, opened in Stamford, Conn., last night. * * * A new musical comedy revue, "Innocent Eyes," featuring the French actress, Mistinguett," opened Tuesday night in Atlantic City.

"Tarnish," by Gilbert Emery, which is one of the successes of the season, was refused by four managers and subsequently damned by eight other producers who saw it in an out-of-town tryout. * * * Walter Hampden's plans for repertory at the National Theater have been pleasantly interrupted by his triumph in "Cyrano de Bergerac," which is said to be playing to receipts of some $20,000 a week.

INSURANCE

(COPYRIGHT)

Drawn by W. E. Hill for the Sunday Post-Dispatch

The tired business man is rapidly being put in a trance by the insurance go-getter with the swell sounding policy. When the T. B. M. is 80 years old he will have $5000 coming to him, and if he dies before then, his family will have $10,000—or maybe it's the other way round. And if, at the age of 80, he becomes blind and loses the use of both feet, he will have an extra $2000.

A little argument over the telephone between a man with a wrenched thumb and the insurance office over the question of partial or total disability. Of course there's a great deal to be said on both sides, and it's being said.

The little argument between the insurance adjuster and the lady slightly damaged by fire. The lady has never been so hurt in her life—to think that anyone should wantonly accuse her of trying to take advantage of the insurance company! Oh, it's terrible to even think of

The things firemen always save from a fire aren't always what you'd like to have saved. For instance, look at the picture of Aunt Nellie Woolen (well covered by insurance), brought out safe and sound from the fire. For years the family hoped something might happen to the painting. Something Aunt Nellie wouldn't feel hurt about. Some families seem born out of luck!

Four members of the insurance company's personnel. Reading from the left, we have the young man who mails the cute little insurance blotters and calendars to all those lucky persons who insure in the company Next, we have the snappy guy who goes out after trade. He carries snapshots of the wife and kiddies in his wallet, thus creating the necessary personal touch. Then comes the medical man who looks over prospective customers. "Has there," he asks, fixing you with a piercing eye, "been any tendency to insanity, gastritis, or superabundance of uric acid, on either side of your family?" And last of all is the adjuster, who is always being snatched, as it were, from the bosom of his family on Christmas eve., New Year's or Thanksgiving, and sent hither and yon to look after the company's interests. He has to stand for a lot, after a fire. He it is who must hear all about how, if the fire had happened four hours later, or ten hours sooner, etc., etc.

The beautiful calendars sent out by the company. The cook gets it. (It's a snow scene, this year, with tinsel snow and the most beautiful pink and purple clouds you ever saw.)

"Why, if here isn't my luncheon set, right where I packed it!" The lady who suffered a loss from burglars, amply covered by insurance, begins to find things.

The inventory. "Of course," Aunt Sarah argues, "it's not the intrinsic value of the things, it's the associations connected with them." "And don't you," she adds, "settle for one cent less than twice what they offer!"

In Studio and Gallery

TO call Oscar Jacobsen's work "modern" is, according to the artist, a mistake. Instead, Mr. Jacobsen asserts, it is a simplification of the cultivated complexities that art in this civilization has suffered. In the same breath he explains that the motive of the "modernist" in painting is to get away from the "hothouse" art of this age and to find again the simplicity of the primitive ages when art blossomed as a "wildflower." And what is Mr. Jacobsen doing but exactly that? So we feel justified in keeping right on calling his work "modern."

The 35 pictures by this artist which comprise the present exhibition at the Public Library form what probably is the most interesting show of the season in the Art Room, and certainly are canvases not soon to be forgotten.

The characteristic quality to be found in all of Jacobsen's work is a childlike faith and sincerity coupled with mature intensity of feeling. This is dramatically apparent in pictures such as his "Restless Sea," "The Skirmishers," "Enchanted Mesa," "Garden of Allah" and "The Inferno."

According to conventional, academic standards, Mr. Jacobsen's paintings would be considered merely decorations, their outstanding qualities being composition and color. Only four canvases of the 35 could be said to contain actual perspective. But departing from the customary considerations, these paintings are exciting and adventuresome.

"The Skirmishers," a smashing, crashing clamor of mountain tops struggling among themselves for height and dominance, is an awing spectacle of brilliant sunlight on perpetual snow. The rugged strength of the mountains is suggested in the huge, coarse patches of red, blue, green and brown with which the peaks are painted.

AN ENTIRELY different emotion is expressed in "The Enchanted Mesa." A comparison between Albert Groll's impression of the same natural phenomena, which picture was presented last year to the City Art Museum, and Mr. Jacobsen's present interpretation of the feeling inspired by the sight, proves extremely interesting. In Groll's "Enchanted Mesa" we feel a calm, refined solitude, vaguely mysterious, but perfectly safe. But Jacobsen has felt the original danger, the tragedy of the enchanted rock. With sweeping, merciless slashes indicative of the threatening peril, he senses the overpowering agony of those prisoners whom nature conspired against. A strain of savage desperation is felt in Jacobsen's picture. Unfortunately it cannot be placed to its best advantage in this exhibition. Such a gigantic production needs no company; in fact, it needs as much complete solitude as it can get. We would like some time to see this picture in a room entirely alone.

"The Garden of Allah" is going to prove a complete surprise to those who, from the title, expect this picture to portray the luscious scene of Mohammedan fame. Instead of the fruitful palms and sparkling spring, we see a wide expanse of Arizona desert, barren except for low shrubs of sagebrush that extend to the horizon line marked with a few lonely rocks. Were it not for the suffused moonlight that caresses the sandy earth, one might call it the garden that Allah forgot. The feeling of being abandoned by everything save the moon's glow is the sensation the picture conveys. To suggest the faintness of moonlight with a technique as bold as Jacobsen's is the accomplishment here.

NOTICES have been sent to the downtown clubs, libraries and other meeting places of business people who concern themselves with cultural interests, of the formation of a "museum hour for business people." From 3:30 to 4:30 on Saturday afternoons, Miss Mary Powell of the Educational Department of the City Art Museum will receive business people who wish information on general or specific art matters.

"The Close of Day," by T. P. Barnett, which recently took the Artists' Guild Prize for 1923, has just been purchased by the Friends of Local Artists. This organization, established three years ago for the purpose of encouraging St. Louis artists by annually purchasing their works to be placed in the public schools, has thus far secured paintings by Gisella Loeffler, Kathryn Cherry and Oscar Berninghaus and installed them in various schools. It has not yet been decided where the new Barnett will be hung.

The attendance report of the City Art Museum for the past year is highly gratifying and significant of the splendid progress being made by that institution. The attendance for the year 1923 was 216,821, which is the largest in the history of the museum. This is a 41,593 increase over the attendance during 1922. Also, there has been a 100 per cent increase in the number of school children visiting the museum, and a great addition to the number of women's clubs and groups who take advantage of the newly established Educational Department.

An anonymous loan of two very fine, small tapestries has been made to the Museum for a time. One, a Flemish tapestry of the Fifteenth Century, is characteristically pictorial, representing a Bishop surrounded by other figures, performing a religious rite. The rectangle is bordered on three sides by small floral patterns. This tapestry comes from the collection of the Marquis de Grottier.

The second tapestry, a small, handsome "Mlle. Fleurs," is decorated in the upper part with a bit of landscape. In the center is a shield, around which wreaths of flowers and fruit are arranged. All sides of the rectangle are bordered with a definite floral arrangement. This is a Fifteenth Century tapestry of Arras, and previously belonged in the collection of Steinharter.

Both tapestries are on exhibition in Gallery 29. They are privately owned in St. Louis.

The historic ride of Paul Revere from Charleston to Lexington, April, 1775

When* TIME means Everything

Time counts. This country might not be the United States today had Paul Revere been late. New history was written because he was on time.

Time counts—when you need a physic. Overnight cathartics are too slow, too unreliable. Get quick action. Get the entire intestinal tract cleared out—the poisonous waste matter eliminated without delay. Take PLUTO.

PLUTO WATER acts in 30 minutes to two hours.

It acts positively—without griping. It washes the intestines—flushes away the disease-breeding waste—leaves no unpleasant after effect.

PLUTO WATER is bottled at French Lick Springs, Indiana, prescribed by physicians and sold at your drug store.

NEW TEACHINGS PLANNED BY MADDOX

Superintendent Would Outline Purposes of Various Divisions of Community.

A system linking the fundamentals of elementary education with instruction in the functions and purposes of the various divisions of society is being worked out by Superintendent of Instruction John Maddox, with the idea of introducing it into St. Louis schools.

"The idea is still in the experimental stage," Maddox said. "I am feeling out teachers and others interested in education at this time. It has met with general approval so far and a little experimental work is being done. When I have completed my experiments I intend to present the new system to the Board of Education."

What Would Be Taught.

The system, which Superintendent Maddox has outlined on a series of charts, deals entirely with instruction in the elementary schools. First-grade pupils would be taught the place of the home in society, including the social duties of parents and others connected with the home. In the second grade the community would be analyzed and the duties and status of persons making up the community outlined. The functions of the grocer, the banker, the pastor and others necessary to community life would be explained.

Superintendent Maddox believes that a broader field may be opened in the third year of grade school. Pupils reaching the stage of their education would be instructed on St. Louis, its geography, government and history. In addition the vocations, charities, beauty spots, wealth, recreations, health, safety, transportation facilities and information sources of St. Louis and its inhabitants would be studied. In the next three grades Maddox plans a similar treatment of Missouri, the United States and the world.

"Necessary Education."

"It will be easy to link the fundamentals of education with this form of instruction," Maddox said. "Composition, arithmetic, drawing, spelling, and even manual training, fall in with the system. It is necessary that the children know what is taking place in the world. Thrift week, health week, safety week mean really nothing. What is necessary is thrift year, health year and safety year. The rapid changes in the civilized world must be explained. Too little is known about every-day things. Under the system I hope ultimately to introduce in our schools the next generation would know why is a railroad, a steamship system, the radio, the press, the police. That is all necessary education for the useful citizen, and must be inaugurated sooner or later."

Supt. Maddox said that, in addition to meeting the approval of educators, his proposed system had been indorsed by civic organizations to which he had presented it.

Walton Hamilton, professor of economics at Washington University, voiced a similar idea in an address before the St. Louis League of Women Voters Thursday.

WANTS KANSAS CITY AND ST. LOUIS AIR MAIL STATIONS

C. of C. Committee Chairman Urges Spencer to Work for Change in Route.

Changing the transcontinental Air Mail Service route to include St. Louis and Kansas City is urged in a letter sent by Joseph R. Barroll, chairman of the Postal Committee of the St. Louis Chamber of Commerce, to Senator Spencer.

The letter states that Second Assistant Postmaster-General Henderson has agreed, to the change in routing, provided $50,000 or more is added to the $1,500,000 budget appropriation for the Air Mail Service. Barroll, in his letter, says that the present route from Chicago west requires a two-hour and 30-minute wait at Cheyenne, Wyo., before the planes can be flown over the mountains. Barroll estimates that the "hop to St. Louis and Kansas City will serve 2,000,000 additional population."

Should St. Louis be included in the Air Mail route, a letter leaving here at 7:30 p. m. would be delivered in San Francisco at 4:15 the next afternoon. By train 72 hours for the same trip. Also, mail delivered at New York Air Field at 11 a. m. would be received in St. Louis at 8 o'clock the same evening.

FLYING CLUB ACTIVITIES

Among Them Is Drive for Fund to Build Clubhouse.

The enlarged activities of the Flying Club of St. Louis, which will be discussed at a meeting Jan. 21, are: A clubhouse at Lambert-St. Louis Field; downtown headquarters at the City Club; purchase of airplanes in addition to the one now owned; the right to buy a participation ownership certificate in Lambert-St. Louis Field, and making good the stock of the Aeronautic Corporation.

The club has been given lumber salvaged at Lambert-St. Louis Field after the International Air Races last October. A drive is now being conducted among members to raise a fund to build a clubhouse from this material.

1804 "Milton" Brings $17,000.

LONDON, Jan. 12.—At a recent auction a William Blake "Milton," 1804, brought $17,000. The volume is believed to be superior to the one in the British Museum, as no other copy has 50 leaves. Two others are in the United States.

IF BACK HURTS FLUSH KIDNEYS

Drink Plenty Water and Take Glass of Salts Before Breakfast Occasionally.

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore, don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salts which helps to remove the body's waste and stimulate them to their normal activity.

The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 500 grains of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of good water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts. Take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in the system so they are no longer a source of irritation, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to help keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this; also keep up the water drinking; and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache. By all means have your physician examine your kidneys at least twice a year.

MRS. MORROW URGED TO SEEK STATE OFFICE

Groups of Democratic Women Favor Her for Secretaryship of State.

By CURTIS A. BETTS,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Jan. 12.—There is a possibility that Missouri Democratic voters in the primary Aug. 5 will have their first opportunity to vote for a woman for nomination for State office though a movement by Democratic women to induce Mrs. Kate Morrow of Warrensburg, secretary of the Democratic State Committee, to become a candidate for the nomination for the office of Secretary of State.

According to advices here, groups of Democratic women in several sections of the State have agreed by correspondence that they should have a candidate for State office, and have virtually agreed that their greatest chance of success would be with Mrs. Morrow, who has had wide experience in State affairs through many years' employment in the State Capitol.

Mrs. Morrow has not made public announcement if she has reached a decision, though some of her intimate friends have conveyed to the women supporting the movement the information that she is not inclined to be a candidate. This information, however, has not had the effect of stopping the pressure, and correspondence continues in the effort to obtain support for the plan.

Has Wide Acquaintance.

Her support, if she filed for the office, would by no means be limited to women, as her acquaintance through years of service in the Democratic organization is extensive with the men leaders in nearly every county. For many campaigns she has been an assistant in Democratic State headquarters, becoming an experienced politician. During most of the time for more than 20 years she has had employment in the Capitol. Her husband, the late W. A. Morrow, was personal stenographer to four Governors.

In the manner in which the race for the secretaryship of state is shaping up, Mrs. Morrow, if she could gain substantial support from the women, would have an excellent chance for nomination. It is probable there will be three or four men candidates and she could be expected to divide that portion of the vote which would not go for a woman for any office, which would work to the advantage of a woman candidate.

Frank Armstrong of Harrisonville, official reporter of the State Senate, and James T. O'Brien of St. Louis, assistant Chief Clerk of the House of Representatives, are announced candidates. Others who it is said have virtually decided to enter are R. E. L. Marrs, Secretary of the Senate, and Grover Joyce of Kansas City, formerly a member of the Legislature.

There was a test of the strength of Mrs. Morrow and the women who are taking the lead for her when the State Committee met in St. Louis and brought about her election as secretary of the committee, accomplishing the defeat of Means Ray of Jefferson City, who had the support of the harmony combine, which sought to iron out the Reed and anti-Reed factional differences, and proproduced the term of "Harmony Twins," with which the anti-Reed women have since referred to Senator Reed and Breckinridge Long when the subject of abatement of the opposition to Reed has been under discussion.

Preliminary Skirmish.

As a preliminary skirmish to the State campaign for Mrs. Morrow, a group of women who had been most active in the legislative demand for equal representation for women on all party committees, approached her with the request that she permit her name to go before the committee for the secretaryship.

To accomplish their object they induced women in many parts of the State to take up the campaign to give members of the Women's State Committee an equal vote with the men on the committee. The plan worked and the committee voted the recognition.

So well did they lay their plans that when the committee began voting on the office of secretary, the contest quickly narrowed down to Mrs. Morrow and Ray, with Ray's only certain support the members from St. Louis and Kansas City, and Mrs. Morrow's election was accomplished.

They are confident they can repeat their success if Mrs. Morrow will consent to become a candidate for State office.

Ends Stubborn Coughs in a Hurry

Its Real Effectiveness, This Old Home-made Remedy Has No Equal. Easily and Cheaply Prepared.

You'll never know how quickly a bad cough can be conquered, until you try this famous old home-made remedy. Anyone who has coughed all night and all night, will say that the immediate relief given is almost like magic. It is very easily prepared, and there is nothing better for tights.

Into a pint bottle, put 2½ ounces of Pinex; then add plain granulated sugar syrup to make a full pint. Or you can use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, the full pint saves about two-thirds of the money usually spend for cough preparations, and gives you a more positive, effective remedy. It keeps perfectly, and tastes pleasant—children like it.

You can feel this take hold instantly, soothing and healing the membranes in all the air passages. It promptly loosens a dry, tight cough, and soon you will notice the phlegm is cut and disappear. A day's use will usually break up an ordinary cough and chest cold, and it is also splendid for bronchitis, croup, hoarseness, and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, the most reliable remedy for throat and chest ailments.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

Combing Won't Rid Hair of Dandruff

The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

Do this tonight, and by morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and two or three more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop at once, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store and it never fails to do the work.

ombing Won't Rid air of Dandruff

The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

Do this tonight, and by morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and two or three more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop at once, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store and it never fails to do the work.

BAD BREATH

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets Get to the Cause and Remove It.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel, act gently on the bowels and positively do the work.

People afflicted with bad breath find quick relief through Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. The pleasant, sugar-coated tablets are taken for bad breath by all who know them.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets act gently but firmly on the bowels and liver, stimulating them to natural action, clearing the blood and generally purifying the entire system. They do that which dangerous calomel does without any of the bad after effects.

All the benefits of nasty, sickening, griping cathartics are derived from Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets without griping, nausea or any disagreeable effects.

Dr. F. M. Edwards discovered the tablets after seventeen years of practice among patients afflicted with bowel and liver complaint, with the attendant bad breath.

Olive Tablets are purely a vegetable compound mixed with olive oil; you will know them by their olive color. Take one or two every night for a week and note the effect. 15c and 30c.

VICE-PRESIDENCY IS M'ADOO MEN'S BAIT TO GARDNER

Might Support Him for Second Place if He Aided Them to Get Friendly State Delegation.

OFFER ONLY ONE BY INFERENCE

McAdoo Forces Decide Fight Against Reed Cannot Be Avoided, So Seek Help.

If the McAdoo organization can induce former Gov. Gardner to stand with it for election of a Missouri delegation to the Democratic national convention friendly to McAdoo for the presidency and under no conditions controlled by Senator Reed, there is a possibility that Gardner will have the McAdoo support for the vice presidential nomination.

Such is the word which has been brought to Missouri within the past few days. Not that there is in prospect a promise of McAdoo support for Gardner. Rather, it is left to Gardner to infer that if he is not willing to make the fight for McAdoo, he will have no chance of help from McAdoo delegates when the time comes to nominate a candidate for the vice presidency.

For several weeks the outlines of plans to make certain the election of delegates opposed to Reed and friendly to McAdoo have been under consideration by influential Democrats who will be found leading the fight for McAdoo in Missouri. It is their purpose to attempt to obtain adoption of anti-Reed resolutions in the various county conventions, and to have county delegates instructed to vote for an anti-Reed resolution in the State convention. That was the plan followed in 1920, when every county in the State, except two, went against Reed.

Would Prefer to Avoid Fight.

The McAdoo forces would prefer to avoid a fight any place, but it is said the decision has been reached that it cannot be avoided in Missouri. The McAdoo leaders realize that while it will make little, if any, difference whether the Missouri delegation is instructed to vote for Gardner for the presidential nomination, it makes a very considerable difference who will control the vote of the delegation after it ceases to vote for Gardner.

Every Reed supporter who may get on the delegation will be counted definitely as anti-McAdoo, consequently the effort will be to select delegates friendly to McAdoo, who will have no objection to having them instructed for Gardner. All he will want will be the assurance that when the complimentary votes for Gardner have been cast, the delegation will line up for him.

McAdoo Leading Out in State.

The Gardner candidacy for the presidential nomination has not been taken seriously out in the State, where there really was a demand that he seek the nomination for the governorship. However, there is a belief that he has a chance for the second place on the Democratic ticket if McAdoo should be the nominee. It has been assumed that Gardner really was seeking the vice presidential nomination and was merely following the custom of asking for the first place so as to be in line for second.

This carries with it, however, a requirement that he be able to control the delegation for the successful candidate for the first place, and there is no probability that Gardner will be able to do that. The indications thus far have been that McAdoo is leading strongly in rural Missouri and that a majority of the delegates will be for him in the actual balloting.

McAdoo naturally wants all 36 delegates and Gardner will be given the opportunity to join the McAdoo organization.

Missouri managers for McAdoo have not been announced. While there has been somewhat of an impression that Breckinridge Long, defeated nominee for United States Senator in 1922, and W. R. Hollister of Jefferson City, his manager in that campaign, would have control, the more recent reports have been to the effect that the actual leadership is more likely to be in the hands of such last-ditch anti-Reed fighters as Charles M. Hay of St. Louis, John Cosgrove of Boonville, Allen McReynolds of Carthage and A. J. Hawkins of Eminence, with the Rev. Burris A. Jenkins of Kansas City having a leading part.

Are You a Tired Out Housewife?

Many people do not realize that the most exhausting of all work is housework and the care of children. Many a woman who should be in the prime of life finds her strength gone, her nerves unstrung and is weak, worn out and run down with pale, thin, watery blood from the strain of housework.

In such cases, what you need is something to put more iron into your blood. Nuxated Iron contains iron like the iron in spinach, lentils and apples, and like the iron in your blood. You will be astonished at how much better you feel often in even a few days.

Try taking Nuxated Iron for two weeks, and you will see color come back to your lips and cheeks, you will not be so easily upset by trifles, and best of all, you will find that you have new strength and energy and endurance for your daily tasks. At all good druggists.

"It used to be that owners laid up their cars, but that time is past. The open winters, coupled with the lower prices on used cars now, should be an inducement to owners to purchase during the Yearly Used Car Clearance Sale."

MARTIN-PARRY MANAGER ATTENDS CONVENTION

J. A. McClure Jr., district sales manager of the Martin-Parry Corporation of St. Louis, returned Wednesday after spending a week in the East. Three days were spent at the Sales Convention at York, Pa., where the home office of the company is located.

McClure also spent two days at the New York Automobile Show and reports that the exhibits were the finest and largest the New York Automobile Show has ever had.

BUICK DEALERS HOLD BIG USED CAR SHOW

Eight of the Buick retail dealers in the St. Louis metropolitan district have organized a Used Car Show which will open on Saturday, Jan. 12, at Cherokee and Iowa avenues, and will continue until March 12. The show is being held in the inclosure used for the Cinderella Summer Theater and has been carefully protected from cold.

The show, as announced by the dealers in their advertising, is frankly an effort to dispose of their used car stocks and to stimulate the sale of new cars during the winter month.

The dealers exhibiting and participating in the Used Car Show include the following Buick retail organizations: Kuhs Buick Co., West Side Buick Auto Co., South Side Buick Auto Co., Carondelet Buick Auto Co., Schnure Motor Co., Wellston Buick Motor Co., Jake's Buick Auto Co., Kirkwood, Mo., and East Side Buick Co., East St. Louis, Ill.

Arrangements for the show have been handled by a committee, with Ralph W. Page as chairman and W. W. Wilson, H. L. Schnure and R. E. Campbell as members. There will be no admission charged.

HALLENBERG-WAGNER MOVE IN NEW HOME

The Hallenberg-Wagner Motor Co., authorized Ford products dealers, celebrated the opening of their new home, 5630 Gravois avenue, yesterday with a dance. Attendance prizes were given away and refreshments served.

Another feature of the celebration was a luncheon Friday noon at Bevo Mill. At this luncheon a novel method of selling was introduced. This was a copyrighted sales talk on the Tudor sedan, by phonograph, amplified through a loud speaker.

Among those present at the Friday luncheon were: C. S. Williams, Ford branch manager; Robert E. Lee, secretary of the Automobile Dealers' Association; George Hull of the Hull-Smith Construction Co.; Joseph C. Schroeder, attorney, and Alexander Miltenberger, president of the Tower Grove Bank.

The officers of the Hallenberg-Wagner company, which was incorporated last October, include: Oscar T. Hallenberg, president; Edward P. Wagner, vice president; E. E. Nolte, secretary. Hallenberg was formerly the superintendent of the Ford branch, while Wagner was a salesman for the Nulsen-Thomsen Auto Co. of Maplewood.

Only Packard, perhaps, would have attempted to improve upon the Single-Six.

There was no obvious reason why even the minor changes should be made.

The new model Single-Six is evidence, however, of the spirit which moves Packard to strive ceaselessly toward an ever greater measure of perfection.

The more than 30,000 owners, in whose opinion the Single-Six cannot be greatly improved, will be gratified to know that the car remains unchanged in fundamentals of engineering and manufacture.

The chief improvements in the Single-Six are:

1st. Four-wheel brakes, as regular equipment; two additional brakes on rear wheels—a total of six;

2nd. Improved steering ease; larger steering wheel;

3rd. A still heavier and smoother transmission;

4th. Artillery wheels of enhanced appearance;

5th. Battery located on the running board, as in the Straight-Eight, and enclosed in a theft-proof box.

These improvements, of course, make the new Single-Six an even greater value, a still more saving investment.

You will incur absolutely no obligation by 'phoning for a Single-Six to call at your house or office for a demonstration. Telephone now, or, even better, come in.

NEW HUDSON COACH BEING SHOWN HERE

Hudson-Frampton Have Latest Model on Display—Mounted On Super-Six Chassis.

The new Hudson super-six coach has arrived in St. Louis and is being shown b yhte Hudson-Frampton company at their salesroom, Leonard and Locust boulevard.

Hudson-Frampton have made similar arrangements for showing the new Hudson similar to those of several weeks ago when the new Essex was shown. The new Hudson coach is now being displayed on the stage in the southeast corner of the Hudson-Frampton building, which for several weeks, was occupied by the Essex coach. A handsome red curtain cuts off the display stage from the balance of the showroom.

In the new coach, the Hudson Motor Car Co. have made many changes, which are in the nature of refinements and which give added driving comfort. The doors are wider, the body longer, the seating more roomy. The finish of the body is also improved. The new car is good-looking and is mounted on an improved Hudson super-six chassis.

The price of the new Hudson coach is $1475, f. o. b., Detroit. Other new models, made by the Hudson Motor Car Co., include speedster at $1350, seven-passenger phaeton at $1425, and sedan at $1895. All prices are f. o. b. the factory.

BIG RECEPTION FOR NEW CHRYSLER SIX

NEW YORK, Jan. 12.—Officials of the Chrysler Motor Corporation are declaring today that the reception accorded Walter P. Chrysler's widely heralded new motor car, the Chrysler six, publicly shown for the first time anywhere at the New York Automobile Show last week, was probably the greatest and most enthusiastic ever given an automobile.

Thousands upon thousands of persons—the motoring public, automobile distributers and dealers from all parts of the country, factory executives from practically every motor car company, and dozens of representatives of newspapers and automobile trade publications—swarmed to the Armory, in the Bronx, where the show was held, to the Hotel Commodore lobby and to the showroom of the Colt-Stewart Co., the leading Chrysler dealer in the metropolis, to see the line of models displayed at each place. These included the Chrysler roadster, two touring cars, brougham and two sedans, and cutout chassis views of the motor and rear axle.

The striking feature of the new Chrysler, according to many who managed to secure a ride, is not its appearance, although the scientific design incorporated into its European-line effect was the cause of wide comment. The outstanding conversation was concerning the smoothness of its mechanical performance, including the remarkable riding ability brought about through total lack of motor, chassis or body vibration, plus its flexibility and the ease with which it leaps out of traffic tangles.

PROCTER & GAMBLE SPEND LESS ON CARS

Salesmen's automobiles cost an average of one cent less per mile to operate in 1923 than in 1922, according to W. H. Thompson, automotive expert of the Procter and Gamble company whose salesmen traveled the equivalent of 168 times round the earth during 1923. The actual operating cost per mile for 1923 was 7.6 cents as against 8.4 cents the previous year.

This reduction in operating cost was due, says Thompson, mainly to a more vigorous follow-up system for checking the condition and operation of the cars. Reduced prices of gasoline and oil were also factors.

"The Procter & Gamble company have in use today," said the traffic expert, "several hundred Ford cars of the roadster type. They are used in every part of the United States and Canada and under all sorts of conditions. The average operating cost includes depreciation, tires, gas and oil, replacement and repairs, store and miscellaneous items. The initial cost of the car is written off in 18 months."

NEW PACKARD EIGHT MODELS ON DISPLAY

THE Berry Motor Car Co. this week is putting on a special display of Packard eight models at their showroom, Twenty-second and Locust streets. Nine different types of this car are on the salesroom floor. Several are special colored jobs.

One of the chief attractions is a sport model finished in dustproof gray with vermillion wheels and striping, which has been sold to William H. Bixby of G. H. Walker & Co.

A five-passenger sedan, finished in milori green, and a seven-passenger limousine in sage-brush green are other striking cars in the display.

In addition to the showing of eights in the main salesroom, the Berry Motor Car Co. is exhibiting a complete line of the 1924 single six Packards in the auxiliary salesroom of the company on the fourth floor.

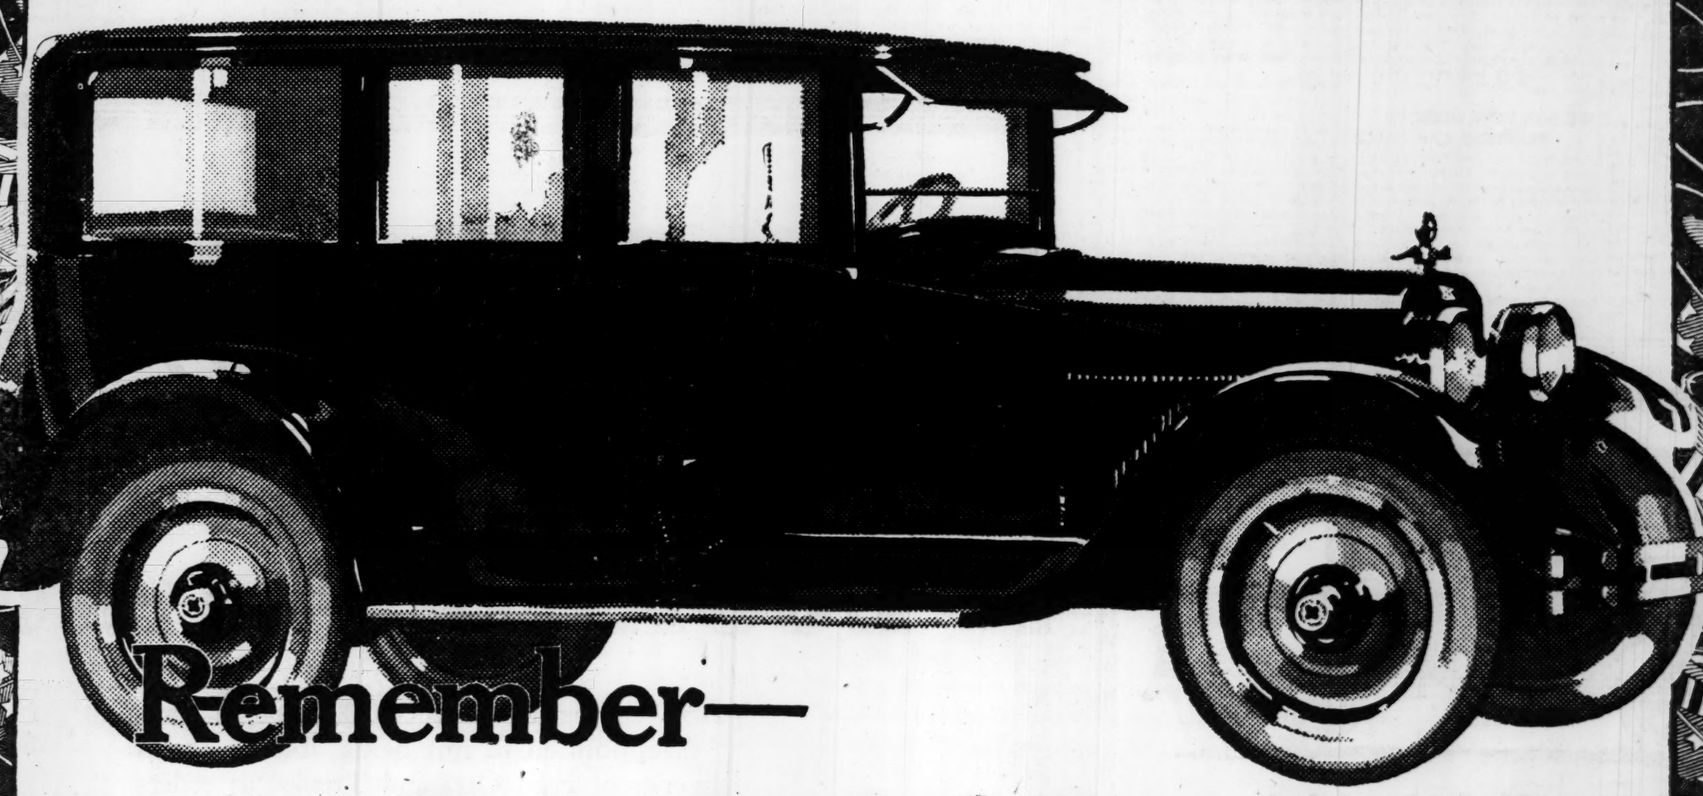
Rickenbacker

A • CAR • WORTHY • OF • ITS • NAME



Remember—

Rickenbacker Told You So!

Just so you will fix the fact in your own mind for future reference and guidance;

—so you will, in the future, value Rickenbacker's advice at its true worth, and heed our timely warnings;

—so you will, in short, come to realize that Rickenbacker engineering is as sound as it is progressive;

—and finally, so you will know that in selecting a Rickenbacker you are always getting a car that is at least a year in advance of the rank and file of cars in engineering improvements, in body styles, finish and appointments;

—to the end that your annual depreciation will be the minimum, and resale value of your car the maximum;

We are constrained to remind you that just six months ago, (July 1st, to be exact), Rickenbacker proclaimed to the world that, within a year, 4-Wheel Brakes would be universal.

Several makers openly took issue with us.

Not only was every effort made to discredit our assertion and discount the superiority of 4-Wheel Brakes, but to prove that Rickenbacker was wrong both in pioneering this great improvement, and in taking such a definite stand on the subject.

We were certain, however, that future events would prove the accuracy of our assertion.

We knew we were right—and feared not to go ahead.

Only six months later—January 5th to 12th—the New York Automobile Show was a sensational vindication of the Rickenbacker policy.

In almost every exhibit in that great show was an endorsement of Rickenbacker judgment—frank recognition of Rickenbacker leadership.

The evidence was so conclusive as to leave no room for doubt—4-Wheel Brakes have conquered apathetic prejudice and active opposition.

Not only have they proven necessary, but actually indispensable for safe driving in present-day traffic conditions.

Informed buyers now insist—and will continue more than ever to insist—that all four wheels be equipped with first-class brakes.

Eventually this insistence will be for fully enclosed, internal expanding brakes, too.

33—over 50%—makers exhibited cars in which 4-Wheel Brakes were an outstanding feature.

This was in response to insistent demands of buyers as expressed through salesmen and dealers.

The buyer, having once experienced the greater safety and efficiency of this fundamental improvement, said, "I want that!"

And when an American buyer demands, the maker has no option—he must comply.

Today, the buyer is repeating those words so often and so emphatically, every maker must accede—or pay the penalty.

"Has this car 4-Wheel Brakes?"

That was the first question you heard when you stopped at any exhibit in the Auto Show.

And the next question generally was, "Are they internal expanding brakes mechanically operated?"

But, several other innovations and improvements that were emphasized by several makers as new in this show—but which you saw in the first Rickenbacker Six—also indicated the impress of this product on the entire industry.

12 Cars now boast "vibrationless motors." And it is interesting to note the several expedients applied in efforts to emulate the results of Rickenbacker's "Tandem Fly Wheel."

9 Cars emphasized "deeper frames"—though none as yet, approaches the eight (8") inch dimensions of the Rickenbacker "Double Depth" frame.

6 Cars showed springs set nearer the ends of the rear axle—nearer the point of contact between tire and road. This is one of the features of Rickenbacker "Cradle" spring suspension.

There are several other points, however, that are still to be found only in this car.

6 Cars have "Air Cleaners" of one kind or another—in emulation of Rickenbacker's provision for "protecting the lungs of the motor."

Fully 75% of all makers now feature steel disc wheels—first announced as standard on the first Rickenbacker Six.

5 Cars feature ball bearings in steering spindles—all of these are much higher priced cars than Rickenbacker, by the way.

5 Cars show the commutator located above motor, away from dirt, water and oil. This also you first saw in the Rickenbacker Six.

And yet—while "imitation is the sincerest form of flattery," and we heartily acknowledge the implied compliment—

We cannot but derive still more satisfaction from the fact that, while each of several have emulated Rickenbacker in one or two features, none so far, has combined all those superiorities in one product as you find them in the Rickenbacker Six.

Of course, everyone looked to this exhibit to sound the keynote for the new year. Nor was any disappointed.

Rickenbacker ran true to form by setting a new standard of values with several refinements and the unprecedented equipment at the new price.

When you had visited this exhibit, the term "fully equipped" had acquired a new meaning.

For Rickenbacker showed, for the first time in the world's history, standard models at standard prices, so completely equipped as to leave the new owner "Nothing Else to Buy."

Rickenbacker models this year are equipped with all those safety devices and conveniences which the seasoned motorist considers essential, and for which, heretofore, you have paid extra.

Not only the customary speedometer, ammeter, voltmeter, pilot light, oil gauge and switch-lock on the instrument board;—

But also transmission lock, Folberth windshield cleaner, combination vanity and smoking case, motor meter, motor meter wings, motor meter lock, shock absorbers and bumpers, both front and rear.

The open models—Sport Phaeton and Sport Roadster—also have beveled plate-glass wind wings.

All models are equipped with drum tire-covers with lettered warning "4-Wheel Brakes," which is for the benefit of the man behind, and which never fails to give the Rickenbacker man right of way. This is Rickenbacker's interpretation of the term "fully equipped," as exemplified in these latest models.

Here is established not only a new standard of values, but a new code of business ethics.

For the first time, you saw an automobile in which the customer's needs and desires were considered paramount.

This is another Rickenbacker departure from former rules that will revolutionize sales practice.

"Nothing Else to Buy" is today the exclusive slogan of the Rickenbacker salesman—even as "4-Wheel Brakes" was his clarion cry six months ago.

Buyers will no longer accept as "fully equipped" a car that lacks any essential for ideal driving under any conditions of weather or traffic congestion.

Having seen the new Rickenbacker models; having yourself experienced the wonderful performance of the 4-Wheel Brakes, the luxury of a vibrationless motor, and the thrill of handling this car;—

Having seen what constitutes "complete equipment" according to the new Rickenbacker standard;—

And when you consider that all this is included in the new "delivered" price, you will be at a loss to understand how it is possible to produce so much for so little money.

We hope you will see all the others before you see the Rickenbacker—for only by direct comparison can you appreciate the amazing difference in quality, performance and value.

In advanced engineering, Rickenbacker is the outstanding leader. In style, the fashion plate. In Pride of Ownership—unique.

JOHNSTON BROS. OPEN BIG SERVICE STATION

Dance and Reception Saturday, Jan. 19—Many Forms of Service Rendered.

On Saturday, Jan. 19, there will be opened at the northeast corner of Compton avenue and Washington boulevard, a new service station, the home of Johnston Bros. Tire and Service Co. It is claimed that this building is the finest in the Middle West devoted to car service.

The new home of Johnston Bros. is in size, 85 feet by 120 feet. It is two stories. It contains an accessory salesroom, where a complete line will be handled; a drive-in gasoline and oil station with modern pump equipment, all under roof; vulcanizing equipment for all sizes of tires; solid tire press, greasing pit, tile-lined wash racks with air-spray washer, and spring service as well as battery charging equipment. Day and night service will be given according to Jesse Johnston of the firm.

"Among the types of service we plan to give," said Johnston Saturday, are cleaning, greasing, oiling and other servicing of cars if desired, while owners are at the theater; night servicing of trucks to save time; special caring for tubes, etc., by a new system, and other forms of service that will be appreciated by passenger car and truck owners.

The new service station will be opened Saturday, Jan. 19, with a reception and dance. Souvenir Firestone tires will be presented to all who come.

The Johnston Bros. Tire and Service Co. have been in business five years, starting as the South Side Auto Supply Co. Last March the company moved to 3104-06 Locust boulevard, from which location it has now moved to the new big service station. The company handles a complete line of Firestone and Oldfield passenger car and truck tires.

WILSON NOW DIRECTS PEERLESS CAR SALES

Announcement of the appointment of Earl B. Wilson as general sales manager of the Peerless Motor Co. is made by D. A. Burke, vice president and general manager. Wilson has been sales manager of the branch division of the company for some time. In his new post, in charge of all the company's sales, he will play an important part in the nation-wide expansion program formulated by General Manager Burke.

BENJAMIN TAKES ON AGENCY FOR VELIE

Cole Distributor Now Handling Moline Built Car—Showing Four Models.

Jerome J. Benjamin, distributor for the Cole in this territory, has just taken on, in addition, the Velie line of cars, built in Moline, Ill. The name of the distributing company, now Cole-Benjamin Motor Co., will be changed to Benjamin Motor Co., because of the additional line.

The Velie is one of the oldest cars made in the country, having been built for more than 16 years. One of the features of the line is the new Model 56, the touring car selling at $1095 f. o. b. factory. This new car, one of which is being shown by Benjamin, is rated at 50-horsepower, has 118-inch wheelbase and baked enamel finish. According to Benjamin, who rode in the car when at Moline before signing the contract, the new Velie model is a marvelous performer. A sedan model on the same chassis sells for $1545, f. o. b. Moline.

Besides the new Model 56, several styles of Model 58 are shown by the new distributor at his showroom, 3921 Locust boulevard. Among them are the five-passenger touring, de luxe touring sedan and four-passenger coupe.

In explaining Saturday why he took the Velie agency, Benjamin said: "When the Velie was offered to me, I investigated, especially among the owners, to see how they felt about their cars. I discovered such universal satisfaction that I could not help but taken the line over for this territory."

NO SHOW CHANGES ON COLUMBIA CHASSIS

Among the rush of announcements of new cars, new motors, new features and new ideas of all kinds that accompanies every New York automobile show, it is unusual to note the statement from the Columbia Motors Co. that the Columbia chassis that has underridden Columbia sixes for more than two years will remain practically unchanged.

"The all-feature chassis has proved itself thoroughly and has been wonderfully satisfactory in every way," says Ray Long, chief engineer of the Columbia Motors Co., in writing to Richard Hart of the Advance Motor Car Co., Columbia distributers, "that we would be foolish indeed to make wholesale alterations in it just for the sake of changing.

"Nobody makes an automobile over mechanically for the fun of it, and Columbia has found no need for altering the chassis that was developed over two years ago. Since then we have, of course, introduced a considerable number of refinements, but the essential features are just as they have always been."

NEW PRODUCTION MARK FOR DODGE BROTHERS

One million cars built and sold in the first nine years and 11 days of production.

This is the latest achievement of Dodge Brothers, Detroit, who thereby add another to their long list of notable contributions to the automobile industry. It is a world's record.

No other manufacturer, according to official figures shown by Dodge Brothers executives in support of their contentions, has achieved the one million mark so soon after the completion of his first car.

Dodge Brothers began production on Dec. 4, 1914. Car No. 1,000,000 rolled off the final assembly line Dec. 13, 1923—nine years and 11 days later.

The Tate Motor Co., Inc., distributes Dodge cars in St. Louis.

NASH SPECIAL SEDAN NEW YORK SENSATION

Outspoken admiration on the part of the public on the opening day of the New York Automobile Show was accorded the new Nash special six sedan, according to advice just received by F. C. McDonald of the Southwest Nash Co.

"The new Nash special six sedan, with its thoroughly high-grade construction and elegance of appointments, coupled with the price of $1640 f. o. b. factory, amazed show visitors," says H. H. McCarty, general sales manager of the Nash Motors Co. "The demonstration of eager interest among the throngs about the Nash leaves no doubt as to the public's frank approval of this fine new four-door enclosed car."

Regardless of its low price, the special sedan embodies refinements that come with custom-built cars. Its all-metal panel body is handsome in design; its upholstery is of the finest blue mohair cloth. There is a rear-vision mirror, jeweled clock, heater, automatic windshield wiper, silvered dome light, foot rest, tasseled silken curtains and other furnishings found only in high-grade cars.

Looking Ahead

LAST Spring a total of 350,000 people were disappointed in not being able to obtain deliveries of Ford Cars and Trucks, as orders were placed faster than cars could be produced.

The demand for Ford Cars and Trucks this Spring will, according to all indications, be far greater than last Spring.

Winter buying has been increasing at a greater rate than ever before.

Actual retail deliveries the past 60 days totaled 308,170 Ford cars and trucks, an increase of 1,961 a day over a year ago.

Over 200,000 people have already ordered Ford products on our purchase plan, the majority of whom will take delivery in the Spring.

The above facts are given with the suggestion that you list your order promptly with a Ford dealer if you contemplate the purchase of a Ford Car or Truck for use this Spring or Summer and wish to avoid delay in delivery.

You need not pay cash for your car. You can arrange to make a small deposit down, taking care of the balance in easy payments. Or, you can buy on the Ford Weekly Purchase Plan. This puts you on the preferred order list and insures delivery of your car at a time to be determined by yourself.

OWNERSHIP OF CARS AND HOMES COINCIDE

Greatest Sales of Autos Come in Greatest Savings Years, According to Motor Car Manufacturer.

By R. E. GARDNER JR., President Gardner Motor Co., Inc., St. Louis, Mo.

Not only have the greatest car sales been registered in the years showing greatest increase in saving, but authoritative figures also show that car ownership is greatest in those states that stand highest in the number of homes owned by their occupants. In other words where the people generally own their own homes, there you will also find the greatest number of cars in proportion to population. The same thing also holds true in regard to telephones and other mechanical necessities of modern civilization.

It is the home builders, the men who have gone into the suburbs and the country to erect the homes, where they can rear their families in greater peace and health and happiness, who have swamped the motor car factories this year and brought prosperity to the workers of the automotive industry, that has benefited every citizen of the land.

Competent authorities state that car ownership is largely responsible for the disintegration of residential life in the great cities, and a great factor in the greatest migration to the suburbs that the world has ever seen. The four million motor vehicles manufactured this year represent in part this influence. They give some conception to the size of the migration.

Without the motor cars owned in millions and obtainable by men of moderate means, the drift from the packed city dwellings could never have come. We are an industrial and commercial race. These tasks must be carried on in the city. Therefore, into the cities for the last generation have drifted the great mass of our population. More than half of our population now live in cities. The cry of "back to the land" resounded through the country for years. But it never had a chance of fulfillment until the motor of moderate cost and of really high value and appeal was produced and sold.

The new suburbanite must have a house with individuality and pleasing style. He must have a garden to beautify the new home. The old buss that was a mere transportation unit has been outgrown. He now demands that his car also have style and distinction. Read the production figures of the successful producers of 1923 if you do not believe this. Note that the drawings for the show made on the basis of production have almost without ex-

OWNERSHIP OF CARS AND HOMES COINCIDE

By R. E. GARDNER JR., President Gardner Motor Co., Inc., St. Louis, Mo.

Not only have the greatest car sales been registered in the years showing greatest increase in saving, but authoritative figures also show that car ownership is greatest in those states that stand highest in the number of homes owned by their occupants. In other words where the people generally own their own homes, there you will also find the greatest number of cars in proportion to population. The same thing also holds true in regard to telephones and other mechanical necessities of modern civilization.

It is the home builders, the men who hate gone into the suburbs and the country to erect the homes, where they can rear their families in greater peace and health and happiness, who have swamped the motor car factories this year and brought prosperity to the workers of the automotive industry, that has benefited every citizen of the land.

Competent authorities state that car ownership is largely responsible for the disintegration of residential life in the great cities, and a great factor in the greatest migration to the suburbs that the world has ever seen. The four million motor vehicles manufactured this year represent in part this influence. They give some conception to the size of the migration.

Without the motor cars owned in millions and obtainable by men of moderate means, the drift from the packed city dwellings could never have come. We are an industrial and commercial race. These tasks must be carried on in the city. Therefore, into the cities for the last generation have drifted the great mass of our population. More than half of our population now live in cities. The cry of "back to the land" resounded through the country for years. But it never had a chance of fulfillment until the motor of moderate cost and of really high value and appeal was produced and sold.

The new suburbanite must have a house with individuality and pleasing style. He must have a garden to beautify the new home. The old buss that was a mere transportation unit has been outgrown. He now demands that his car also have style and distinction. Read the production figures of the successful producers of 1923 if you do not believe this. Note that the drawings for the show made on the basis of production have almost without exception given the choice spaces to those who make vehicles that have style and individuality.

The economists who have studied and tabulated the production figures for the last year or two, who have charted the respective gains of the fastest growing companies will show you that style has been a dominant demand on the part of buyers, and that it follows closely on the heels of insistence upon efficient and economic operation. But compare the steady plod of those makers who, intent on mass production, cannot take time to beautify their creations, and you will see that others with style have forged ahead and made gains from 50 to 100 per cent in comparison with the average gain of about 20 per cent in a year's output. The engineer and the economists chart most everything these days. Now they prove to us that the imponderables such as style and beauty can be measured by slide-rulers, and proved to be sound essentials that have a very important economic place in the development of our America.

The White company has announced the appointment of John L. Grice as manager of its St. Louis district, comprising most of the State of Missouri and the southern part of Illinois. He has taken charge of the branch plant at 4151 Forest Park boulevard.

Grice comes to St. Louis from his company's Charlotte (N. C.) branch and succeeds Eugene Kelly, who has been elected a vice president of The Coca-Cola company, with headquarters at Chicago.

ANNOUNCE PRICES OF CHRYSLER SIX

PRICES of the new Chrysler Six were announced at the New York show last Monday. The word was immediately broadcast to the county and was received Monday evening by the Ward Motor Co., who will distribute the Chrysler locally. Prices on the models of this new six are: touring, $1335; phaeton, $1395; roadster, $1525; sedan, $1625; brougham, $1795; Imperial sedan, $1895. All of these prices are F. O. B., Detroit. "Never before in our experience with the motor car business, have prices on a new car been awaited with such interest," said T. C. Kaut, vice-president in charge of wholesale sales of the Ward Motor Co., Saturday. "We have had an enormous number of inquiries regarding the new Chrysler and what it would sell at and we are particularly pleased at the number of orders we have received, before having a car to show. In fact we secured many orders before we even knew the price."

TWO NEW CHANDLER SEDANS PRICED LOW

Closed Cars Listed at Prices Very Little Higher Than Open—Lewis Showing Both New Models.

That the difference in price between open and closed cars has nearly reached the disappearing point is emphasized by the Chandler's announcement of two new sedans priced but little higher than the open models. Both of the new sedans are now being shown by the Lewis Automobile Co., Chandler distributers.

"Closed cars formerly were in the class of luxuries, when few were manufactured," says J. D. Perry Lewis, president of the Lewis company, as compared with open cars. "For years sedans were priced at a thousand dollars more than open cars of the same passenger capacity.

"This difference has gradually been reduced. Improved manufacturing methods alone brought about a reduction in the cost of closed bodies, with resulting increase in popularity. Greater demand brought increased production, with more cuts in cost through quantity manufacture.

"With the Chandler company, closed cars now form more than half of the yearly production, permitting this company to offer sedans at a slightly higher cost than touring cars."

The Chandler company is now building two brand-new sedans, the "four-door," a five-passenger car, and a new seven-passenger sedan, both with Fisher bodies mounted on the standard Chandler chassis, with Pikes Peak motor and traffic transmission. In addition, a reduction has been made on the chummy sedan, the most popular Chandler model. Both new models are now shown by Lewis.

The new models are priced as follows: Four-door sedan (five-passenger), $1895; seven-passenger sedan, $2095. The chummy sedan is now priced at $1745, instead of $1785.

NAMES URUGUAYAN JAZZ AFTER DORT PRESIDENT

The name of the latest foreign piece of jazz music to be imported to the United States is "Dort," according to word received by H. C. Merry of the Wilson Motor Car Co., Dort distributers.

"Dort" was composed by Jesus Ferdinandez Abella of Montevideo, Uruguay, and dedicated to J. Dallas Dort, president of the Dort Motor Car Co. of Flint, Mich. Senor Abella is a Dort owner and wrote his composition in praise of his car. This is perhaps the only case on record where a car owner became so enthusiastic over the performance of his automobile that he put his sentiment in music.

The piece itself is considered by music critics to have considerable merit and is quoted as being high above American jazz in quality. It is lively and full of rich melody. Typically Spanish in character it is an excellent selection for dancing. "Dort" is now being played all over South America.

Gas Pressed on Mr. Krueger's Heart

Both Heart and Liver Affected by Stomach Gas

For years I had gas, sometimes so bad that I got up night on account of pressure around heart and liver. Adlerika (intestinal antiseptic) helped me in three days and have not had it for six months now. I know 25 other people who have been helped." (Signed) R. F. Krueger.

Intestinal Antiseptic

There is now offered to the public a preparation having the DOUBLE action of an intestinal antiseptic and a COMPLETE system cleanser. This preparation, known as Adlerika, acts as follows:

It tends to eliminate or destroy harmful germs and colon bacilli in the intestinal canal, thus guarding against appendicitis and other diseases having their start here.

It is the most complete system cleanser ever offered to the public, acting on BOTH upper and lower bowel and removing foul matter which poisoned the system for months and which nothing else can dislodge. It brings out all gases, thus immediately relieving pressure on the heart. It is astonishing the great amount of poisonous matter Adlerika draws from the alimentary canal—matter you never thought was in your system. Try it right after a natural movement and notice how much more foul matter it brings out which was poisoning you. In slight disorders, such as occasional constipation, sour stomach, gas on the stomach and sick headache, one spoonful of Adlerika ALWAYS brings relief. A longer treatment, however, is necessary in cases of chronic constipation and long standing stomach trouble, preferably under direction of your physician.

Reports From Physicians.

"I found Adlerika the best in my entire 37 years' experience." (Signed) Dr. G. Eggers.

"I use Adlerika in all bowel cases. Some require only one dose." (Signed) Dr. F. M. F. (Name given on request.)

"I have found nothing in my 50 years' practice to excel Adlerika." (Signed) Dr. James Weaver.

"After taking Adlerika feel better than for 20 years. Haven't language to express the AWFUL IMPURITIES eliminated from my system." (Signed) J. E. Puckett.

Adlerika is a constant surprise to people who have used only ordinary bowel and stomach medicines, on account of its rapid, pleasant and COMPLETE action. It is sold by leading druggists everywhere.

Sold in St. Louis by Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., 7th and Washington, and Enderle Drug Co., and other leading druggists.

GRIMES TWO-CONTROL RECEIVING SYSTEM

Inentor Explains Wiring of Set Using His Latest Circuit.

The following description of a two-control receiver using the Grimes Inverse Duplex System appeared in a recent issue of Radio in the Home. It was contributed by the inventor, David Grimes.

"The hook-up shows a four-tube tuned radio inverse-duplex set arranged for aerial and ground operation. The first two tubes in the series are the two tuned radio stages as well as the first two audio stages. The third tube functions as a detector and the fourth tube accomplishes the third, or power audio, stage of amplification.

"The UV-201-A tubes are shown as amplifiers because the dry cell tubes do not approach them in volume or efficiency. The UV-200 is used as a detector tube because of its extreme sensitivity. While it is somewhat critical, it so far surpasses all other tubes as a detector of weak signals it should be used in preference to them for best results.

"Any departure from the use of the above mentioned tubes, unless it be corresponding Cunningham tubes, will result in decreased results. This is true on any kind of a circuit employing several tubes and should be remembered in conducting other experiments.

"If an audio howl is present when the detector tube is entirely off or removed from the socket, it is an indication that the first audio transformer is of too high a ratio or that the .00025 condenser in the grid circuit of the first audio is not quite large enough.

"In any case, the ratio of the first audio transformer should be low, and under certain circumstances it may be desirable to double the value of the by-passing condenser in the grid circuit of the first audio, making it .0005. This should not be made any larger.

"The radio transformer shown between the second and third tube is of the conventional design for fixed radio frequency amplification. There are many types on the market, some of them being very good. The other two tuned transformers shown at the inputs of the first two tubes are fairly easy to construct. They consist of a primary and a secondary wound on a cylinder of insulated material about three inches in diameter.

"The secondary is composed of about 40 turns of No. 28 double cotton-covered wire and the primary has eight turns of the same wire wound on the same cylinder and at one end of the secondary. The secondary of the first tuned transformer is tapped about every five turns to permit the controlling of the radio energy. This prevents overloading of the amplifying tubes on local reception. The secondary of the second tuned transformer is tapped in only one place and this is about two-thirds the way over from the primary or filament end. This is for the purpose of increasing the sharpness of tuning, which is necessary when only two controls are used. Tuning condensers of about 23 plates, or .0005 mfd. should be used with the tuned transformers.

"The rest of the sketch is self-explanatory."

Mr. Henry M. Neely, editor of Radio in the Home, offers the following pertinent suggestions with reference to constructing the set:

"We had some Fada neutroformers in the shop, and we hooked them up and experimented until we had found out what changes were necessary to make these coils function in the circuit.

"The result has been more than satisfactory. I hope that readers will not bombard me now with letters asking if other neutroformers can be used as well, or how many turns of wire to put on home-made neutroformers. Frankly, I don't know. Undoubtedly any neutroformer will work just as well, but it may mean some changes in fixed condensers and other parts. You'll have to figure these out for yourself.

Transformer Ratios.

"I advise any standard audio frequency transformer with a ratio of from 3 to 1 up to 5 to 1. The radio frequency transformer was made by the Dubilier company and is called the Duratran.

"The first jack cuts into the second stage of audio frequency amplification, and the second jack is the third step of audio frequency amplification."

It was found highly desirable to keep the neutroformers as far apart as possible, which meant that we had to place one on one side of the panel, and one on the other side of the panel.

"When you wire this circuit be sure that you make your leads straight and make the connections as short as possible.

"If, after the set is hooked up, you find that you have too much energy coming into your radio frequency tubes, you will have to use the tap on the first neutroformer to help cut down the radio frequency energy."

In some cases it may not be necessary to use this tap. The only way to find out is to experiment.

Mr. Neely found that when the detector tube was turned off entirely an "awful" howl was audible. To eliminate this, he reversed the leads of the primary of the Duratran transformer. But if this does not completely end the noises, he recommends changing the leads on teh primary or secondary of the audio frequency transformer. His suggestions follow:

"Take the first audio frequency transformer and switch the primary leads—that is, take the lead from one post and put it on the other and then that lead to the first post. Then see if this eliminates the howl. If not, put the leads back and switch the secondary leads. You will find that one of these two leads being switched will cut out all your howls and whistles, or it may be that you may have to switch the leads on another audio frequency transformer to give the desired results. It is impossible to tell just what leads you will have to switch, but you can easily find out for yourself.

"Do not do any soldering on the fixed condensers. Make all your connections to them by the use of machine screw and nut. This eliminates any possibility of the heat of the soldering iron damaging the inside of the condenser.

"When you are using the third step of audio frequency amplification in this circuit you will find that you may have to use a separate "B" battery for your detector. If you do not you will probably get a howl in your circuit. I have found that, in any radio frequency circuit, it is always best to use a separate "B" battery rather than taking off the 22½-volt tap on the 45-volt battery. In this circuit your detector "B" battery may vary anywhere from 16 to 22 volts. On the amplifier side 90 volts may be used satisfactorily, but I do not advise you to use anything under 90 volts, as the tubes doing double duty require a greater "B" battery voltage than you ordinarily use. If you want any volume I would use at least 120 volts."

Mr. Neely concludes by saying that "Stations 15 and 17 meters apart can be separated very nicely with one or two degrees difference in the dials, and on these stations we have absolutely no interference from the undesired stations. And another beautiful thing about this circuit is that after you have once had a log on a certain station you may be assured that if that station is on and you set your dials to that setting they will always come in."

SHENANDOAH TO HAVE NEW RADIO EQUIPMENT

Two Complete Outfits Are Part of Installation for Polar Expedition.

With the materialization of the plans for the Polar Trip of the Naval Air Cruiser Shenandoah, or the ZR-1, it has been decided that her original 300-mile radio equipment is inadequate, and that a brand-new transmitting unit good for a thousand miles has been developed by Naval radio engineers.

If, late in July or August, fans pick up the call "NERK" they may shout with glee, for it will be the Shenandoah communicating with one of the far-northern radio shore or ship stations, or perhaps one of the Navy's three portable stations to be established near the Arctic Circle.

The plans for the Shenandoah include two transmitting sets, two receiving outfits and a radio compass. The set which will replace the six fifty-watt tubes, includes two 2-KW tubes, with an output of 2 KW. With this transmitting set it is believed several northern radio stations such as exist in Iceland, Greenland, Spitzbergen, and Russia, or our own Alaskan stations can be reached. With the receiving apparatus, it is expected that Annapolis, Cordova, Lafayette, Nauen and other high-powered stations can be copied, or used as points to establish the position of the great airship by means of the radiocompass. This instrument is now believed indispensible on this exploration trip.

Besides the transmitting set, an auxiliary medium-range radio telegraph and telephone set is to be installed. The telphone will be utilized for communicating with gorund stations when landings are being made and for the immediate transmission of orders to the ground crew of operators at the mooring masts.

The total weight of the radio equipment is 1023 pounds, which, in itself, is believed by engineers to be a great accomplishment, giving a transmitting radius of approximately a mile per pound. This is very light in comparison to the radio apparatus carried by surface vessels of the Navy. The after section of the control car will be used as the radio room. Some difficulty in locating the radio compass where it will be operative and yet not hinder the progress of the airship and interfere with landings, is being encountered, but this problem will be solved soon, radio experts declare.

K S D Comes In "Clear and Loud" in England

THE following letter was received by the Post-Dispatch during the past week. It may be of especial interest to fans who are closely following transoceanic broadcast reception.

JOHNSON CITY, Ill.,
Jan. 5, 1924.

Station KSD,
St. Louis, Mo.
Sirs:

Please accept my many thanks for the splendid programs I am able to hear through your station. I certainly appreciate them.

My brother, who lives in Newcastle-on-Tyne, England, had the pleasure of listening to KSD during the tests and has heard KSD before that. We have been hearing the same programs—I living just a few miles away and he about 4000 miles away. I have not seen him in 23 years, yet he writes and tells me of hearing the same numbers from KSD as I hear, and it makes me feel as though KSD has brought us closer together. He wrote and asked me to write to KSD and express his many thanks and say that KSD ranks first to them over there as their popular station and that KSD comes in clear and loud.

Would appreciate an answer so that I may send it to him, as I know he will be more than pleased with it. Find stamp enclosed and oblige. I am, sirs,

Yours truly,
GEORGE R. JACQUES.

NIGHT CLASSES IN RADIO BEGIN

Supervised by Board of Education and Tuition Is Free.

The second term of the radio class at Soldan High School has just begun. The class meets on Monday and Wednesday evenings of each week, lasting from 7:30 to 9:30.

The radio work is under the auspices of the Board of Education and the tuition is free to any who desire to attend.

There are two classes, each having its individual instructor, one class dealing with the elementary theories and fundamental principles of magnetism and electricity. The more advanced class deals more with the new circuits, the theories governing reception and transmission of radio signals, including telegraphic practice for those who are interested.

These classes afford an opportunity for those who are interested in radio to acquaint themselves with the theory and practice of radio communication and although it is absolutely free, the instructors are competent to give the very latest and most authentic information on radio.

JAPAN OPEN TO BROADCASTING

Tax on Receiving Sets Equal to Approximately $1 Per Year.

Japan has opened the air to private radio broadcasting, without discrimination against foreign enterprise or materials, according to a cablegram from Commercial Attache Babbitt at Tokio.

The new regulations provide that a continuous-wave system may be used, an annual fee of 500 yen being required for broadcasting 100 miles on wave lengths of 360 and 385 meters, with one and a half kilowatts. For maximum distance of 20 miles, on wave lengths 215 and 325 meters, with 250 watts, the fee is 300 yen annually.

Broadcast receivers for use on 200, 250, 350 and 400 meters require a fee equal to two yen, or about $1 a year. Applicants for licenses are advised to file a prospectus, specifications, expenditure planned, and estimated returns with the Minister of Communications. The tariff on radio imports is expected to be about 25 per cent.

YOUNGEST OF FAMILY ON RADIO PROGRAM

An entire orchestra, whose musicians are members of one family, will give a program at KSD next Wednesday evening. The youngest is Raymond Tieman, who is only 10 years old.

NEW ARRIVALS ON THE RADIO MART

One of the most useful and practical devices yet to make its appearance on the radio market is the Marvel Switch, made by the Marvel Switch Co. It was designed to provide a simple method for shortening and lengthening the wave-length range of a radio receiver and this it does, easily, by changing the primary variable condenser connections from series to parallel or shunt connections. To operate the switch, it is only necessary to pull the knob, then turn the indicator to the desired position. The tapered grip knob is molded of a black composition and is milled for ease of control. The switch is particularly intended for panel mounting, and a template is provided to simplify placing the holes in their proper position. The four terminals are supplied with copper lugs to facilitate soldering. By means of this switch and a 23 or 43 plate variable condenser, the wave-length range of any receiving set may be increased or decreased at will by a simple "twist of the wrist."

The first of the Sodion tubes and sets to arrive are now on sale at a local dealers. This is a new type of vacuum tube which anyone can learn to use in a few moments, and on account of the absence of complicated adjustments, will secure good results at once. The sensitiveness of the Sodion detector makes long distance reception possible, and the tone reproduction is said to be clear and crisp. The tube neither howls, whistles, nor causes beat-notes to interfere with reception. The manufacturers claim that in performance, the DR-6 set with Sodion detector gives signal strength equal to that of a standard audion detector with full regeneration, yet it always reproduces clearly and "can never howl." The set operates on three dry batteries and the usual 22½-volt "B" battery. The detector and tuner are contained in a cabinet provided with a hinged lid which opens similar to a clothes chest. Space is provided for the addition of two stages of audio frequency amplification, and the units may be added one at a time, if desired.

Features claimed for the Sodion tube, which is sold separately, are, that it is "Many times more sensitive than any other vacuum tube detector on the market," and that "The operation of the tube is stable and uniform and will run hours at a time without need of adjustment." The filament consumption is less than one-quarter of an ampere. The circuit for the Sodion detector is entirely different from the ordinary tube, in that a tickler coil,

AMATEURS' SIGNALS SPAN PACIFIC OCEA

First Two-Way Amateur Communication Established With the Orient.

An unknown America radio operator, situated in Tokio, Japan, recently sent a radio message to his mother at Cambridge, Mass., through the amateur radio station 7HG, located in Tacoma, Wash., operated by Charles York, thus marking the first two-way short wave communication across the Pacific Ocean. With only a fleeting contact, barely allowing the message to come through, York had considerable difficulty in distinguishing the foreign operator's call, JUPU.

While the signals of amateur transmitters in the United States have been reported by ship operators in remote sections of the Pacific, and as distant as the island of Ceylon in the Indian Ocean, this particular incident is the first in which amateurs have worked both directions across the 4760-mile stretch of ocean. The message was delivered via the American Radio Relay League traffic system.

The calls hardly had been exchanged and the message copied when communication was interrupted by heavy interference. It was about 1 a. m. when York heard a station with pure "CW" calling on 200 meters and signing with the unfamiliar Japanese call. For a brief interval signals were good at both stations.

The station operated by York is situated on one of the highest hills in the surrounding country. He has done a great deal of long distance work, his best previous two-way record being to communicate with Canadian amateur station 1AC situated in Nova Scotia. He had also worked 6CEU in Hawaii and amateurs in every radio district in the United States with the exception of those in the second and fourth.

His antenna is supported by a 65-foot pole at the free end and a 40-foot pole at the lead-in end. It is a six-wire flat top 50 feet long with a counterpoise directly underneath. The transmitter uses the Hartley circuit with two Tube funker D. R. P. tubes.

MEXICAN RADIO REGULATION

Permit Must Be Obtained Before Station May Be Established.

Operation of radio receiving sets in Mexico is still governed by the provisions of the decree of 1914, according to the Mexican Secretary of Communications, says Assistant Trade Commissioner H. B. MacKenzie. A permit must be secured from the Department of Communications before the station can be established, a penalty of 500 to 1000 pesos and from one to 12 months imprisonment being provided for violation of this requirement. Provision is also made for the punishment of persons who, hearing a transmitted message of the Government, discloses it.

As soon as the prevailing "bad weather" abates in Uruguay, radio development will start up again and apparatus will be in demand, Trade Commissioner Brady reports from Buenos Aires. A new broadcasting station is planned in Montevideo, supplementing the work of the Buenos Aires station.

Panels from Phonograph Records

A 6x10 inch panel may be cut from an old 12-inch phonograph record. To do this use a hot knife. The holes should be punched in the record with a red-hot rod.

plate circuit variometer and a telephone by-pass condenser are unnecessary, in fact, they are inoperative with the Sodion.

The new Cutler-Hammer variable grid-leaks are now available at local dealers. A long-threaded connecting rod reduces body capacity to a minimum, and makes it adaptable to practically every type of receiver. Brackets are provided for attaching a fixed condenser of the proper capacity.

Frost inductance units will be welcomed, for they are adaptable to many uses about the experimenter's workshop. Six taps and a switch lever make it a "variable" inductance and increase its usefulness. As a wave-trap it should be a very efficient instrument.

QUESTIONS and ANSWERS

All Queries Must Be Accompanied by the Name and Address of the Writer

Q. What would be the cheapest and most satisfactory way to connect a crystal set into a vacuum tube set? G. H. W.

A. It will be necessary to procure a vacuum tube, socket, "B" battery, "A" battery, rheostat, grid-condenser and grid-leak. The dealer from whom the parts are obtained will furnish a diagram of connections. If you are now using a tuning coil, it would be advisable to obtain either a vario-coupler, for single-circuit set, or else three honeycomb coils and use a three-circuit hook-up. The latter is undoubtedly the more selective of the two, and preferred by many radio fans, but it is more difficult to tune.

Q. Are three-circuit tuners considered hard to tune? C. E. S.

A. It requires more experience to get the best results with a three-circuit tuner than with a single or two-circuit set, but the selectivity of a three-circuit receiver is much greater. For this reason it is preferred by many enthusiasts.

Q. (1) What should be the ratio of an audio frequency transformer to be used with a UV-199 tube? (2) Is a repaired tube as good as a new one? E. M.

A. (1) For the first stage a 5 to 1 should be employed, and for the second stage, a 3 or 4 to 1. (2) KSD has made no comparative experiments to determine the difference, if any, between new and "repaired" vacuum tubes.

Q. (1) Do you recommend the Reinartz circuit for home use? (2) Does a varnished cabinet affect the operation of a set. (3) Will a loud speaker work on a Reinartz set with one stage of amplification? My set is very sensitive to body capacity. Is there any way to overcome this trouble? M. T.

A. (1) A well made Reinartz set will give very satisfactory results. The "best" circuit, however, is entirely a matter of personal opinion and choice. (2) Varnish is not recommended. Shellac finished with sandpaper would be much more desirable. (3) Yes, it should, when receiving from local stations.

Q. Yes, "shield" the panel by placing thin sheet copper, tin foil, screen or aluminum directly back of, and next to the panel, and connect it to the "ground" lead of the set. This should almost entirely eliminate the trouble.

Q. (1) Will a circuit which has given excellent results using a UV-199 tube work equally as satisfactorily with a WD-12 tube? (2) Will it make any difference if the coils on a vario-coupler rotor and stator has different kinds of insulation? The rotor of my coupler is wound with enameled wire and the stator with cotton-covered wire. (3) Will varnishing the windings of a variometer or vario-coupler affect its efficiency? H. R. Jr.

A. (1) Yes. It may be necessary to change the grid-leak adjustment, however, when the tubes are changed, as each detector tube requires different grid-leak resistance, for best results. (2) No. This would not affect its efficiency. (3) Both substances should never be varnished. Collodion is the best, if an effective agent is necessary to hold the wire in place.

Q. Would like to know if any changes have been made at KSD last July and August. I do not get your signals as strong now as I did then, when it seems that they should be stronger now than in summer. J. C., Christopher,

A. No changes have been made which would materially affect the strength of KSD's signals. Look over your receiving set to make sure that it is as efficient now as it was last summer. Are all the connections soldered, both in the aerial and in the set? Have you tested your "A" and "B" batteries lately? There are many seemingly small points which, if overlooked, can weaken received signals.

A. (1) While adjusting the grid-leak and condenser of my tube, it burned out. Can a tube be burned out that way or was it ready to burn out? I may have touched the foil with my screw driver. (2) What kind of a grid-leak is best for a one-tube set? J. H.

A. (1) Altering the resistance of the grid-leak could not burn out a tube. Either a short circuit was created when your screw driver touched the tinfoil, or else your detector just "happened" to burn out at the time you were making the adjustment. (2) The proper resistance varies with every tube. This can only be determined by experiment. A home-made grid-leak is as good as any that can be bought. The only difference between those on the market and the home-made type is in the facility with which they may be mounted on a panel, and adjusted.

Q. (1) What is the wave length of KFKB, the Brinkley-Jones Hospital, Milford, Kan.? (2) Who owns the station at Joliet, Ill.? H. S. G.

A. (1) 286 meters, 1050 kilo cycles. (2) WWAE, Alamo Dance Hall. A. J. Crowley.

Q. I am sending a copy of my hook-up, to which I want to add one stage of audio-frequency amplification. Will an amplifier work all right with the hook-up? E. W.

A. The diagram enclosed with your letter is a single-circuit regenerative, and one or two steps of audio frequency will work very satisfactorily with it.

NAVAL MEN MUST BE TYPISTS

Ability to Use Typewriter Now Requirement of "Gobs."

Modern radio methods are employed in the Naval Radio Central at Washington, and nine radio men, who recently reported from service with the fleet, found that they had to learn to type messages. Although these men passed speed and accuracy tests of 18 or 19 words in code and 22 to 23 words in plain English, not one of them could copy on a typewriter, believing that the old pencil and paper method was still used. They were soon disillusioned, and set to work learning the standard typewriter keyboard so that they could take down messages.

Radiograms.

The United States navy radio station in San Francisco, Cal., now receives messages direct from its station at Cavite, in Manila Bay, twice daily. The distance is 6221 miles, and, as far as is known, is the longest one-way radio circuit in the world actually handling traffic.

Extensive investigations are being made in Michigan to locate and map "dead spots," where it is impossible to receive radio signals. To gather all possible data, an automobile has been equipped with a sensitive receiving set.

Two young men in Stockholm, Sweden, using radio apparatus made by themselves, recently heard music played in New Jersey, more than 3000 miles away. This is the first time an American station broadcasting music has been picked up in that country.

NEW OAKLAND STATION OPENS

Another powerful broadcasting station opened this week, when KGO, the new General Electric station at Oakland, Cal., went "on the air," presenting the initial program Jan. 8. The new station operates on a wave length of 312 meters.

Counterfeit vs. Genuine Tubes.

"Fake" tubes can be identified through the trade-mark on the glass.

The trade-mark on the genuine tube is blown into the glass and cannot be removed. The counterfeit tube has the trade-mark stenciled in white paste and can be scraped off.

Foreign countries buy approximately $200,000,000 in radio supplies in the United States annually.

A CROSLEY RADIO MESSAGE

In February 1920 Powel Crosley, Jr., then enabled in the manufacturing business in Cincinnati, became interested in radio. Production of radio apparatus was commenced shortly afterwards under the name Crosley Manufacturing Company. About January 1, 1923, Powel Crosley, Jr., and his associates acquired the capital stock of The Precision Equipment Company, one of the seventeen original licensees under the Armstrong patent.

The growth of the two institutions known as Crosley Manufacturing Company and The Precision Equipment Company in the radio field has been phenomenal. The public recognizing unusual value, has clamored for the products of these two companies. Both institutions have been operated entirely independently of each other, but for various reasons, a merger has been effected in the following manner:

The name of The Precision Equipment Company, of which Powel Crosley, Jr. was and continues to be President, has been changed to The Crosley Radio Corporation.

An arrangement has been made whereby the business of the Crosley Manufacturing Company in its entirety has been taken over by The Crosley Radio Corporation. Thus many economies will be effected in production, administration, management, advertising and in many other ways. The same policies will be effective as heretofore, with the same personnel in charge.

Believing the Crosley Manufacturing Company and The Precision Equipment Company have each individually been producing more radio receiving sets than any other organization in the world, an idea may be obtained as to the volume of production made possible by uniting the two institutions.

The Crosley Radio Corporation now occupies three large plants in the city of Cincinnati, including its own wood working cabinet plant. A fourth plant larger than the present three combined has just been purchased for additional expansion.

The products of the Crosley Manufacturing Company have carried the trade name "Crosley", those of The Precision Equipment Company the trade name "Ace". In the future all products of The Crosley Radio Corporation, will bear the trade name "Crosley".

Practically every dependable radio dealer in the United States sells Crosley apparatus. If not, he can get it for you. The success of the name "Crosley" in the radio field is founded upon a well defined policy of producing efficient radio apparatus, simple in construction, in large quantities, to be sold at moderate prices, thus thoroughly living up to the Crosley slogan "Better—Cost Less".

Following Is a List of the Most Popular Crosley Receiving Sets With Their Prices:

Crosley Type V (formerly Ace) one tube regenerative	$ 20.00
Crosley Type 3B (formerly Ace) three tube regenerative	50.00
Crosley Type 3C (formerly Ace) Consolette	125.00
Crosley Model VI, two tube, incorporating radio frequency	30.00
Crosley Model XJ, four tube, incorporating radio frequency	65.00
Crosley Model XL, four tube Consolette	140.00

Mr. Leonard H. Weeks, Minot, North Dakota, the only amateur in the United States consistently handling traffic with Captain Donald McMillan, North Pole, uses the $20 and $50 receiving sets mentioned above.

Armstrong regenerative receivers, manufactured by The Crosley Radio Corporation, are licensed under U. S. Patent No. 1,113,149.

You certainly have the greatest crystal I have ever used—and I have used them all. Your STEINITE is the greatest for volume and distance I have ever tried.

Just for example let me tell you what I did with STEINITE Last night. I picked up the St. Louis Post Dispatch. Also heard Omaha and Davenport, but that's reasonable.

Then 9 P. M. The Kansas City station is in the air. I attach a small wire here to one receiver, shunt the other and throw the entertainment out into two large rooms. STEINITE is a real crystal. You can refer any doubters to me.

Radiograms.

The United States navy radio station in San Francisco, Cal., now receives messages direct from its station at Cavite, in Manila Bay, twice daily. The distance is 6221 miles, and, as far as is known, is the longest one-way radio circuit in the world actually handling traffic.

Extensive investigations are being made in Michigan to locate and map "dead spots," where it is impossible to receive radio signals. To gather all possible data, an automobile has been equipped with a sensitive receiving set.

Two young men in Stockholm, Sweden, using radio apparatus made by themselves, recently heard music played in New Jersey, more than 3000 miles away. This is the first time an American station broadcasting music has been picked up in that country.

Soldering Couplers.

In soldering to the taps on a coupler that has cotton or silk covered wire there is no need of removing the silk covering as the heat of the iron will be sufficient to burn it through.

The Car of the Year

NEW low prices are the outstanding feature of Chandler's 1924 announcement.

Never has closed-car comfort been given to the public at so low a cost.

Two new sedans are offered, the four-door five-passenger at $1895 and the four-door seven-passenger at $2095. The price of the popular Chummy Sedan, last year's big winner, has been reduced to this figure:

The True Test of Closed Car Value

At the New York Automobile Show and in the sales rooms of its retailers the country over, Chandler now displays a line of new sedans whose appearance, construction and price establish a new basis of judging closed car values. The appended table shows that the price gap between touring car and closed car is carried almost to the disappearing point:

5-Passenger		5-Passenger		7-Passenger
Chummy Sedan	$1745	Sedan	$1895	Sedan	$2095
Touring Car	1485	Touring	1485	Touring	1635
Difference	260	Difference	410	Difference	460

Chummy Sedan—$1745

With this development Chandler narrows the price gap between touring cars and closed cars almost to the point of disappearance.

Sedan bodies of such genuine beauty and durability have never been obtainable at so slight an extra cost over touring models. This is particularly true in the $1500-$2000 class where the Chandler chassis has taken unquestioned leadership.

The phenomenally low prices have not been achieved by any sacrifice of quality.

Each body typifies Fisher's unequalled mastery of the coach builder's art. Combining ruggedness of construction with grace of line and richly finished interiors, they constitute an offering of exceptional appeal.

Freedom from annoying squeaks is insured by unusual structural solidity. The doors will not develop rattles. The paint finishes are full toned and brilliant.

All seats are amply wide, deeply cushioned, and luxuriously comfortable. The upholstery material is a plush of durable texture and is made in an original design of unusual beauty.

That the new cars constitute the greatest of sedan values will be instantly apparent to all who know the ruggedness of the Chandler chassis and the supremacy of Chandler performance.

Pikes Peak Motor

Built to master a mountain, the Pikes Peak Motor has officially established the Chandler as having no performance equal, regardless of cost or class. Matchless high gear capacity, amazingly swift acceleration, silence, smoothness and flexibility are the acknowledged attributes of this famous power plant.

Traffic Transmission

Generally regarded as the biggest advance in automobile design since the self-starter, this exclusive Chandler feature banishes the evils of the old-fashioned gear shift with its uncertainty and clashing. In a Chandler, the least experienced driver can change to any speed, instantly, silently and positively. The familiar gear lever and clutch are used exactly as before. There is nothing new to learn except the delightful driving ease thus provided.

Dominant in beauty, spaciousness, master performance and handling ease, these new models offer closed car values whose pre-eminence investigation will reveal.

(The Traffic Transmission is built complete in the Chandler plant under Campbell patents.)

By Berry Moore.

The scope of the movement in the business area east of Twelfth boulevard, is a distinctive feature of the spirited real estate revival following the holiday respite. The district between Washington and Franklin avenues is displaying decided buoyancy, presumably as a result of the plan to widen Morgan street between Grand boulevard and Broadway, for which provisions have been made in the $37,000,000 bond issue, to say nothing of Franklin avenue, the downtown section of which is also to be widened.

The Ben Altheimer & Bro. Realty Co. yesterday purchased for a client, whose name has not been disclosed, the four-story building at 719-29 North Broadway, occupying a site 37x135 feet opposite Union Market.

The property adjoins the southeast corner of Broadway and Morgan street, which has a frontage of 25 feet on Broadway, and 10 feet of which will be cut off the corner with the widening of Morgan street.

Thus the property acquired through Altheimer & Bro. is destined to become the corner of this quarter of the block, and as a key holding will have a speculative, as well as an investment value.

The former owner of the property was the George T. Riddle Real Estate Co., and the price paid was $50,000.

Morgan Street Transaction.

Acting for a client, the Ben Altheimer & Bro. Real Estate Co. also concluded negotiations for a building, with a 50-foot frontage on Morgan street just west of Sixth street. The precise location and the identity of the purchaser are withheld, pending the delivery of the deed.

The purchase was made on the theory that much higher prices will prevail on this thoroughfare, which will have the status of a boulevard.

Jake Slupsky, professional real estate operator, has purchased a building, with 24 feet frontage, on Sixth street, adjoining the northeast corner of Morgan street, through the St. Louis Union Trust Co., trustee, for the Famous Shoe and Clothing Co. The price paid was $37,000, according to realty circles.

Jack Dubinsky was dickering with the Cornet & Zeibig Trust for the building purchased by Slupsky, as well as for the northeast corner of Sixth and Morgan streets, having a frontage on Sixth street of 24 feet by a depth on Morgan of 120 feet, when Slupsky concluded negotiations with the St. Louis Union Trust Co.

The two holdings, which adjoin and which have an aggregate frontage of 52 feet on Sixth street, are directly opposite the Union Market and form an attractive site for a large building.

The first sale to draw attention to this district was made two weeks ago, when Frederick Fischer, president of the Fischer Meat Co., occupying large space in the Union Market, purchased through the Ben Altheimer & Bro. Realty Co. a four-story building at 411 Washington avenue, extending through to Lucas avenue, having a frontage of 50 feet on the former and 42 feet on the latter, for $35,000. This building was acquired to be occupied by the Fischer Meat Co. while the new Union Market Building is being constructed.

North Broadway Building Sold.

Another notable deal on Broadway was that by which Arthur Frana acquired the five-story building at 919 North Broadway, occupying a site 28x134 feet. The negotiations, it is understood, were conducted by J. M. Levi & Co. The price was not announced.

Negotiations are pending for various other corners and inside holdings in this district in the vicinity of Morgan street and Franklin avenue, both of which arteries, it is believed, will be characterized by a rush of new blood in this district with their conversion as boulevards.

The district north of Washington avenue will derive further stimulus with the ratification by the Board of Aldermen of the plan for replacing the present Union Market with a modern building. A total of $7,000,000 is authorized in the $37,000,000 bond issue for this improvement.

NEW YEAR'S REALTY TRADING MARKED BY MUCH ACTIVITY IN DOWNTOWN DISTRICT

Several Business Sites on Morgan Street and in Vicinity of Union Market Figure in Transactions.

By Berry Moore.

The scope of the movement in the business area east of Twelfth boulevard, is a distinctive feature of the spirited real estate revival following the holiday respite. The district between Washington and Franklin avenues is displaying decided buoyancy, presumably as a result of the plan to widen Morgan street between Grand boulevard and Broadway, for which provisions have been made in the $87,000,000 bond issue, to say nothing of Franklin avenue, the downtown section of which is also to be widened.

The Ben Altheimer & Bro. Realty Co. yesterday purchased for a client, whose name has not been disclosed, the four-story building at 718-20 North Broadway, occupying a site 37x135 feet opposite Union Market.

The property adjoins the southeast corner of Broadway and Morgan street, which has a frontage of 15 feet on Broadway, and 30 feet of which will be cut off the corner with the widening of Morgan street.

Thus the property acquired through Altheimer & Bro. is destined to become the corner of this quarter of the block, and as a key holding will have a speculative, as well as an investment value.

The former owner of the property was the George T. Riddle Real Estate Co., and the price paid was $50,000.

Morgan Street Transaction.

Acting for a client, the Ben Altheimer & Bro. Real Estate Co., also concluded negotiations for a building, with a 50-foot frontage on Morgan street just west of Sixth street. The precise location and the identity of the purchaser are withheld, pending the delivery of the deed.

The purchase was made on the theory that much higher prices will prevail on this thoroughfare, which will have the status of a boulevard.

Jake Slupsky, professional real estate operator, has purchased a building, with 26 feet frontage, on Sixth street, adjoining the northeast corner of Morgan street, through the St. Louis Union Trust Co., trustee, for the Famous Shoe and Clothing Co. The price paid was $37,000, according to realty circles.

Jack Dubinsky was dickering with the Cornet & Zeibig Trust for the building purchased by Slupsky, as well as for the northeast corner of Sixth and Morgan streets, having a frontage on Sixth street of 26 feet by a depth on Morgan of 120 feet, when Slupsky concluded negotiations with the St. Louis Union Trust Co.

The two holdings, which adjoin, and which have an aggregate frontage of 52 feet on Sixth street, are directly opposite the Union Market and form an attractive site for a large building.

The first sale to draw attention to this district was made two weeks ago, when Frederick Fischer, president of the Fischer Meat Co., occupying large space in the Union Market, purchased through the Ben Altheimer & Bro. Realty Co. a four-story building at 411 Washington avenue, extending through to Lucas avenue, having a frontage of 50 feet on the former and 42 feet on the latter, for $85,000. This building was acquired to be occupied by the Fischer Meat Co., while the new Union Market Building is being constructed.

North Broadway Building Sold.

Another notable deal on Broadway was that by which Arthur Franz acquired the five-story building at 919 North Broadway, occupying a site 28x134 feet. The negotiations, it is understood, were conducted by J. M. Levi & Co., The price was not announced.

Negotiations are pending for various other corners and inside holdings in this district in the vicinity of Morgan street and Franklin avenue, both of which arteries, it is believed, will be characterized by a rush of new blood in this district with their conversion as boulevards.

The district north of Washington avenue will derive further stimulus with the ratification by the Board of Aldermen of the plan for replacing the present Union Market with a model building. A total of $13,000,000 is authorized in the $87,000,000 bond issue for this improvement.

Noteworthy in this connection are the plans of B. Nugent & Bro. Dry Goods Co. for a building to cost $6,000,000 on the site of its present store at the southeast corner of Broadway and Washington avenue, and on adjoining ground on Broadway, and those of the Grand-Leader for a $3,000,000 eight-story addition on Lucas avenue, extending through to Morgan street, with underground connection with its main store, occupying the entire block from Washington to Lucas and from Sixth to Seventh streets.

The sites for both these projects have been assembled by the Mercantile Trust Co. only after negotiations covering from one to two years, and building plans are now in full process of development.

There is also a notable demand for property on Franklin avenue, which extends from Broadway to Grand boulevard, several offers having been made for holdings, including several prominent corners in the business section of this thoroughfare, during the last week, which promise to result in sales.

The Weisels-Gerhart Real Estate Co., yesterday, announced the sale of the three-story building at the northwest corner of Twenty-seventh street and Franklin avenue, for the Homer Investment Co., to Abe Weiss. The site has 51 feet 10 inches on Franklin avenue, by 124 feet on Twenty-seventh street.

Jack Dubinsky yesterday sold his half interest in the three-story Lafayette Hotel block, occupying the northwest corner of Eighth and Chestnut streets, to Frank Dubinsky, his brother, who thereby acquired ownership of the entire property.

The two brothers purchased this corner, regarded as one of the best on downtown Chestnut street, before the big uplift in prices on this thoroughfare. The basis of the recent transaction was not disclosed.

Sale of Eleventh and Chestnut.

Frank Dubinsky recently purchased the northwest corner of Eleventh and Chestnut streets, opposite the old City Hall block which has been chosen as the site of the proposed Courthouse, for which $4,000,000 is provided in the $87,000,000 bond issue.

Sam Liebert, a real estate agent with offices in the International Life Building, purchased the southeast corner of Tenth and Market streets, instead of the southeast corner of Eleventh and Chestnut streets, as inadvertently stated in last Sunday's Post-Dispatch, through the John F. Herrmann Jr. Real Estate Co.

The Hemmelmann-Spackler Real Estate Co., announces sales agreegating more than a million dollars, originating during the last six weeks, and comprising holdings of various descriptions. This concern, which is the St. Louis representative of the New York Life Insurance Co., reports having made a large number of loans for both renewals and investment purposes.

The Mercantile Trust Co. reports an impressive number of sales. These include various large business properties, several in the central business district, announcement of which will be made ered.

The Mercantile Trust Co. reports the sale of the northwest corner of Twenty-second and Market streets, 24 feet six inches by 73 feet, occupied by a business building. The sale was made to a client of J. M. Levy & Co., in conjunction with which negotiations were concluded.

The Bellis Realty Co., with offices in the Arcade Building, closed 202 sales of property in 1923, averaging more than $7000 each, one sale for each business day, according to Milton Bellis, president of the company.

Realty Firm Adds Four Salesmen.

The Federer Realty Co. reports that George Kirchhoff, Wilbur F. Hannauer, son of Joseph W. Hannauer; Louis Steinmeyer and Michael Reinagel have joined their sales forces since the first of the year. They will devote their time to the selling of improved property and also subdivison property of the company.

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick A. Herminghaus New Owners of Six-Family Building.

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick A. Herminghaus have purchased through William E. Wrisberg, real estate operator, an attractive six-family apartment building, at 5535 Page boulevard known as the DeWar Apartment, owned by George L. and Kennett D. Schaberg, executors of the estate of Mrs. J. B. Schaberg.

The location is one of the best on this thoroughfare. Values of property in this particular locality have become stabilized by reason of the many good schools, churches, public and semi-public institutions in the vicinity.

Wrisberg also announces the sale of the apartment flat building at 614 and 616 Bates street, for Mrs. Minnie Hake, to August Beckerle. This district is also attracting investors on account of its good streets and character of improvements.

WESTMORELAND DRIVE HOME DONE IN GEORGIAN STYLE

William F. Peters' residence, now under construction at 7380 Westmoreland drive, is an informal Georgian house of brick, with stone sills and decorative stone lintels. The broad, spacious hall is characteristic of the interior. A circular stairway winds from the hall to the second floor. The plan is arranged so that the main portion of the house is only one room in depth. This affords cross ventilation, a most desirable feature in summer.

The servants' quarters are in a wing to the rear and can be closed off from the balance of the house. Corrubia & Henderson are the architects.

BANNER BUGGY CO. LEASES FACTORY ON THIRTEENTH ST.

The Banner Buggy Co. has leased for a long term of years the two-story factory building at the southeast corner of Thirteenth and Morrison avenue. The building fronts 138 feet on Morrison avenue and 127 feet on Thirteenth street and contains approximately 35,000 square feet.

The Banner Buggy Co. will use the building for factory purposes. It formerly was located at 1628 North Eleventh street. The lease was made for Morris A. Helmann, Martin & Breitt Real Estate Co. representing both parties.

The realty firm also leased to Max Lovy a one-story building, containing 12,000 square feet, at 1312-14 South Thirteenth street. He will use the building to repaint Ford automobiles. This building also was leased for Morris A. Helmann.

EUCLID AV. APARTMENT BUILDING SOLD FOR $50,000

The sale of a 12-unit apartment building at 904-8 Euclid avenue, a three-story structure, is announced by the Savings Trust Co. It was bought by Art B. Mooney for $50,000. The former owner was Mrs. Anna Trumper. All the units comprise four rooms and bath.

The building is at the northeast corner of Euclid avenue and the Suburban tracks, and occupies a lot 150x225 feet.

1923 GREATEST YEAR FOR BUILDING IN U. S.

Operations Approximately $5,-500,000,000 — St. Louis Tenth City With $41,443,755.

Total building operations throughout the United States in 1923 were approximately $5,500,000,000, making it the greatest building year in the history of the country. These activities exceeded the previous record-breaking year of 1922 by something less than 25 per cent, according to reports from building departments made yesterday to the national monthly building survey of S. W. Strauss & Co.

That these tremendous operations will be continued during the winter was indicated by the reports received by S. W. Strauss & Co., showing a gain of 11 per cent for December, as compared for the same month a year ago.

Half in the Large Cities.

The 25 leading cities, representing a population of 20 per cent of the whole country, absorbed 50 per cent of the nation's building activities, during the year, thus indicating that in vast sections of the country outside the larger cities the building shortage is not being made up.

Comparable reports from 266 leading cities and towns showed a gain for the year of 23 per cent. In these cities $3,303,041,799 in building permits were issued, compared with $2,687,283,872 in 1922. The greatest gains were recorded in the Pacific Coast states, where activities increased 31 per cent. Gains in other sections were: Central, 30 per cent; East, 18 per cent, and South, 14 per cent.

The 25 Leading Cities.

The 25 leading cities of the country ranked in permits issued for the year as follows:

New York, $792,911,559; Chicago, $329,604,317; Los Angeles, $182,133,181; Detroit, $129,662,711; Philadelphia, $123,511,935; Cleveland, $69,390,540; Washington, D. C., $49,623,605; San Francisco, $49,594,011; Baltimore, $46,988,002; St. Louis, $41,443,755; Boston, $40,626,352; Milwaukee, $39,007,845; St. Paul, $35,735,627; Pittsburg, $32,915,312; Minneapolis $32,315,545; Newark, $32,226,106; Buffalo, $27,907,000; Oakland, Cal. $27,626,897; Indianapolis, $27,307,279; Cincinnati, $27,160,520; Atlanta, $27,094,498; Portland, Ore., $25,247,135; Kansas City, Mo., $24,841,756; Long Beach, Cal., $23,693,580 and Seattle, $22,482,678.

It is in the Colonial style, with variegated metal faced brick and Bedford stone trimmings, and has a green slate roof.

The first floor includes living room, reception hall, sun parlor, dining room, kitchen, butler's pantry and breakfast room. The second floor has three large bedrooms, sleeping and open porches, maids' rooms, baths. A number of large closets are a feature. Bonsack & Pierce are the architects.

This building has four suites, each comprising five rooms, sun parlor and sleeping porch, with in-a-dor beds in both sun parlor and sleeping porch, giving nine-room efficiency. A four-car brick garage is in the rear of the building.

The building, 7260 Forsyth boulevard, a duplicate of 7258 Forsyth, also was sold through Bakewell to L. Rudman for $40,000.

Joyful News for the Ruptured!

OPERATIONS NO LONGER NECESSARY — Except in Extreme Cases

Many Thousands Report Their Ruptures CURED

Men, Women and Children—All Ages—All Walks of Life

The New Improved Brooks Appliance

Proves Itself by Far the Greatest Invention of the Age for the Treatment and Retention of Rupture. An Entirely New Principle. Nothing Like a "Truss."

If you are wearing a steel or hard rubber spring truss, or an elastic with hard pad, you are not only suffering unnecessary inconvenience and discomfort but you are also making it almost impossible for your rupture to ever grow smaller or heal.

And if you have a rupture on one side only and are wearing an old-fashioned spring truss, you will almost surely develop another rupture on the other side.

These are facts that EVERY RUPTURED PERSON SHOULD KNOW, and that can be easily verified by asking any physician in the country who treats rupture.

The BROOKS' APPLIANCE is the ONLY method of FIRMLY HOLDING A RUPTURE—NO MATTER WHAT POSITION YOU MAY BE IN OR HOW STRENUOUS YOUR WORK MAY BE.

The BROOKS' APPLIANCE has no springs, either metal or hard rubber. It has no hard pad, but uses a soft automatic air cushion made of rubber and yielding to the slightest touch. This cushion clings firmly to the place of rupture—not because of great pressure (as in a truss), but because of its shape and the manner in which it is held to the body.

The Appliance weighs but a few ounces and is so small that even tight fitting evening clothes give no indication of its being worn.

Every BROOKS' APPLIANCE IS MADE TO ORDER FROM THE CUSTOMER'S MEASUREMENTS AND IT IS SOLD TO YOU ON FREE TRIAL WITH INSTRUCTIONS TO RETURN IT IF YOU DO NOT FIND IT EVERYTHING YOU COULD WISH IN PERFECTION AS A SUPPORT FOR RUPTURE.

YET THE PRICE IS MUCH LESS THAN ANY "TRUSS" OR OTHER DEVICE YOU EVER BOUGHT.

No matter where you were fitted or who advised your present truss, the chances are 19 out of 20 that you would be MORE COMFORTABLE AND BETTER OFF IN EVERY WAY if you are wearing a BROOKS' APPLIANCE.

In addition to GUARANTEEING YOU PERFECT COMFORT, THE BROOKS' APPLIANCE ACCOMPLISHES THE LARGEST NUMBER OF QUICK AN FINAL CURES OF ANY OTHER RUPTURE SUPPORT IN THE WORLD.

So you have every reason for sending your name for our booklets and instructions for measurements.

Don't "pass up" this opportunity and regret it later—as Mr. Cunningham of Detroit did, and who now says:

"I have purchased a Brooks' Rupture Appliance and it certainly is the grandest thing I ever saw. I have seen this Appliance advertised for years and as I had tried some advertised rupture cures to no avail, I passed this one up.

"I have been harnessed for ten years with the ordinary truss and since I got Mr. Brooks' Appliance, I don't see how I ever stood the makeshift trusses that some concerns manufacture.

"Some men may invent automobiles, airplanes and radios, but I consider Mr. Brooks' one of the greatest inventors that is known.

"I cannot recommend this Appliance too highly, for all I could say would not do it justice and I am willing to give testimony to any would-be purchaser, for it is worth ten times the ridiculous low price which you sell it for."

Very respectfully yours,
L. B. CUNNINGHAM,
4751 Trumbull Avenue
Detroit, Michigan.

READ YAHLEM'S STORY

Remember the last "Used Car Week," from June 17 to June 23, the Post-Dispatch offered a Loving Cup to the dealer who sold the largest number of used cars. Of course, Yahlem won it. It's a beauty. On display in our Showroom, 1035 N. Grand bl., today.

Another Used Car Week starts today. Yahlem is the favorite—bet your money on him—he will win for you. Yahlem is going to start out with a rush and you won't see him "for dust." Why did Yahlem win the Loving Cup in the last contest? The reasons are very simple. The people believed in Yahlem. They know he is a used car specialist. Yahlem gets value; Yahlem gives value. Yahlem has no high rents to pay. Our store is not so beautiful; only a hole in the wall; the woodwork is not fancy; one or two broken windows; the doors don't fit; but you ought to see the bargains on the floor.

Why do the crowds turn out for "Babe" Ruth, Hornsby, Ty Cobb, Dempsey, Valentino, Douglas Fairbanks, Charles Chaplin, John McCormack and Yahlem; because these guys are proven champions in their line and the people like champions. Yahlem started on a shoestring and built up a $200,000.00 business in four years. Yahlem has broken all sales records. That's why they call him the "Used Car King" and the Price-Wrecker. Yahlem's ads bring the crowds. Watch Yahlem knock 'em dead this week.

The Big Race is on. Come today. Follow the Crowds.

200 CARS

No minors; no dealers. This sale is for the public only. 5 extra salesmen to handle the crowds. 100 CARS MUST GO THIS WEEK.

YAHLEM SAYS:-

"No interest charged"
"Any terms with reason"
"Free storage till Spring"
"Trade your old car"
"Every car guaranteed"
"Buy now; save money"

Yahlem's Customers Say:-

"You saved me $200.00"
"My neighbor sent me to you"
"Another dealer wanted to charge me 20% interest"
"Everyone thinks I bought a new car"
"How can you sell 'em so cheap?"

Safe Rules For Buying a Used Car

1. Buy only from a responsible dealer who has a reputation to maintain.
2. Get a WRITTEN GUARANTEE that means something.
3. Beware of a car that is too cheap! A good car has a definite value.

An unusual opportunity exists here to get a good, serviceable car at a low price. To get the new Ford models, owners have turned in splendid cars at a fraction of their real value. One profit satisfies us, and we made that on the new car.

We have a limited number of reconditioned Fords of such exception value that we will prove our confidence by furnishing a written guarantee, and give FREE ROAD SERVICE for a period of One Year. Buy now and make a profit. These cars will be worth more within three months.

ON WITH THE DANCE!

Tracking Idealism to Its Lair

Some say there is no such thing, but it can be found, even in a large city —A hunting trip and what came of it — The girl and the bundle tied with ribbon—Book criticisms from real experts—Where the Canadian dimes came from—A world peace conference that didn't pan out — Grounds for suspecting the coffee —What would make the little sick girl well :: :: ::

"Ah! A box of good candy for her brothers and sisters."

IDEALISM is a fine thing. Individuals, nations and sometimes all of that portion of the world which calls itself civilized go hunting for it, but the only sure place to find it is in the dictionary.

Hunting for idealism is a fascinating sport. It requires no special equipment except an open mind—the wider open the better—and a child-like faith in things as they ought to be. It is a sport that can be followed anywhere. Idealism, if ever found, may be discovered perching high on the top of a bus, hanging on a street car strap, lolling on the seat of a service automobile, riding in an office building elevator, gliding from floor to floor on a department store moving stairway or hurrying through the downtown streets of a big city. You may hunt for days, or weeks, or even for years, and never find it, but that only adds zest to the chase.

Ah, here comes a service car. Empty, too. Let's jump in and let idealism take its course. Four blocks and no other passengers! Where are all the folks today. Wait a minute, driver, there are two young ladies who want to get in.

Note the package one of the young ladies is carrying. Isn't it pretty, with its flower design and its baby-pink ribbons tied in a cute little bow on top. About three pounds of candy in that, one would say. From a good shop, too. No cheap stuff. Brothers and sisters at home, no doubt. Or maybe it's for mother. The girl looks worn and tired. Works hard all week and then pinches enough out of her scant earnings to buy good candy for the rest of the family. Heigh-ho! We're on the track of idealism right now.

"What kept you so long, Mag? I waited an age for you."

"Aw! I had to walk five blocks from the office to get this laundry. They charge you high for it down there, but they put it up in such flossie packages."

Well, our shot at idealism fell short that time. But never mind, we'll run it down. We'll just saunter around awhile out here in the West End. Not very rich picking for idealism hunters here. See those two fellows on the corner. Know 'em? Well, I should say. They used to be bartenders downtown when bartending was good. Let's edge over and hear what they're talking about.

"That book, 'This Freedom,' is all right."

"Like it better than 'Black Oxen'?"

"Sure; it's better in every way."

"Better style?"

"Much better. Why, say, that 'Black Oxen' book wouldn't fool anybody. 'This Freedom' looks like the real thing and you'd never guess it was just a dummy to carry a whisky flask in."

"All right. I'll take a gross of 'em?"

Another shot wasted, but the hunting will get better as we go along. Yes, we'll take this car and go back downtown. Now, there's an alert and obliging conductor. See him reach out and steady that old lady's arm as she steps off? He has an honest face, too. Gee! It just struck me. I have nothing smaller than a $5 bill. He doesn't have to change it if he doesn't want to, but he looks so obliging! Ah! I thought so. Changed it without any kick.

Well, here's where we get off. We'll drop in here and have a cigar. Now, wouldn't that jar you? I didn't have any silver money in my pocket. And now I find four Canadian dimes and an old-fashioned 20-cent piece in my change. Glad I didn't offer that conductor a 10-spot.

Idealism sometimes roosts high. A friend of mine fixed me up with a guest card at his club. It's on the top floor of a skyscraper and pretty exclusive. We'll go up and have a bite to eat. Well, here we are.

Say! There are three of the biggest men in town over there at that table. One is a bank president, another is an international lawyer and the third is a sort of philanthropist who is always thinking up ways to make the world better. I understand he got honorable mention in Edward Bok's peace plan competition. Guess his lawyer friend helped him out on it. Let's ease over to that table next to them and hear them talk about big affairs. Listen:

"I think nine is enough. There is no good reason for exceeding that figure."

Ahs Just as I expected. They are discussing the World Court and the number of judges it should have. The lawyer is talking now. Keep your ears open for words of wisdom.

"Maybe you're right, but I don't think ten would be excessive."

"Very well. You go and pay ten for it if you want to, but I know where I can get it for $9 a quart."

Come on. Let's get out of here. Idealism hasn't even a guest card in this club. Here's the elevator. That man that got in with us said he wanted to get off at the sixth floor, but the operator shot past that floor. Ah! He's stopping now. He's reversing and going back to the sixth. How polite he is. Hear him: "I beg your pardon, sir, for missing your floor, but I'll take you right back." Say! What does that mean, operator? I distinctly saw you make a face behind that man's back when he got off. After you had apologized to him so politely, too.

"Sure, I apologized, and sure, I made a face. I got to be polite to him, but that guy is going to have a hard time getting where he's going when he rides with me. He didn't put anything in my Christmas box.

Huh! We didn't stay in that club long enough to eat, did we? But never mind. I know a cozy little restaurant down here. I never ate there, but the place looks so inviting that I have often wanted to. Note the sign on the window: "Coffee like mother used to make." That sounds good. Come on in. Let's sit back near the partition. I always like to hear the chatter and gossip of the kitchen. That's a bright-looking bus boy. The fat man over there seems to be the proprietor. Ah! Here comes our coffee! The boss is calling the boy. Listen closely to what he says:

"Hey, Jimmie. You'd better run over to the hotel and get another can of coffee grounds. We're running pretty low."

Stop that boy as he goes out. What does he say?

"Sure, that's where we get all our coffee. There's lots of juice left in the grounds after the hotel is through with 'em."

Now, there! See that Italian fruit vender feeding apples to a horse. They are his apples, but it isn't his horse. Looks as if we were on the track. What's that he's mumbling?

"I gotta three ap' left. Pretty soon bigga policeman come along, take 'em all. Bigga policeman no good. Horse no much good neither, but better than bigga policeman. Play fine trick on da big stiff. Give ap' to da dam horse an' go home. Den da bigga policeman he can starve. I no care."

Well, that looked promising, but it hardly stands up under the acid test for idealism. Let's keep going.

Look out! Don't bump into that kid. Did you ever in your life see such a dirty-faced boy? And he's got a newspaper in one hand and a flower in the other. Wonder whose out giving roses to newsboys. What's that the kid said?

"Say, youse! Nobody give it to me, an' I didn't swipe it at no funeral. It's de real goods from de flower store an' it's paid for, too.

"Don't you guys think nobody ever does nothin' for nobody for nothin'? I tell you what. There's a little gal up here on Eight' street an' she's sick, an' she's got a little altar right by her bed. Statoos an' pictures an' everything on it. Gee! It's just like bein' in church. The doctor says he don't think she'll ever walk no more, but she thinks dat if she puts a flower on dat altar every day and prays like anything, she'll get well. I tole de other newsies about it and we take up a collection every night to get dat flower. An' there's a flower store guy that lets us have a big rose for a quarter, no matter how high de price ought to be—just because it's for a little sick girl. An' I'll tell you something else, too. It dat kid puts dat flower on de altar every day an' keeps on prayin' she's goin' to get well. You can't believe in anything like dat without it does you some good."

That's all for today. The search is ended and we come home with idealism in our trophy bag.

"Looks like a real case of idealism, but is it?"

ALL HER MONEY CAN'T MAKE "THE POOR LITTLE RICH GIRL" HAPPY

Virginia Loney, the Lusitania orphan who inherited $1,500,000 at 16, is divorced at 24, and now her two small children are missing — She alleges her former husband has "robbed" her of them

By ELSIE McCORMICK.

THE young woman who is wealthy in her own right has a far poorer chance to make a happy marriage than one in moderate circumstances. Many men of high character will not propose to a wealthy girl because they are afraid of being thought mercenary. When she does marry she runs the risk of seeing her happiness spoiled by her money and her husband made selfish and irresponsible.

Mrs. Robert H. Gamble, known eight years ago as "the Poor Little Rich Girl," has found that with the large estate left her by her parents she is not able to buy an even moderately happy destiny. When, at the age of 16, she came into a fortune of a million and a half, thousands of girls regarded her as an unofficial Princess, born with a diamond bracelet on her arm. Now, at 24, she is divorced, lonely and frantic with anxiety for the two children who have been kidnaped by their father and carried off to Florida.

From the first time that she kicked her pink toes out from under a coverlet of real lace, Virginia Loney Gamble found herself surrounded by every luxury that wore a price tag. Her mother often used up $75,000 a year on the family living expenses. Her father, a sportsman of international note, would cross the continent for salmon fishing in Oregon and then hastily depart for England because the grouse on a certain moor were reported thicker than usual. Virginia, who was his closest companion, took as a matter of course a 3000-mile journey to see a polo game or an ocean voyage for the sake of a yacht race.

It was when Virginia was 16 that the family sailed on the Lusitania for England. She and her mother were bound for their estate in Northamptonshire; her father was returning to France to resume duty with the American Volunteer Motor Ambulance Corps. When the torpedo tore into the liner Dr. Loney led his daughter and wife through the panic to a lifeboat. There they found only one place left. Virginia was helped in and her mother and father, remaining behind on the sinking ship, waved goodby to her as the boat swung over the side. A few minutes later the lifeboat capsized in the death plunge of the Lusitania. Virginia swam frantically against the suction. The cold water swept over her; the force of the whirlpool tugged at her body. When, after a long and plucky struggle, she was picked up by a second boat, she still had strength enough to take over the oars of a sailor who had collapsed in exhaustion.

When the wills of her parents were probated it was found that the 16-year-old orphan was heiress to a fortune of $1,500,000. Her guardian, Miss Mary Chamberlain, declared to the Court that the girl could not get along on less than $25,000 a year. Her budget of the expenses necessary to maintain a 16-year-old girl aroused considerable comment among those supporting themselves on $20 or so a week. Four thousand dollars was allotted for food alone. Clothing was estimated at $3500 a year, recreation and amusements at $1500, tuition fees at $2500, medical attention at $500 and summer vacation expenses at $2500.

But despite her million and her extravagant budget, the "Poor Little Rich Girl" was far from contentment. She had been such a close companion to her mother and father that her life suddenly became blank. The memory of gay excursions over the moors and up and down the trout streams made her so inexpressibly lonely that she threw herself into war work with all the energy she had.

Then one day at a Red Cross benefit she met Robert H. Gamble, a young service man returned to this country after having been wounded in action. On the breast of his uniform were the silver wings of the aviation service; looped over his shoulder was the twisted red and green cord of the Croix de Guerre. His arm, hung in a black silk sling, bore testimony to the service he had given in France.

The lonely rich girl, with only the cold consolation of a fortune, began to take more than a sisterly interest in the young aviator. The silver wings served as a passport to romance and the sling provided a special visa. Here at last was somebody to mother and comfort, somebody who had also faced death and who had known long months of exile and loneliness.

It was shortly after her eighteenth birthday that Virginia Loney married her aviator.

"I wouldn't have thought of marriage if I'd had a home and fun like other girls," she said recently. "But I'd been in deep mourning for two years and I didn't know much about the ways of the world. Besides, I was lonely."

Immediately after her marriage Mrs. Gamble plunged joyously into the work of making the home that she had missed so during the last two years of her girlhood. A $300,000 house was purchased on Long Island. Thick rugs from Persia, vases from the Far East and a multitude of costly furnishings were brought together to make beauty the setting of her married life.

But there was one important household essential missing, and that was happiness.

According to Mrs. Gamble's later assertions, her husband began to scatter money as if it was paper in a stage snowstorm. Rumors dribbled in about restaurant parties on Broadway famous for the $20 tips handed to the waiters. Mrs. Gamble stated that in nine months of their married life her husband spent $4000 on shirts alone.

Besides meeting his personal bills Mrs. Gamble is said to have advanced her husband $150,000 to buy a partnership in a brokerage firm. She has since declared that the more he received the less considerate he grew. On April 11, 1923, the marriage was brought to an end by a divorce decree granted in Paris.

But there was still more tragedy ahead for the "Poor Little Rich Girl."

On Sept. 25 her two children were seized as they were playing on the lawn and carried off to Gamble's parents in Florida. Armed guards patrol the entrances of the Jacksonville house to prevent the mother from seeing or getting possession of her children.

"I will not pay a cent of ransom," Mrs. Gamble declares.

But the agony of separation is wearing her down, and worry over the welfare of little Catherine, who is only 3, and Robert Howard, who is a baby of 2, gives the saddened mother no rest.

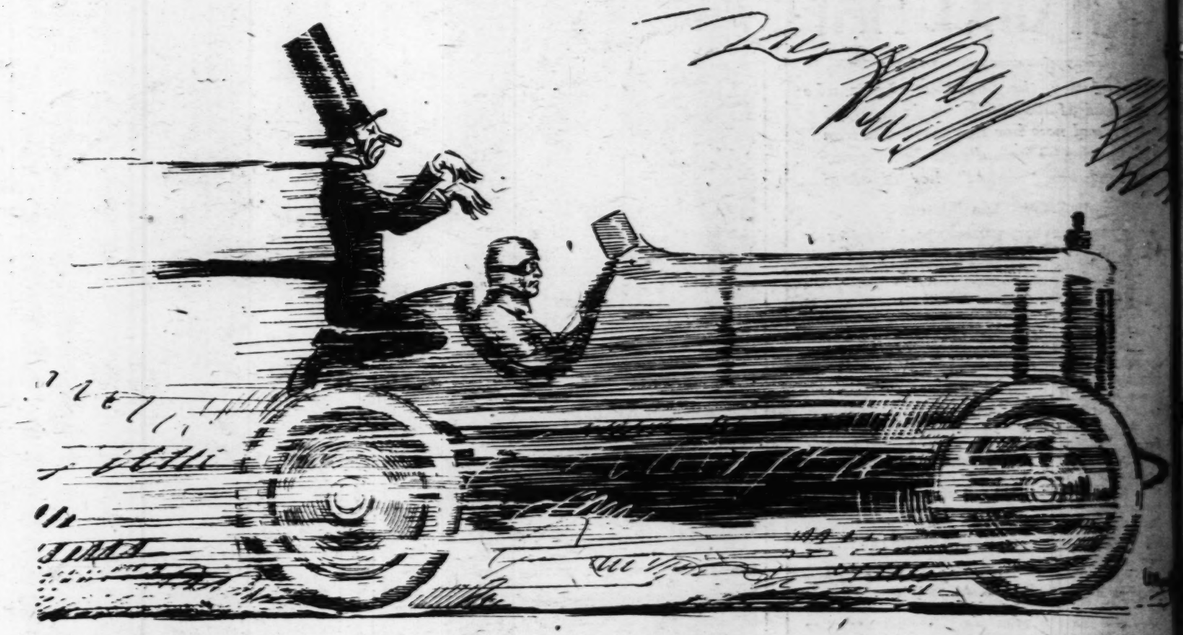
How George Wade's "Jinx" Finally Got Him



This oldtime minstrel man, grown wealthy and living in Kansas City, took up the building and sponsoring of racing cars in 1916 as a hobby—Just about every time one of his machines entered a race, something happened, putting it out of the running or the winning—On Thanksgiving Day at Los Angeles the jinx won, Wade being killed instantly on the Speedway track :: :: ::

FOR seven long years George L. Wade of Kansas City, wealthy sportsman, backer of motor racing and former widely known as a minstrel man, kept up a consistent warfare against his "jinx," and finally paid with his life. In the uneven conflict covering a full cycle of life, Wade faced his enemy always with a smile; and he "went out" with that same smile. But the invisible jinx was relentless, vindictively so. At the last, when it appeared that Wade was marching to victory, the jinx recently set the stage at the Beverly Hills Speedway, and crushed out the life of George Wade in perhaps the most spectacular tragedy ever recorded in this country.

A decade ago George Wade was a minstrel man, beloved in the theatrical business because of a generous nature that refused no one in need of help. "Dad" Wade he became to the members of his troupes, and the same later to those he met in the sporting world. Seven years ago his fortune had mounted through the operation of theatrical trains and investments in oil, and Wade retired from the show business. Shortly after, he took up the development of racing cars as a hobby, and the jinx began to stalk him. Wade soon discovered an unseen enemy in the poor performance and general ill-luck of his racing cars, and grimly set out to beat it. It was easy then to quit. He had little invested, and after all it was only a hobby he was playing. A less determined man would have thrown up the sponge and turned to some less troublesome avocation, but Wade knew internal combustion motors and believed he could beat the jinx; so, the worse the results, the more determined he became.

A year after he went into racing, Wade adopted an 8-months-old boy, and later a rift in domestic life caused Wade to divorce his wife. Then the baby and the hobby became his only interests in life. The child and the divorce are mentioned here because later they figure prominently in the victory of the jinx over the man.

Wade developed several racing cars of the old 300-inch type, but always they were a little short of being winners. Mechanically they seemed perfect. Their lines were as good as any of the sleek speed creations. But they were not winners. Wade did not leave experimental work to his crew of mechanics. Himself an engineer, he worked at the lathe and bench with his mechanics, and he showed them many secrets of racing-car construction. He was still battling the jinx when the Contest Board of the American Automobile Association reduced the piston displacement of racing cars to 183 cubic inches, requiring the development of entirely new cars.

Wade's home in the Country Club district of Kansas City, a marvelously furnished place that displayed antiques and curios gathered from the ends of the earth, was designed to take care of his hobby. Built on a hillside, the basement is on one ground level and the first floor on another. On the lower floor a complete machine shop, with room for five cars, was turned to the development of new racing creations of the 183-inch type. Wade did not buy motors from manufacturers. He built them himself, and early in 1922 the two Junior Specials, named for the little adopted boy, who was called "Junior," came into being.

The racing fraternity declared them two of the most perfectly lined racing cars ever produced. They were six-cylinder cars, with overhead camshafts, and looked like winners. In the autumn of 1922 the Kansas City Speedway, a one and one-fourth mile board track, was opened to racing. George Wade proudly entered his two beauties, which still had not been tried in actual practice. Peter de Paolo and W. W. Brown were billed to drive them, and the cars were taken to the track for tests. De Paolo's car made the qualifying speed, but that driven by Brown was too slow. The jinx was in it, somewhere, and Wade and his drivers and mechanics worked night and day trying to find it.

Came the morning of the race, with Brown's car again rebuilt over night, and all confident the "bug" had been found and the jinx beaten. But Fred Wagner gave Brown a final opportunity to make the qualifying speed necessary to enter the race. But the jinx rode with Brown. Lap after lap was made around the great bowl, nursing and coaxing the Junior, with stops at the pit where the carburetor adjustments were made, but Brown's car still remained a second under the qualifying speed. At last the starter waved the car off the track, and the lineup for the race began.

The other Wade Junior, with De Paolo, the daredevil nephew of Ralph de Palma, at the wheel, roared, ready to go at the drop of the flag. The signal was given, the thundering racers sped away, all but De Paolo, whose motor sputtered and died. The jinx again!

Mechanics dashed from the Wade pit and pushed the car down the track. When enough momentum was gained, De Paolo threw in the gears, the motor started and the driver began his race half a lap behind the field, amid the cheers of many thousand fans. The jinx apparently was beaten, for De Paolo began to crawl up on the field, on each lap the motor humming more smoothly and the speed increasing. Without a doubt, the crowd was with Peto and his Wade Junior. Each time he passed the grandstand the great crowd rose to its feet yelling its encouragement.

Along about the eighty-fifth lap car No. 34, with Roscoe Sarles at the wheel, tore past the grandstand with De Paolo in pursuit, and all interest centered in the two as they went into the south turn and around the backstretch. Eyes were strained as the curve into the homestretch as the west north turn was obscured by a group of trees in the infield.

A crash was heard above the roar of powerful motors, followed a moment later by a cloud of black smoke rolling into the sky from behind the trees.

"Where's De Paolo?" asked the fans, turning to one of one another. "No. 34 is missing, too."

Then came the sirens of ambulances and fire trucks as they sped to a point outside the banked turn of the track, others to the south and lining the inside of the track. The attention of the crowd turned to other favorites, though a current of nervousness over the missing cars was evident.

But over back of the clump of trees the jinx reigned supreme. Sarles had skidded into the outer wall, crashed through and fallen 25 feet to the ground, where he was burned to death under the car. De Paolo, following close behind Sarles, was struck by a shower of lumber and a disk wheel flew from the car, was hurled down the track to the south turn and was dragged unconscious from under the wreck of Junior just as it burst into flames. His mechanic, Harry ("Cotton") Fleming, saved his life, but was badly hurt, and the two were taken to the hospital, leaving the car a wreck against the fence and the jinx the victor.

When at the beginning of 1923 the Contest Board further reduced piston displacement to 91.5 cubic inches, effective with the 500-mile classic at Indianapolis on Memorial day, Wade again defied the jinx and became more determined than ever. The Juniors were too heavy for the smaller motors, so he rebuilt the wrecked car and put both back in track racing.

At Indianapolis a new Miller Special driven by Earl Cooper as one of the Durant team, crashed through the fence, while Tom Alley was killed. Wade was on relief driver. One youth was killed, several others were taken to the hospital injured, and the car was a tangled mass of wreckage, the motor undamaged,

Wade was at Indianapolis looking for the car that was a car the jinx had started on every track and got it, so Wade would carry the battle to the jinx by buying the wreck. It was shipped to Kansas City and the job of building up a new car from the wreck began. The next event scheduled was the 250-mile classic at Kansas City, which De Paolo was temporarily out of driving. Wade engaged Ralph de Palma, the rip-snorting Italian, to drive in that event.

The morning of July 4 the Wade Special had its final grooming, and that afternoon was in its place in the pit as De Palma began. Wade had sent his two Junior Specials to the meet in Kansas, scheduled for the same day just after the start of the classic an official at the speedway handed Wade a telegram. When on his car, he glanced hastily at the telegram and groaned as he turned to the boys in his pit. One of the Juniors had been wrecked at the meet, the mechanic killed and the driver hurt. Later Wade learned the other Junior had bogged in the mud and did not reach the track.

During the first 100 miles of the classic at Kansas City, De Palma kept the Wade special with the leaders in a sensational driving duel with Jimmy Murphy, Tommy Milton, Earl Cooper and Harry Hartz. Then the jinx crawled in again and a broken connecting rod put Ralph de Palma out.

Following the July 4 event, Wade engaged Lou Fenzler, the "baby" of racing, to drive the Wade Special. Fenzler tore the car down, rebuilt it and went out on the track, and developed speed and consistency. For six weeks Wade and Fenzler went through the same grind day after day. Then the Wade Special was shipped to the Altoona speedway for the Labor day classic, with the announcement that the jinx was whipped.

These two Wade Junior Specials invariably were victims of the jinx.

and around the backstretch. Eyes were turned to the curve into the homestretch as the view of the north turn was obscured by a group of trees in the infield.

A crash was heard above the roar of passing cars, followed a moment later by a cloud of black smoke rolling into the sky from behind the trees.

"Where's De Paolo?" asked the fans, nervously, of one another. "No. 34 is missing, too."

Then came the sirens of ambulances and fire trucks as they sped to a point outside the high-banked turn of the track, others to the safety zone lining the inside of the track. The attention of the crowd turned to other favorites, though an undercurrent of nervousness over the missing cars was evident.

But over back of the clump of trees the jinx reigned supreme. Sarles had skidded into the guard-rail, crashed through and fallen 25 feet to the ground, where he was burned to death under his car. De Paolo, following close behind Sarles' car, met a shower of lumber and a disk wheel from Sarles' car, was hurled down the track to the safety zone, and was dragged unconscious from under the Wade Junior just as it burst into flames. His mechanic Harry ("Cotton") Henning, saved his life, though badly hurt, and the two were taken to the hospital, leaving the car a wreck against the fence and the jinx the victor.

When at the beginning of 1923 the Contest Board further reduced piston displacement to 122 cubic inches, effective with the 500-mile classic at Indianapolis on Memorial day, Wade again defied the jinx and became more determined than ever. The Juniors were too heavy for the smaller motor, so he rebuilt the wrecked car and put both into dirt-track racing.

At Indianapolis a new Miller Special, driven by Earl Cooper as one of the Durant team, went through the fence, while Tom Alley was at the wheel as relief driver. One youth was killed, Alley and several others were taken to the hospital badly injured, and the car was a tangled mass of steel, only the motor undamaged.

Wade was at Indianapolis looking for a car. Here was a car the jinx had started on even before he got it, so Wade would carry the battle right to the jinx by buying the wreck. It was shipped to Kansas City and the job of building up a new car from the wreck began. The next event scheduled was the 250-mile classic at Kansas City, July 4. De Paolo was temporarily out of driving, so Wade engaged Ralph de Palma, the rip-snorting, smashing Italian, to drive in that event.

The morning of July 4 the Wade Special received its final grooming, and that afternoon Wade took his place in the pit as De Palma began the grind. Wade had sent his two Junior Specials to a dirt-track event in Kansas, scheduled for the same day; and just after the start of the classic an official of the speedway handed Wade a telegram. With one eye on his car, he glanced hastily at the telegram, then groaned as he turned to the boys in his pit. One of the Juniors had been wrecked at the dirt-track event, the mechanic killed and the driver injured. Mr. Wade learned the other Junior became mired in the mud and did not reach the track.

During the first 100 miles of the classic at Kansas City, De Palma kept the Wade special up among the leaders in a sensational driving battle with Howdy Murphy, Tommy Milton, Earl Cooper and Jimmy Murphy. Then the jinx crawled into the motor and a broken connecting rod put Ralph out of the race.

Following the July 4 event, Wade engaged Harry Fengler, the "baby" of racing, to drive the Wade Special. Fengler tore the car down, rebuilt it, tested it out on the track, and developed more engine trouble. For six weeks Wade and Fengler went through the same grind day after day; then the Wade Special was shipped to the Altoona (Pa.) Speedway for the Labor day classic, with the announcement that the jinx was whipped. In the tests at Kansas City the car had done 123 miles an hour and had shown endurance in long runs at high speed.

Fengler went into the Altoona race confident of victory. He led the field part of the race and stayed up along with the leaders until the seventy-second lap, when a universal joint burned out, putting him out of the race. The old streak of bad luck had been eliminated from the motor, all right, but it still was present in the car, as it turned up in the tightening of the brake over the universal joint, ending the race for the Wade Special.

The jinx followed Fengler and the Wade Special to Fresno, Cal., where, in the Raisin day classic, a 150-mile event, minor troubles sent the car to the pits and the time lost in repairs relegated Fengler to fifth place in the money.

Then Fengler took the Wade Special back home for the Fall Festival 250-mile classic at Kansas City, Oct. 21. The car was torn down and rebuilt and pronounced ready for the race. Wade was pessimistic after his long struggle against fate, but the youthful Fengler was an optimist.

"Boss, here's where we bust the old jinx!" he said with enthusiasm, the morning of the race. And then—— Fengler won, breaking the world speed record for 122-inch cars. The jinx was licked at last!

The next event scheduled was the Thanksgiving day classic at the Beverly Hills Speedway, Los Angeles. Fengler went to Los Angeles with the car. Wade remained in Kansas City, preparing to go to Florida for the winter.

One week before the Thanksgiving race Fengler wired Wade asking him to come to Los Angeles for the race. All of Wade's plans were made, and he couldn't make up his mind to make the long trip to the Pacific coast and back just before starting for the Atlantic coast. So he went to talk the matter over with L. J. Smyth, general manager of the Kansas City Speedway, and Smyth unwittingly became the ally of the jinx when he urged that Wade shou'd attend the Los Angeles race because Fengler needed his generalship in the pits. Wade went to Los Angeles.

Thanksgiving day dawned with both Wade and Fengler feeling confident the jinx had gone for good, for after the victory at Kansas City, the first in Wade's seven years of playing his hobby, it seemed that Lady Luck intended to smile on him, for a while at least.

A great throng jammed the Beverly Hills Speedway. The signal was given and some of the cars got away. One of them stalled. Another caught fire.

Wade had just a moment before called to Fengler: "Give it to 'em, Harlan! Show 'em what you've got!"

Then he crossed the track to the press stand to greet a friend. As one of the cars caught fire, Wade started back to help extinguish the flames before returning to the pit. Back along the track were two lines of cars, leaving only a narrow space, little wider than a car, between them and the guardrail of the track. Smoke from the burning car blocked the view on either side.

Up in the grandstand the thousands could see on both sides of the smoke curtain. On one side a speeding car was approaching. On the other stood two men in the narrow land. Neither could see the other.

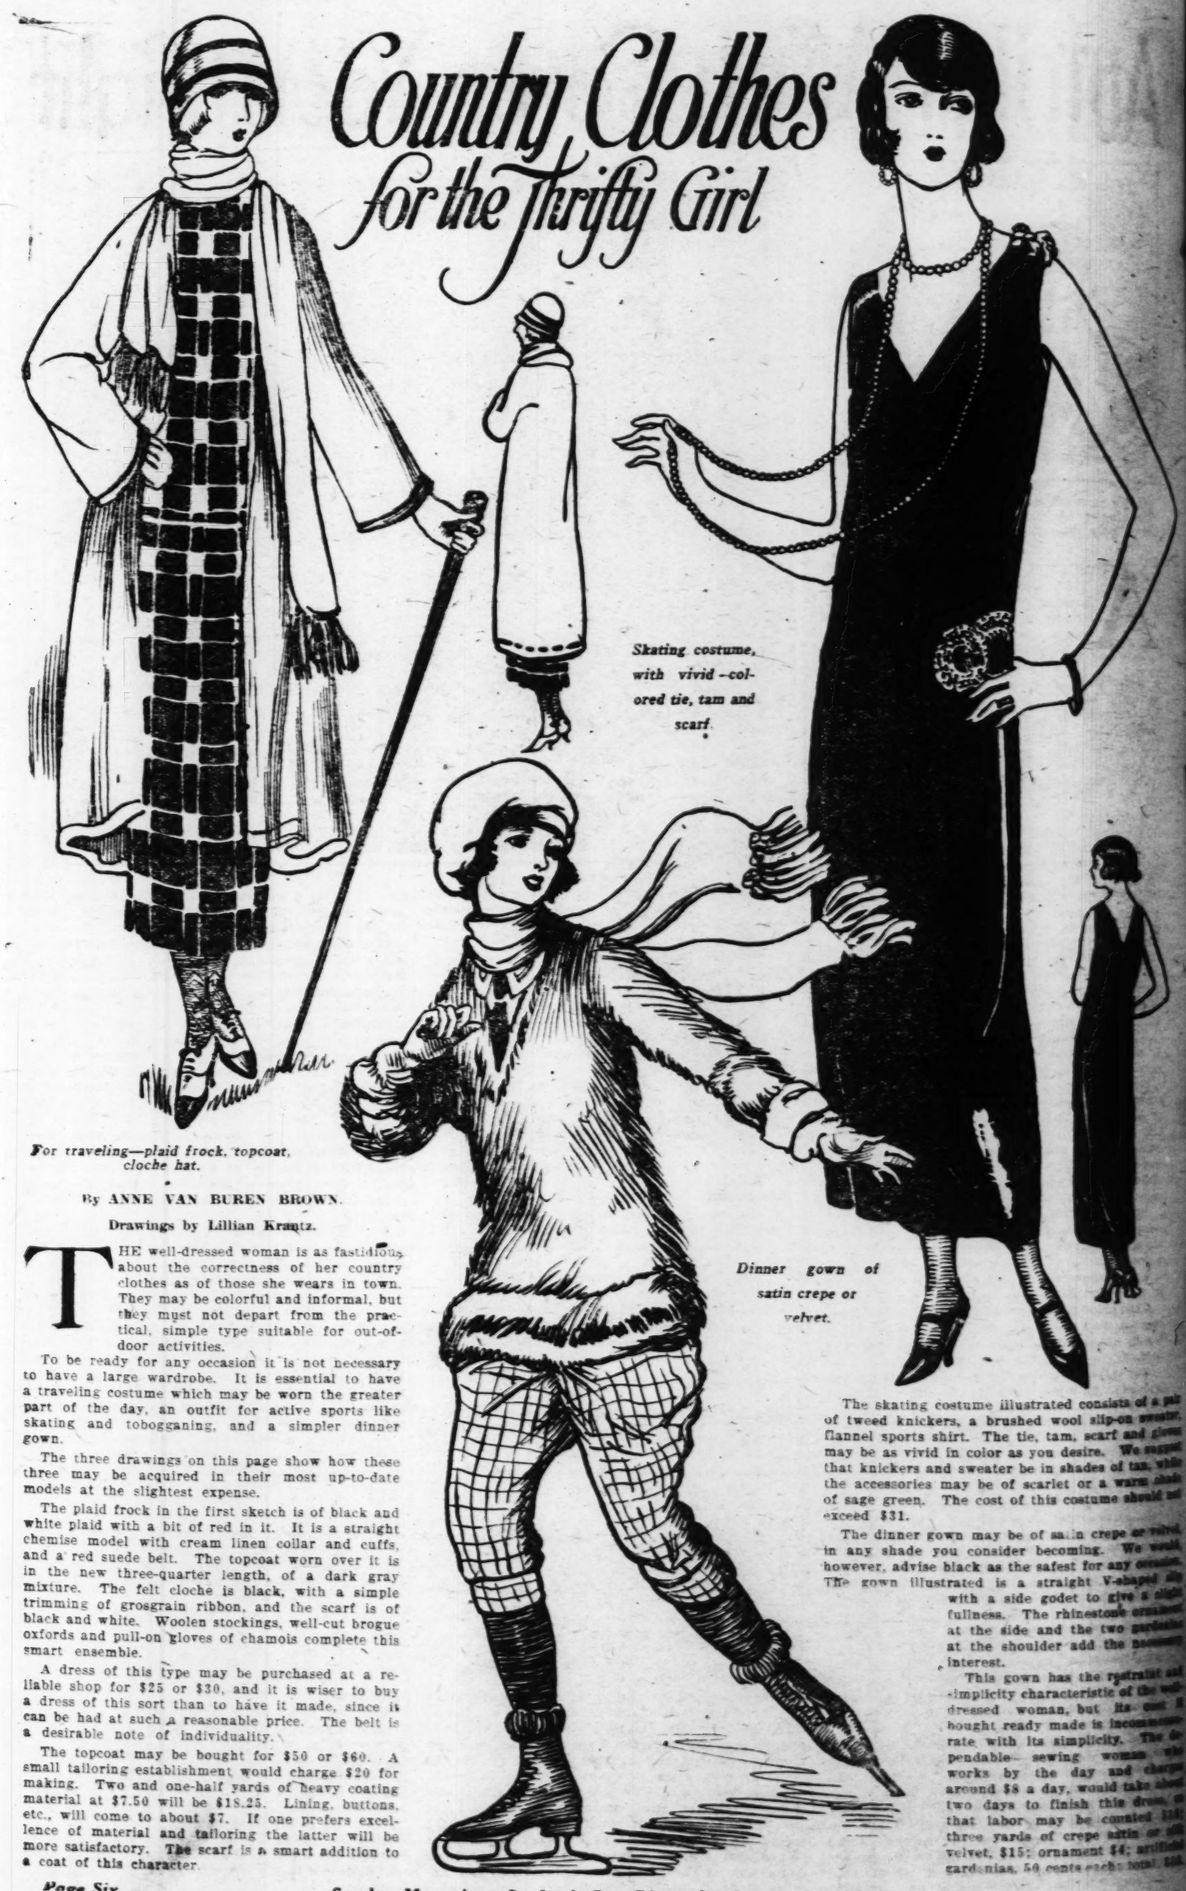
Harry Hartz, driving a yellow car of the Durant team, came roaring around the track. He did the only thing he could do. He steered down the lane and through the smoke screen. On the other side he crashed into two men, killing them both. A great cry of horror had gone up.

And one of the men killed was George L. Wade. The jinx had won!

A few minutes later, tears streaming down his face and unnerved by the tragedy, Fengler climbed into the Wade Special and drove the race, finishing in fourth place.

Early in December a funeral cortege moved out from the home of George L. Wade in Kansas City. The workshop where seven years of racing car experiments were carried on is silent. But upstairs in a room furnished lavishly with everything dear to childish hearts plays little George L. Wade Jr., perhaps the luckiest and yet in some ways the unluckiest boy in the United States. The will that was written so shortly before Wade's death left to the child an estate valued at $400,000, to be held in trust and delivered to him when he is 21.

Country Clothes for the Thrifty Girl



For traveling—plaid frock, topcoat, cloche hat.

Skating costume, with vivid-colored tie, tam and scarf.

Dinner gown of satin crepe or velvet.

By ANNE VAN BUREN BROWN.

Drawings by Lillian Krantz.

THE well-dressed woman is as fastidious about the correctness of her country clothes as of those she wears in town. They may be colorful and informal, but they must not depart from the practical, simple type suitable for out-of-door activities.

To be ready for any occasion it is not necessary to have a large wardrobe. It is essential to have a traveling costume which may be worn the greater part of the day, an outfit for active sports like skating and tobogganing, and a simpler dinner gown.

The three drawings on this page show how these three may be acquired in their most up-to-date models at the slightest expense.

The plaid frock in the first sketch is of black and white plaid with a bit of red in it. It is a straight chemise model with cream linen collar and cuffs, and a red suede belt. The topcoat worn over it is in the new three-quarter length, of a dark gray mixture. The felt cloche is black, with a simple trimming of grosgrain ribbon, and the scarf is of black and white. Woolen stockings, well-cut brogue oxfords and pull-on gloves of chamois complete this smart ensemble.

A dress of this type may be purchased at a reliable shop for $25 or $30, and it is wiser to buy a dress of this sort than to have it made, since it can be had at such a reasonable price. The belt is a desirable note of individuality.

The topcoat may be bought for $50 or $60. A small tailoring establishment would charge $20 for making. Two and one-half yards of heavy coating material at $7.50 will be $18.25. Lining, buttons, etc., will come to about $7. If one prefers excellence of material and tailoring the latter will be more satisfactory. The scarf is a smart addition to a coat of this character.

The skating costume illustrated consists of a pair of tweed knickers, a brushed wool slip-on sweater, flannel sports shirt. The tie, tam, scarf and gloves may be as vivid in color as you desire. We suggest that knickers and sweater be in shades of tan, while the accessories may be of scarlet or a warm shade of sage green. The cost of this costume should not exceed $31.

The dinner gown may be of satin crepe or velvet, in any shade you consider becoming. We would, however, advise black as the safest for any occasion. The gown illustrated is a straight V-shaped slip with a side godet to give a slight fullness. The rhinestone ornament at the side and the two gardenias at the shoulder add the necessary interest.

This gown has the restraint and simplicity characteristic of the well-dressed woman, but its cost if bought ready made is incommensurate with its simplicity. The dependable sewing woman who works by the day and charges around $8 a day, would take about two days to finish this dress, so that labor may be counted $16; three yards of crepe satin or silk velvet, $15; ornament $4; artificial gardenias, 50 cents each; total $35.

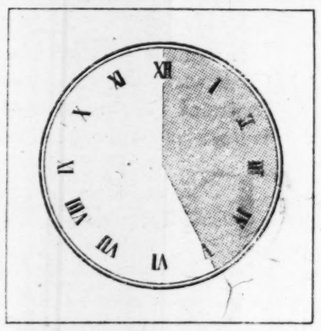
Analysis of the 109 deaths in the first 10 months of 1923 discloses several interesting facts, such as a large increase in the proportion of persons killed at street intersections — Fewer children, but more elderly persons than formerly, were among the victims—Delivery vehicles, numbering one-sixth of the machines licensed to operate in the city, occasioned one-fourth of the total deaths :: :: :: :: ::



The largest number of automobile accidents which resulted in deaths occurred between noon and 5 p. m.

AUTOMOBILE fatalities in St. Louis during 1923 were approximately 50 per cent greater in number than in 1918. Motor traffic in the city during the last five years has increased about 340 per cent.

Despite this favorable showing for accident prevention work, in the face of a tremendous increase in traffic congestion, it is generally conceded that the number of accidents is still unnecessarily large, and that there are still a considerable number of causes of accidents which can be removed.

As an index to accident causes, the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine has analyzed the facts surrounding the automobile fatalities in St. Louis during the first 10 months of 1923. This period was selected to permit of a comparison with a similar analysis for a like period made by the Sunday Magazine in 1918.

The outsanding fact shown by the comparison is that there has been a marked increase in the proportion of accidents occurring at street intersections.

The total number of persons killed in automobile accidents in the city from Jan. 1 to Oct. 31 last year was 109, according to the records of the St. Louis Safety Council. Of these 109, the pedestrians numbered 85, and 50 of the pedestrians, or 59 per cent, were struck at crossings. The percentage of pedestrians killed at crossings in the like period five years ago was only 37 1-2 per cent.

The figures apparently bear out the statement of an experienced safety worker that "the biggest automobile problem today is at the street crossings."

Analysis shows that the proportion of children among the killed has decreased several per cent, probably due to the introduction of safety instruction in the public schools. The proportion of elderly persons killed has increased, however, so that about one-half of the automobile victims continue to be children under 15 years of age, and men and women more than 60 years of age.

In 10 months of last year five women drivers were in fatal automobile accidents; five years ago there were three. The figures apparently make out a good case for the carefulness of the women, when it is considered that there has been a large increase in the number of women driving cars.

The proportion of owners in accidents has increased materially, but this probably is accounted for by the large increase in the number of owner-drivers.

The largest number of accidents last year was between the hours of noon and 5 p. m.; the second largest between the hours of 8 p. m. and midnight, and the third largest number between the hours of 5 p. m. and 8 p. m., as will be seen by the accompanying table. Formerly the largest number of accidents occurred during the "going-home" hours of 5 p. m. to 8 p. m. For some unexplained reason there are comparatively few accidents during the "coming-down" hours of 6 a. m. to 10 a. m.

Nothing in the statistics indicates that time of year has any especial influence on number of accidents. Density of traffic is regarded as the underlying cause of accidents, but there were more automobile fatalities in October than in any of the heavy-traffic summer months.

Considerable criticism has been directed against the drivers of delivery vehicles. The statistics on their face appear to refute statements which have been made in this connection, but closer study of the statistics tends to justify them. While only 28 delivery vehicles were in fatal accidents in the first 10 months of last year, there are five times as many passenger cars as delivery vehicles. In other words, one-sixth of all the motor vehicles licensed to operate on the streets of the city occasioned one-fourth of the fatal accidents.

For the purpose of tabulating the fatalities by locations, the city was divided into six districts. The territory included and the number of fatalities in each follow:

River to Jefferson avenue, and Chouteau avenue to Franklin avenue—19.

Jefferson avenue to Grand boulevard, and between the same north and south limits—9.

Grand boulevard to King's highway, and Chouteau avenue to Enright avenue—12.

King's highway to western city limits and Enright avenue to southern line of Forest Park—4.

All of St. Louis north of these districts—41.

All of St. Louis south of these districts—24.

Particularly effective work to prevent accidents in St. Louis has been done since the organization about three years ago of the St. Louis Safety Council. Many agencies interested in safety work are now operating through the council as a central bureau, with the result that the work has been largely coordinated.

Some of the steps which have been taken by the Safety Council and affiliated organizations to restrict the number of accidents in the public streets, and particularly automobile accidents, are:

Introduction of safety instruction in the public schools, as part of the curriculum.

Establishment of driving schools, including a special school for women.

Organization of a junior division of the Safety Council, in which 5000 boys are said to be enrolled.

Appointment of a Legislative Committee, among whose achievements is the boulevard stop law.

Organization of a speakers' bureau, whose members have addressed as many as 500 gatherings in one year.

Promotion of safety meetings on public playgrounds, through which 30,000 persons are said to have been reached last year.

Organization of a Vigilance Committee, for unofficial checking up of traffic violations. The committee now has about 350 members, and is said to have reported about 20,000 traffic violations in the last three years. Violators so reported are not often prosecuted, but usually are warned.

Promotion of the appointment by Mayor Kiel of a traffic committee comprising 50 men prominent in downtown affairs.

Organization of a Delivery Managers' Committee, whose members are the managers of the larger fleets of delivery and trucking vehicles operating in the city.

Organization of a sane drivers' club among automobile owners. The club is credited with having 7000 members.

Introduction in the Board of Aldermen of a proposed revision of the traffic code.

It is noteworthy that since systematic safety work was undertaken in St. Louis, property damage insurance rates have been reduced 25 per cent by the National Bureau of Casualty Insurance Underwriters. The local agency of the bureau is authority for the statement that this reduction effects a saving to St. Louisans of about $400,000 a year.

Girard C. Varnum, secretary-manager of the St. Louis Safety Council, believes the thing most needed at the present time to hold the number of automobile accidents in check is a combination of a strong educational program and a strong enforcement program. The latter, he declares, would be greatly aided by the city's adoption of the proposed revision of the traffic code.

"Obedience to speed limit laws is not necessarily careful driving," he said. "I believe that in 99 cases out of 100 when a motorist hits a pedestrian at a street intersection the motorist is more at fault than the pedestrian, and yet he may be operating his car well within the present designated speed limits. The proposed new code would put the burden of proof on the motorist to show that he was driving 'in a careful and prudent manner.'

"The only limitation as to speed would be that he would be forbidden to drive at any time or place at the rate of more than 25 miles an hour. Incidentally this provision would bring the city ordinance into conformity with the Missouri State law.

"Another proposal is to give the courts the authority to impose jail sentences for flagrant violations of city traffic regulations, which should act as a strong deterrent on reckless drivers.

"We are also working for the establishment of either a state or a city traffic court, which would place the responsibility for meting out justice to traffic law violators in the hands of one man, who could be held responsible."

A MACHINE WHICH LAYS BRICK.

A MECHANICAL bricklayer, worked by electricity or petrol, that will lay 10,000 bricks a day, promises to revolutionize the building industry, according to English newspaper reports. It is called the "K" erector.

Bricklayers lay only a few hundred bricks a day. The "K" erector requires three men to work it, but lays as many bricks as a squad of 20 men, supposing they lay 500 each. Estimates of the number of bricks that bricklayers lay in these days varies from 300 to 750.

The erector has been manufactured by Sir William Arrol & Co., Ltd., of Glasgow, and is at present employed on a large housing scheme in Glasgow. Its inventor was engaged for five years in perfecting it.

"K" looks like a traveling crane. The apparatus that lays the bricks and mortar moves backwards and forwards along a cross-beam which can be moved over the site of the house.

The National Builder, which describes "K," suggests that a fortune lies in wait for anyone who can now invent a more rapid process of making bricks, in order to cope with "K's" appetite.

A 13-Hour Walking Tour Through the Vivid description of scenes in the recent Japanese catastrophe by editor who was on railroad train halted by effect of shocks—With Englishman as companion he traveled 36 miles afoot, where the havoc was greatest and recurrent tremors kept everybody anxious — Shattered buildings, burning towns, ruined bridges, great cracks in earth of region where at least 300,000 persons perished—And wayfarer didn't know whether 12-year-son was alive

THE earth, its interior slowly but steadily cooling, shivered! And here are some quite remarkable snapshots, in words, of the swift destruction and wholesale death which followed.

Surely when Rome burned there were not such terrific scenes nor the agonized deaths of so many people as are described by this eyewitness of the recent appalling catastrophe in Japan. Not only was he at about the center of the calamity, but immediately afterwards he trudged on foot through the region most affected—more than 36 miles in about 13 hours.

In that ghastly afternoon and evening walk, with anxiety about a 12-year-old son clutching at his heart in the last long hours, Henry W. Kinney looked upon many dreadful sights. There were some amusing things, too. His account of the march through that tangible inferno is published in the January number of The Atlantic Monthly.

Mr. Kinney, by the way, is managing editor of The Trans-Pacific, a magazine published in Japan. Perhaps it should be said that he was the editor, for the plant was entirely destroyed. However, B. W. Fleisher, the proprietor, immediately ordered a new plant for the magazine and his Japan Advertiser.

The shiver of the earth which preluded the loss of at least 300,000 lives and property destruction estimated at between $4,000,000,000 and $5,000,000,000, came in the natural course of events. As earth's interior cools and contracts, the outer crust also must contract, which means that in places the crust crumples. Just so did the sea bottom behave off the eastern coast of the Yokohama-Tokio region of Japan, say the scientists.

Into some of the fissures in the rocks thus formed the sea water rushed under tremendous pressure, for east of Japan lies the Tuscarora Trough, a great ocean valley five miles deep and sloping down steeply from the Japanese coast. This ocean trough is 1200 miles long. The sea water encountered molten lava which was being squeezed upward in other new fissures. The water also got through to larger bodies of lava.

The only possible result was to produce vast quantities of steam, under the rock strata beneath land and sea. Steam is a greatly expanded form of water, and part of this superheated steam undoubtedly broke down into elementary gases, like hydrogen.

The steam required outlets. Lacking outlets, the swelling steam and the ignited gases burst their way out. There were fierce explosions in vast subterranean chambers. Volcanoes leaped into diabolic activity, but could ease only part of the strain. The surface of the ground, over an extent of miles, trembled and then shook, with a mad energy which Mr. Kinney portrays graphically. For example, where the quake was severest, large buildings of solid construction simply vanished, like magic, in a cloud of dust.

It should be remembered that Japan is situated at the top of a huge fold in the earth's strata, sloping down to the bottom of the Tuscarora Trough. Consequently, the pressure of the solid rock strata upon the cooling and shrinking interior, at such an angle, produces various strains in the solid strata.

Tremors relieve strains which are comparatively weak, but when there is a slipping or sliding of rock masses sufficiently great, the result at the earth's surface is an earthquake. Laying waste a densely populated region, the recent Yokohama-Tokio quake was one of the worst on record in the havoc which it wrought.

At the time of the principal shock, which occurred at noon of Sept. 1, Mr. Kinney was on a railroad train which had left Tokio a little while before. He writes:

"As if it had slid suddenly into a sea of tossing, choppy waves, the coach pitched up and down, lurched drunkenly from side to side. The passengers clung to the seats.

"'Why the devil doesn't the fool stop the train?' growled the Englishman opposite me. But we were already slowing down.

"'Jishin!' (earthquake) yelled a Japanese, pointing out of the window.

"I glanced out just as the stone face of an embankment shot down over the tracks. It did not slide or tumble down: it literally shot down, as if compelled by a sudden, gigantic pressure from the top, the stones spreading in a twinkling over the wide right of way.

"A four-story concrete building vanished, disintegrated in the flash of an eye. Tiles cascaded with precipitous speed from the roofs. The one predominating idea that struck the mind was the almost incredible rapidity of the destruction."

The passengers left the train and in front of them was a strange spectacle: the steel rails "shimmering with snakelike undulations in the sunlight." Says the author:

"We walked along the tracks, stopping, tense, nervous, whenever a fresh vibration shook the earth, ready for flight somewhere, and yet desperate in the realization that there could be safety nowhere when the very earth refused the refuge which one had a right to demand from it."

Curiously enough, people in Tokio thought Yokohama was safe and people in Yokohama had no anxiety about Tokio. And in both cities they were sure that the country districts had escaped harm. In the same spirit, Mr. Kinney and the Englishman started out for Yokohama, urged to as fast a gait as was possible by a huge cloud which had appeared in the sky and which looked like an approaching typhoon. This cloud had rolled swiftly up into the clear blue, seemingly dense in texture, of a dull brown and black color, shot with sulphur. It was an uncanny thing—"sinister, menacing," says the writer.

Along the way they saw ample evidence of a prankish earthquake. Throughout the luckless area, some localities had been left almost undamaged, while others, scattered among those fortunate places, were flattened and shattered. "It seemed as if the movement must be wavelike, smiting with greatest force the points touched by the crests of its billows."

As became known later, the shocks at Tokio were far less severe than the ones which devastated Yokohama, the principal damage at the capital being wrought by fires which followed the quake and swept devouringly through the city. But Yokohama was smashed and utterly ruined by the earth shocks. There the flames merely reduced ruins to ashes and brought death to people who had been injured or lay pinned under debris.

The massive buttresses of the railroad bridge across the Tamagawa River had been twisted out of place and the tracks hung fantastically suspended between them. But a slight footbridge, formed by two widths of boards, was almost intact. Across it the two men hurried, wondering what would happen if another shock caught them on the bridge. On the far side of the river, one set of twisted tracks was more than six feet above the other.

Streams of natives flowed along the tracks, both ways, pausing only for a moment to view the ruins of a great factory or other building, then hurrying on.

The large village of Kawasaki deserves special mention. Most of the houses were two-storied, frail, wooden structures with paper windows and roofs of heavy tiles. The houses "had not only been smashed, but had been torn apart, rended into splintered beams and raveled and torn fragments of boards, jumbled together, as if they had been battered by a gigantic flail. They had been thrown in every direction, backwards, against each other, into the street. The most diabolical intent could have produced no more stupendous result."

Here and there, in half-ruined shops, a man or woman was putting the stock in order, while the ground still trembled. The heat had become unbearably oppressive, causing a dryness of the throat which is quite unfamiliar in Japan, where ordinarily the curse of heat is its excessive moisture. Says the author:

"We stopped at a small shop. The rear was down, but in the front sat the woman in charge, discussing the earthquake, it seemed almost languidly, with no more concern than if it had been an unusually heavy rainstorm.

"Yes, she had beer, Kirin beer; was that all right? It was not very cold. She was very sorry. Now, where was the opener? She hunted about in the confusion, showing more annoyance at the disappearance of the trivial instrument than at the other consequences of the disaster. Finally she found it, brought glasses, served us with the usual courteous phrases. And the price was as usual, 45 sen.

"In the course of my long wanderings throughout the devastated area, on that day and those following, I saw or heard of no instance of profiteering among the common people. Even the last bottle, the last candle, the last bit of fruit, were sold at ordinary prices, even before martial law made profiteering an offense. It was not thought of."

While here two Japanese clerks entered and advised against going to Yokohama, declaring the city had been leveled and now was burning. They pointed to the huge cloud, now rolling closer and hanging low. "That's the smoke from the oil tanks," they said. "The whole city is burning."

But Mr. Kinney and the Englishman could not believe it—at least of the foreign settlement, with streets upon streets of solidly erected brick and concrete buildings. So they pressed on. But the scattered fires became more numerous—whole blocks were burning at Higashikanagawa, and the two men had to make detours to avoid them. Finally

by Jack Boyle

THE great jute mill of the San Gregorio Penitentiary was in full operation.

To the eye everything in the mill was as usual, and yet the guards were restless and uneasy.

Boston Blackie, university graduate, student, safe blower and international crook, looked up and glanced around the mill. Covert eyes from a hundred looms were watching him with eager expectancy.

Boston Blackie leaped to the top of his loom and flung up both arms, the signal of revolt. The looms stopped; their deafening noise ceased as if by magic. In three minutes the convicts were in complete control of the mill, barred in from outside assault by steel doors and brick walls.

Calmly, with arms folded, Boston Blackie still stood on his loom, watching the quick, complete fruition of his plans.

Of all the officers in San Gregorio Prison, Capt. Denison, head of the mill guards was hated most. When he was dragged into the circle of captive guards, Capt. Denison fell on his knees and begged piteously for his life.

Boldness might have saved him; cowardice doomed him. A convict with a wooden bludgeon in his hand leaped to his side and seized him by the throat.

"We've got you now, curse you," cried the volunteer executioner, "Turkey" Burch. "Pray, you dog, pray! Do you remember the night you sent me to the straitjacket to please one of your rotten snitches? In just 60 seconds," he snarled, "this club is going to put you where you've put many a one of us."

A roar of approval came from the stripe-clad mob. Burch raised his club, swinging it about his head.

"Stop!"

Boston Blackie snatched the club from Burch's hand and flung it on the floor.

"I said no blood, and that goes as it lays, Turkey," he said, quietly.

Burch caught up his club again.

Boston Blackie seized an iron bar from a man beside him.

"All right," he said. "Croak him whenever you're ready, Turkey, but when you kill him, I'll kill you. It's your move."

The two convicts faced each other. Thirty tense seconds passed.

"Why don't you do something?" Blackie said to Burch, with a smile. Then he threw his iron bar do the floor. "Boys," he continued, turning to the crowd, "if we keep our heads, we win. If you want to pay for that coward's blood with your own, Denison dies. But if he does, I quit you here and now. If you say so, he goes unharmed and we'll finish this business as we began it—right.

He turned to Burch, standing irresolute with his club.

"You're the first to vote, Turkey. What's the verdict?" he asked.

Burch hesitated, then tossed aside his club.

"You've run this business so far, Blackie," he said, slowly, "and I guess it's up to us to let you finish it in your own way."

There was a chorus of approval from the convict mob.

"Fine!" said Blackie. "I knew you boys had sense. The first thing is to boot our dear Captain out those doors, and I nominate Turkey Burch to do it."

Denison was dragged to the doors. They were unbarred, and, propelled by Turkey Burch's square-toed brogan, Capt. Denison shot through into the yard, where he was under the protecting rifles of the guards on the walls. The other captives were treated similarly.

"Take this message to Deputy Warden Sherwood," said Blackie as the last of the bound bluecoats stood ready to be kicked out. "Tell him that unless, within one hour, he releases from Punishment Hall the 10 men he sent there yesterday for protesting against the rotten food, we're going to tear down this $5,000,000 mill. Now go."

The man shot out. The doors were banged shut and barred behind him, while the mill resounded with the joyous shouts and songs of the convicts.

Deputy Warden Martin Sherwood, disciplinarian and real head of the prison management, took grim, silent delight in inflicting punishment.

There was a reason for this strange twist in the character of a man absolutely fearless and otherwise fair. Years before, he had brought a bride to his home just outside the prison walls. She was pretty and young and weak—just the sort of girl the attraction of opposites would send to a man like Martin Sherwood. There were a few months of happiness.

Then came the crash. A convict employed as a servant in the deputy's home completed his sentence and was released. With him went the deputy's wife. From that day Sherwood was a man unfeeling as iron.

"They might as well have killed you in the mill as to send you up here to die of fright in my office," the deputy said, with biting sarcasm.

"Deputy," Denison warned, "those cons have a leader they obey like a regiment of soldiers. He is"——

"Boston Blackie, of course," interrupted Sherwood. "I should have known better than to put him where he could come in contact with the men."

The guard who had been given the convict leader's ultimatum rushed in.

"He says he wants the men out of Punishment Hall and your promise of better food from now on, or he'll tear the mill down in an hour," he man reported.

The Deputy Warden turned to the men in the office.

"I'm going down to the mill," he said. "Have a machine gun ready in each of the four towers that cover this yard—ready but out of sight."

"Down to the mill?" cried Denison, in amazement. "Deputy, you won't live five minutes. Don't go."

Sherwood took his knife and a roll of bills from his pocket and locked them in his desk. "If I am not back in half an hour, Denison, call the Warden at his club in San Francisco, tell him to call on the Governor for a regiment of militia. But for the next half hour do nothing except get your nerve back—if you can."

Sherwood pulled a straw from a whisk-broom on his desk, stuck it between his teeth, and started for the mill yard as calmly as though he were going to luncheon.

White-faced guards tried to stay him. The [noise] from within the mill was deafening.

"Open the gates," commanded Sherwood. "[Close] them behind me and don't reopen them [again] if you think it's to save my life."

The deputy crossed the yard, neither [hurrying] nor hesitating, and hammered on the door [with] fist. The clamor inside suddenly died.

"Open the door, boys," he commanded. "I'm [coming] in to talk to you. I'm alone and unarmed."

The man on guard unbarred the door, and [Mr.] Sherwood stepped quickly in and faced the [mob].

For five seconds that seemed an hour there [was] dead silence. It was broken by an inarticulate, human, menacing roar of rage that rose to a [scream].

A man rushed at the deputy and spat in his [face]. Calmly Sherwood drew out his handkerchief, wiped his cheek, but never for an instant did his eyes waver from the inflamed ones of the man [who] faced.

"I'll remember that, Kelly, when I get you [in the] jacket," he said, slowly. The convict laughed, [but] pressed backward, cowed by the fearless [courage] of his antagonist.

Boston Blackie forced his way through the [crowd]. He was within 10 feet of the Deputy Warden [when] he saw him. He caught the deputy by the [shoulder] and turned him toward the door.

"Go," he said. "Get out before they kill [you]." Sherwood threw off his hand.

"You may be able to command this [convict], Blackie," he said in a voice perfectly audible in the silence which had fallen on the mob, "but [you] command me. I came to talk to these men, and [I'm] going to do it."

From the rear came a metal weight which [missed] Sherwood's head by inches. The screamer's cry rose again. One struck at the deputy with a shuttle, but Blackie hit first and laid [him] senseless at his feet. Then he jumped to the [top of] a loom.

"Men, if you want to hang," he cried, his [voice] rising above the bedlam, "I'll go along with you, but you'll listen to me first."

The outcry died down and Blackie talked [rapidly].

All through the harangue Sherwood stood [listening], his face inexpressive.

"Deputy," said Blackie, turning to him, "you've been told you said you would keep the men in Punishment Hall in the straitjacket until they [were], necessary, to find out who smuggled [in] the complaining about the rotten food?"

"It is," said Sherwood.

"We make three demands, then," said [Blackie]. "First, the release of all the men [in] Punishment; second, your promise that no [one] concerned in this revolt shall be punished; third, a guarantee that henceforth we get the food [that] the State pays but which the commissary [department] steals."

"And if I refuse, what then?" asked Sherwood.

"At noon we will destroy the mill."

"Boys," said the deputy, "I have listened to your spokesman. You know I can't grant your demands without consulting the Warden, who is in San Francisco. I will do this, however. I will declare a half-holiday. Come over to the upper [yard] and your dinner as usual and we'll watch a ball game [together]. Sherwood," he said, "in three minutes the first stroke of the clock will [sound]."

Boston Blackie snatched the club from Burch's hand and flung it on the floor.

the afternoon. Before night I will give [you] answer."

With the thought of the machine guns that covered the upper yard in his mind, [Sherwood] smiled grimly.

"Wait," cried Blackie. "When the men [from] ishment Hall are free and you, Mr. Sherwood, have never been known to lie, have told me [you] fed right and no one harmed or punished [for] morning's work, we'll go into the upper yard [as] before."

"Boys," said the deputy, "do as I suggest. [Why] should you let this man"—indicating Blackie—"[order] you around. Come on up to the yard. I'll [have] issue an extra ration of tobacco all round. Who's going to go along with me or stay here with [Blackie]?"

"We'll stay," answered Blackie, for the [crowd].

A shout from the men proved Sherwood right.

"You're quite a general, Blackie," said the [deputy]. "I'll give you an answer in 15 minutes." He looked straight into Boston Blackie's eyes. "Next time you and I clash, I'm going to [do] like this."

He jerked the straw from his mouth and [broke] it apart; then he walked out of the mill.

A quarter of an hour later 10 pain-racked [convicts] were welcomed back to the mill. Within [the hour] came the Deputy Warden's acceptance of Boston Blackie's terms. In the midst of the turbulent [jubilation] a half-witted, one-armed boy named [Ellis], "the Squirrel" drew out his mouth organ and began to express his joy in the one way he knew.

"Cut out the bum music," cried a burly [convict]. "Where'd you figger in this, you nutty Squirrel?"

The boy's eyes filled with tears, and he [faltered].

"Go ahead. Play, little Squirrel," Boston Blackie said, encouragingly. "Your music is as good as [any] hand. You're one of us, you know, and we're all happy."

That night Boston Blackie lay on his cot, [thinking] anxiously probing the future. In his mind's eye [he] saw the broken bits of Martin Sherwood's [pipe] straw fluttering to the mill floor.

A shout from the men proved Sherwood's defeat.

He jerked the straw from his mouth and twisted it apart; then he walked out of the mill.

The boy's eyes filled with tears, and his notes faltered.

That night Boston Blackie lay on his cell bunk anxiously probing the future. In his mind he still saw the broken bits of Martin Sherwood's broomstraw fluttering to the mill floor.

Mary Dawson never missed a visiting day at the San Gregorio Penitentiary.

On a bright Saturday afternoon Blackie hurried through the gates to the reception room, pass in hand. Mary sprang to his side, hands outstretched. Their kiss was interrupted by the gruff voice of Ellis, the reception room guard.

"Wait a minute there, Blackie," he commanded. "Who is this woman?"

"Who is she?" repeated the convict in amazement. "Why, she is my wife."

"I know she has managed to slip in here on visiting days," Ellis said. "But we're told she's an ex-con, herself. If so, she can't visit you. The rules don't permit it."

The man turned to Mary.

"Isn't this your picture?" he asked, sneeringly. Years before, Mary Dawson, daughter of Dayton Tom, a professional crook, had been sent to the penitentiary rather than clear herself at the expense of one of her father's pals.

"It's my photograph," she said, in a choked voice. "But, Mr. Ellis, I wasn't guilty. Don't take our visits away from us. They're—they're—all we—have."

"That's what they all say," the guard answered. "You're lucky the deputy don't put the city dicks (detectives) on to you."

"Did the deputy tell you to bar Mary from visiting me?" Blackie demanded of the guard.

"What's that to you?" the man answered. "She's barred—that's all. She's got nerve to come here anyway, among decent women, the"——

Boston Blackie's blow caught him on the chin, and Ellis toppled to the floor. In a second Blackie was upon him, grasping his throat in a frenzy of savagery.

Women screamed; convicts shouted encouragement. Mary's voice, pleading, restored the convict to sanity.

Blackie's grip loosened. He took Mary in his arms.

"Good-by, dear one," he said. "I've tried to get by here without trouble, but Sherwood won't let me. Watch and wait for me—some day I'll come."

Guards rushed in, and one struck Blackie over the head with a club.

Unconscious, he was carried to the deputy's office.

"Take him to Punishment Hall and leave him there for tonight. Don't give him punishment. I'll attend to that in the morning," the deputy ordered.

A prison straitjacket is an instrument of most fiendish torture.

For the first few minutes, oppressed breathing is the only inconvenience felt. Then the stagnating blood commences to cause pains as if white-hot needles are being passed through the flesh. Irresistible weights seem to be crushing the brain.

Four hours in the jacket made one convict a paralytic for life. Some men have endured it for three-quarters of an hour without crying out, but only a few.

Boston Blackie had been in the jacket for an hour and five minutes and Martin Sherwood had waited in vain for pleas for release.

The prison physician stood near by, looking on anxiously. One man had died after the jacket had been used on him in San Gregorio. Blackie's face was a ghastly purple. Blood oozed from his nostrils. He rolled aimlessly to and fro on the floor, but his lips were clenched.

"He's had enough—more than enough, deputy," the doctor urged. "Better call it off?"

"Never till he begs," said Sherwood.

The form on the floor ceased to roll and toss. The doctor stooped over him.

"He's out," he announced.

"Take him over to the hospital and bring him round," said the Deputy Warden. "We'll try it again tomorrow."

Hours later Boston Blackie, slowly and painfully, came back into a blurred and hideous world.

"He didn't break me," he said, over and over, to himself.

"When Blackie gets out of the hospital, put him in charge of the lawn in front of my offices," said Sherwood to the assignment captain the following morning.

It was the first time the captain had ever known the deputy to deviate from his inflexible rule that a convict once sent to the jacket stayed until he begged for mercy.

* * * * * * *

Martin Sherwood, from within his office, stood fixedly studying Boston Blackie, who was spraying the courtyard lawn.

"He's ill, without a doubt," mused the Deputy Warden. "The doctor's evidently right. No man could counterfeit his appearance; and yet"—— Sherwood's brow was wrinkled with perplexity. "Because he is Boston Blackie I'm puzzled. It's three months since I barred his wife from the prison and gave him the jacket. Why this calm?"

Sherwood turned to his clerk.

"Phone the doctor to come over," he said.

The physician protested strongly against the Deputy Warden's order to transfer Boston Blackie from his cell in the hospital to one of the dormitories in the cellhouse.

"The man's nothing but a living corpse now, deputy," he argued. "He isn't likely to live another three months. Let him die in the hospital."

"Move him over to C. Dormitory tomorrow morning," Sherwood commanded with finality. "I'm going to put him in with Tennessee Red, who'll keep me informed of what he does nights. I've got a hunch, doctor, that Mr. Boston Blackie is framing another surprise party for us."

The doctor went back to the hospital shaking his head at the strange vagaries of his superior concerning Boston Blackie. He sent his runner, the half-witted, one-armed Squirrel, for the turnkey, to whom he explained the deputy's intention.

Boston Blackie was sitting in his dormitory cell slowly chewing the crust of a half-loaf of bread when the Squirrel slipped by the turnkey into the cell.

"They mustn't know I'm here," he said. "I heard what the doctor told the screw (turnkey). They're going to take you away, out of the hospital."

"When, little Squirrel, when?" Blackie whispered hoarsely.

"Tomorrow, when the deputy gets a place ready for you with Tennessee Red," the boy answered.

"What else did the doctor say, little Squirrel?" he asked.

"He said the deputy thinks you are framing something, but it isn't so, because you're going to die in three months. Are you going to die in three months, Blackie?"

"No, not in three months, little Squirrel," answered Blackie, and then softly, to himself, he added: "But maybe tonight." He turned again to the boy.

"Will you play your mouth organ for me tonight, Squirrel?" he asked. "Will you play it all the time from lock-up till the lights go out? All the time, Squirrel, and loud, so I can hear it plain. Here's a sack of tobacco for you. You won't forget? All the time, and loud."

"Yes, all the time and loud," the boy repeated, doglike devotion in his eyes.

Blackie's plan for escape required that he sleep in the hospital dormitory used for tuberculosis patients and others unfit for the cellhouses, but not bedridden. To accomplish this he diluted prison laundry soap, strong with lye, and drank it day after day until it ruined his stomach.

...rwood," he said, "in three minutes that clock will strike. I'm exactly as far from the guns as you. On the first stroke of the clock we'll reach together for them—and the quickest hand wins."

Blackie had been in the hospital dormitory two months. He wasn't ready to make his bid for freedom, but must make the attempt that night or never.

He took a spade and laboriously began to dig around the rose bushes that flanked the lawn. No one saw him uncover a rude saw made with his hoe file from a steel knife from the kitchen. The saw and a tobacco sack containing a single $5 bill were hidden in his blouse. The bill had come from Mary.

Next he asked permission to air his blankets on the clothesline in the lower yard. The toolhouse in which his garden implements were kept was near by. From beneath its floor he took a civilian pair of trousers, a blue shirt and a mackinaw coat and cap. It had taken him one full month to steal them from the tailor shop where the clothes of the new arrivals were kept after they received the prison stripes. The trousers Blackie put on under his striped ones, pinning up the legs well out of sight. When his blankets went to his cell, the coat, shirt and cap were hidden in them.

A half-hour before lock-up time Blackie rolled up his garden hose and carried it to the toolhouse. Once within its doors and alone, he cut off six feet of the hose and wound it about his body, tying it in place. Next, from a pile of rubbish, he unearthed a single rubber glove. Two hundred feet of twine from the mill completed the list of preparations.

At 5 o'clock Boston Blackie and the other hospital inmates were locked in their cells for the night. At five minutes past 5 the Squirrel began to play on his mouth organ.

Blackie chipped away the soap and lampblack with which he had plugged a half-sawed window bar and cut at it in frantic haste. A mirror hung on the wall near the door warned Blackie of the approach of the guard each time he made his rounds. Hour after hour the Squirrel played and hour after hour Blackie sawed.

At last it was done. The prison bell tolled out 9; the lights winked out; and silence settled over the dormitory.

At 1 o'clock Blackie waited for the guard to pass, then slipped out of his convict clothes and fashioned them into a dummy, which he covered with blankets to resemble a sleeping man.

He dressed in his civilian clothes, with his six-foot length of hose still coiled about his body. He tucked his one glove carefully into his breast beside the ball of twine, and hung his shoes about his neck. Then he pulled out one of the heavy legs of his stool and tied it across his back. He took another stool leg and, using it as a lever, bent the severed bars straight out. A moment later he stood outside on the window ledge.

Below him the wall fell away sheer for four stories. Six feet above his head the rain gutter marked the level of the flat roof. With fingers and toes clutching the bricks that jutted out a few inches around the window coping, he climbed upward.

At last his fingers clutched the edge of the roof gutter. He swung his feet clear and raised himself to the roof by his arms.

* * * * *

Shrouded in the early morning fog, a gaunt wraith of a man climbed a rear stairway to a tiny apartment on Laguna street, San Francisco, and softly tapped at the bedroom window. The woman within awoke, sprang to the sash and threw it open, seizing in her arms the scarecrow of a man who stood there and dragging him inside.

"Mary!" he cried.

"Blackie!" she answered.

"We must get away from here at once," Blackie said. "The Deputy Warden's no ordinary copper. But, little sweetheart, I'll promise you this: whether he finds us or not, he'll never take Boston Blackie back to San Gregorio. Have you my guns?"

Mary nodded, shuddering.

They crossed to the other side of the city and rented a room on the edge of a good residence district.

"Mary," said Blackie, the moment they were alone, "we're safe here until tonight, but no longer. Go downtown to Levy's theatrical costuming shop. Tell them you're playing a grandmother's part in an amateur play and get a complete old woman's outfit—white wig, clothes, shoes, everything. Get a cheap hat and a working-girl's hand-me-down, too. Draw every dollar we have in the bank. You better bring something to eat, too—just a loaf of bread, for I ruined my stomach with lye, and I can't eat anything but crusts."

He drew the two revolvers from the suitcase, looked carefully to their loads and laid them on the bed.

At noon that day the police located Mary Dawson's Laguna street apartment.

The Chief called in a dozen of his best men, armed them and sent them out in two autos.

"Take no chances with him, boys," the Chief warned. "He's a bad one. Take care of yourselves."

On the third day a detective brought in the information that a landlady identified Blackie's picture as that of a man who came with his wife and rented a room on the morning of the escape. They had two suitcases. The next morning they had gone.

Sherwood turned the management of the prison over to a subordinate. The police frankly were beaten. Only Sherwood kept at the task.

"The doctor said that illness was real," he pondered. Blackie hadn't eaten anything but crusts of bread for weeks. He left the inside of a loaf in his cell. Ah! The inside of a loaf."

Martin Sherwood sprang to his feet.

"It's a long chance," he said to himself. "But it is a chance."

The Deputy Warden drove out to the city incinerator and explained to the superintendent.

"I'll pay the man who finds the crustless insides of loaves of bread in a garbage can $100 for the address from which that can was filled."

* * * * *

"In three days, Mary, just three short days, we'll sail out through the Golden Gate. You and I will be together with a new world ahead."

But just below them, low-voiced Martin Sherwood questioned their landlady.

"I have no roomers but a Miss Collins and her mother, who is an invalid, poor soul. They have the two rooms in the attic," she was telling the deputy. "The girl is learning shorthand and don't go out much. The old lady is crippled with rheumatism and can't leave the rooms. Oh, they are nice, quiet, respectable people, sir."

"What does the girl look like? What is the color of her hair?" Sherwood asked.

"Red, sir—a beautiful red."

Mary's hair was coal black. Martin Sherwood was puzzled.

"When did they come here?" he asked.

"Why, let me see, it was a week ago Thursday, sir, in the evening. They came just before I went to work—which is 9 o'clock, sir."

"I would like to go up and see them for a moment," Sherwood told the woman. "I'm an officer." He showed his star. "Oh, no, nothing wrong at all. I just want to see them. I like to keep track of people in the district."

"Certainly, sir. I'll call Miss Collins and"——

"No, no—that isn't necessary," interrupted Sherwood. "I'll just step upstairs and knock."

Though he tried to step lightly, there was a sudden shuffle of feet on the floor above. He rapped.

A few seconds of silence; then came the sound of a woman sobbing hysterically. Sherwood knocked again, peremptorily.

The door was flung wide open, and a woman faced him—a woman with a wealth of bronze hair that should have been black, but whom he instantly recognized as Boston Blackie's Mary.

Martin Sherwood sprang inside with drawn revolver, ready to answer the stream of lead he expected from some corner of the room. None came. Instead he saw a woman, white-haired and feeble, sitting beside a bed with bowed head, while her body shook with convulsive sobs. On the bed, covered with a sheet drawn up over the face, lay a silent, motionless form.

Sudden disappointment gripped Martin Sherwood's heart.

"Where's Boston Blackie?" he demanded, his gun covering the room.

Mary pointed silently to the still figure on the bed.

"Dead!" exclaimed the Deputy Warden. "When? How?"

"An hour ago," she sobbed. "You starved him to death in your prison."

Sherwood strode to the bed, and leaning over, lifted the sheet. Beneath the sheet he saw a roll of blankets molded and tied into the samblance of a human form. Before he could turn, cold steel was pressed against the base of his brain.

"Drop that gun, Sherwood," said Boston Blackie's voice from behind him. "Drop it quick."

"Now turn around, Sherwood, and face the music," ordered Blackie, a moment later.

The Deputy Warden met his captor's eyes without a tremor, and smiled.

"Well done, Blackie, I must admit," he said.

The convict's grip on the gun leveled at the deputy's head tightened.

"You understand, of course, Sherwood, I've got to kill you," he said.

"Naturally it wouldn't surprise me," the deputy answered. His voice was calm.

"I couldn't trust your promise not to bother me if I let you go alive," continued Blackie, with troubled eyes.

"I wouldn't give it if you did." There was no hesitation in the answer.

"Well, then." The gun that covered the Deputy Warden's head swayed downward till the muzzle covered his heart. "Are you ready?"

"Any time," said Sherwood.

"Do you want to go, Mary, before I—I do what I must do?" asked Blackie.

"No, no," she cried. "I want to share with you all blame for what you do."

Slowly the convict let the muzzle of his weapon drop.

"Sherwood," he said, in a broken voice, "I hate you as I hate no living man, but I can't kill you as you stand before me unarmed and helpless." He stepped backward and picked up the Deputy Warden's revolver. He pushed a table between them. He laid the revolvers side by side on it, one pointing toward him, the other toward Sherwood.

"Sherwood," he said, "in three minutes that clock will strike. I'm exactly as far from the guns as you. On the first stroke of the clock we'll reach together for them—and the quickest hand wins."

Martin Sherwood studied Boston Blackie's face with something in his eyes no other man had ever seen there. Blackie deliberately had surrendered his advantage to give him, Martin Sherwood, an even chance for life. For the first time the deputy was shaken.

"I won't bargain with you, Blackie," he said.

Boston Blackie reached toward his gun, hoping the Deputy Warden would do likewise. Sherwood let Blackie recover his weapon without moving a muscle. Once more the convict's revolver rose till it covered Martin Sherwood's heart.

"Pick up that gun and defend yourself," he cried.

"No," shouted Sherwood.

With a great cry Boston Blackie threw his gun upon the floor.

"You win, Sherwood," he sobbed. "You've beaten me."

He staggered drunkenly toward Mary and folded her in his arms.

"I couldn't do," he moaned, brokenly. "I'll go back with him. Everything is over."

"I'm glad you didn't, dear," she cried, clinging to him. "It would have been murder. I'll wait for you, dear one, wait till you come back to me again."

Boston Blackie straightened his shoulders and, turning to Sherwood, held out his wrists for the handcuffs.

"Come, come," he urged. "Don't stand there gloating. Take me away."

Martin Sherwood reached to the table, picked up his gun slowly and dropped it into his pocket. He looked into the two grief-racked faces before him, long and silently.

"I'm sorry to have disturbed you folks," he said, quietly, at last. "I came here looking for an escaped convict named Boston Blackie. I have found only you, Miss Collins, and your mother. Good night, folks." Then the Deputy Warden went out and closed the door behind him.

I Have Found Out How to Get Rid of Superfluous Hair at Once

Here's the Secret

I had become utterly discouraged with a heavy growth of hair on my face and lip. I had tried every sort of depilatory and electrolysis and even a razor. But I couldn't get rid of it.

Then I made a wonderful discovery. I found a simple method by which I removed the hair at once and most wonderful to relate, it keeps the hair removed.

My face is now as smooth as a baby's, not only free from superfluous hair, but from pimples and blemishes.

I have explained this discovery to thousands of women who have had the same experience with it that I had and I will explain it to you if you also have superfluous hair.

It isn't like anything you have ever used. It is not a powder, paste, wax or liquid, not a razor, not electricity. It causes no itching or burning and leaves no scars. As easy to use as your comb or brush.

Walking Through the Great Earthquake

they were forced back to the refuge of the railroad tracks. There sat the inhabitants in groups, each family guarding the household goods which it had snatched up in flight.

"The quietness was striking. There was no wailing. They conversed in low tones, but generally they sat silent, staring at the destruction. One admired their stoicism, the spirit which has made the shikatakanani ('it can't be helped') phrase almost the Japanese national motto. There was no confusion, no crying out; even the children were hushed."

Looking back, they could see great clouds curling and spiraling into the sky from the direction of Tokio—clouds that were miles high. The station master had authentic news. Yokohama was entirely destroyed and Tokio in flames. A wall of fire blocked ingress into Yokohama. Yokosoka, the great naval station, was a total wreck, and Kamakura.

"What! Kamakura, 18 miles beyond Yokohama?" continues the narrative. "I thought of my son, 12 years old, commonly known as 'The Shrimp.' Until this moment I had regarded him as safe, as a matter of course, in the big foreign villa on the Kamakura beach, where we lived with the rest of a bachelors' mess.

"It becomes habit with the foreigner in Japan to regard the great mass misfortunes—fires, floods, typhoons—as something affecting almost entirely the Japanese only. They are always the ones to suffer, with their flimsy houses."

Mr. Kinney and the Englishman found a road leading steeply up the side of the hill range that forms the land-side boundary of Yokohama. On the ridge were houses of the well-to-do, now busily carrying out family treasures, valuable furnishings, handsome carved screens, rich silken garments, brocades, lacquered tables and other prized possessions. But from below, where Yokohama lay, came the roar of the flames, advancing upward like waves against a cliff. It seemed certain that everything would be consumed. But among these people, as among the poor on the railroad tracks, there was no confusion and no lamentations.

"Presently we came to a point where a main road, running obliquely down into the city, gave a view of the entire scene," writes Mr. Kinney. "The lurid panorama lay outfolded before us—but it was meaningless. There were no landmarks, no familiar building from which one might determine locality. Yokohama, the city of almost half a million souls, had become a vast plain of fire, of red, devouring sheets of flame which played and flickered.

"Here and there a remnant of a building, a few shattered walls, stood up like rocks above the expanse of flame, unrecognizable. There seemed to be nothing left to burn. It was as if the very earth were now burning. It presented exactly the aspect of a gigantic Christmas pudding over which the spirits were blazing, devouring nothing. For the city was gone."

A Japanese acquaintance encountered the pair and led them to a beer shop where some other foreigners were sitting, their faces and hands perfectly black from dirt and soot except where, in wiping away the perspiration, they had produced a singularly ludicrous effect of black stripes and white ones, like the zebra. "Business as usual." The proprietor of the shop was calmly selling beer while his family carried out the furniture.

Said a stout man who had been in his office in an L-shaped building:

"The shock was like a bucking horse, three great shakes. It shot me out of my chair. I just missed being crushed by the safe. The go-down in the backyard, solid stone, mind you, was down in a second. It went so suddenly that the eye could not follow the details of the movement.

"We got to the stairway, I and my Japanese staff, and just then the far side of the L went down, just vanished, and as we gazed at it, presto! the whole part of the building, right up to the stairs, shot out of sight. We were clinging to the rail, watching the house vanishing piecemeal, expecting that the next would be our turn. Then we rushed down the stairs.

"The whole street, Main street, was a jumble of bricks, houses sprawling over it everywhere, roofs lying in the middle of it. One couldn't walk over it. There was no street. One must make one's way over ruins where, only two minutes before, had been our city, the town that I have seen grow into a modern city since I was a boy.

"And all over were people, people one knew, whom one had danced with, dined with, played bridge with, reduced in a moment, to the uttermost depth of despair, standing, crying wildly, by the ruins, clawing at them, desperately, to reach others caught under the bricks; and already, here and there, the flames were leaping forth, coming closer and closer, while the poor wretches in the debris were yelling for help.

"A man called to me: 'Here, help me get my wife out.' She was caught by the waist. Her entire upper body was free, and she was staring at us and straining, slim, jeweled hands pressing frantically at the great beam that held her, unhurt but tightly pinned. Half of the beam was covered by bricks.

"We might as well have tried to lift a house. We tugged away, helplessly. We caught at men who rushed by, called to them to assist. One or two stopped, but most of them shook themselves free. I wanted to hit them. It seemed so damnably callous. And still, they

Gray Hair Conquered
By this Clean, Colorless Liquid

A Proved Substitute for the Lost Color

Results in a Week

"Is gray hair to become a thing of the past?"

This question has been asked ever since it was announced that a liquid known as Kolor-Bak had been discovered which, although colorless itself, quickly restores the original color to gray hair.

It seemed unbelievable at first, but the experience of people everywhere has proved that this remarkable preparation actually gives us the means to keep the hair from showing the dreaded sign of age.

How Long Will You Endure Grayness When You Can Banish It So Easily?

If you have been allowing gray hair to get the best of you, it's time to look about and see what Kolor-Bak has done for other people.

If you could talk to any of the thousands who have been through the experience of seeing their hair turn gray and who then have seen it return to its former shade by the use of Kolor-Bak, you, too, would take this easy way to get rid of your grayness.

Every scientist, every physician, knows that gray hair is hair that has ceased to receive its normal supply of coloring matter or pigment from certain tiny cells (called follicles or papillae) in the scalp, because these cells have become inactive from illness, shock of some kind, scalp disease, dandruff, infection, neglect of the hair, or lack of circulation, etc. But no matter what the cause of the grayness, it is simply amazing to see how it disappears when Kolor-Bak is used. It is a proved substitute for the natural pigmentation.

It doesn't make any difference what the former color was. Kolor-Bak will restore it. Several people whose hair was originally of different colors could use the same bottle of Kolor-Bak and each would get the former color return. No streaky or dyed look—the color is uniform throughout.

Relief for Dandruff, Itching Scalp, Falling Hair

Not only does Kolor-Bak restore the original color to the hair, it banishes dandruff and keeps the pores from being clogged with dirt and scale. Itching stops, and if the hair has been falling out the falling soon ceases. Kolor-Bak is not sticky, sticky or greasy. It is as easy to use as water.

also had wives, children, somewhere, in their homes on the bluff, and were obsessed by the anxiety to find them, to know. And I wanted to go home, too, but I couldn't leave that woman.

"And then the flames came and drove us back. I had to half strangle that poor devil to pull him away. The roar of the flames drowned her cries. So I rushed along."

Mr. Kinney and the Englishman resumed their journey. In the lower part of town the streets were filled with dead, but on the higher levels there were none to be seen, and few wounded.

East of Yokohama there had been crevices in the earth, but as the two men fared westward "the ground yawned in vast fissures, several feet wide, jumbling it so that it presented exactly the aspect of broken icefloes in a river, the confused surface of a lava flow. As darkness fell and we came away from the light of the vast bonfire made by Yokohama—there were but few fires in these villages—progress became difficult."

Also there were recurrent tremors, uneasy rumbling vibrations of the earth, that sharpened the hovering sense of impending danger.

Finally, in the blackness ahead, the pair saw the twinkling light of a paper lantern, dancing like a butterfly. They caught up with it, and a caravan of about a dozen Japanese plodding along behind the lantern's faint glimmer. The two foreigners asked if they might go with them and benefit from the light. Of course. And the natives insisted that they take the best place, immediately behind the lantern bearer.

At Ofuna the people said the shock had been terrible at Kamakura, only two miles away. The whole town had been smashed flat and then burned. So the anxious travelers could not stop for even a brief rest.

"As we came out of the long tunnel through which one enters hill-guarded Kamakura, we saw a few detached houses—flat; beyond them a wide area of flame, licking the ground far and wide. Most of the town had been consumed and the fire was now only playing over the embers. * * *

"Beyond the light of the flames I stumbled into the blackness of the cryptomeria avenue leading to the beach. The great straight trees had been flung about like straws. Some of them blocked the road, and I must climb over them, feeling my way through tangled limbs.

"At the river the bridge had collapsed entirely. I made my way to the mouth, to ford it, but there was almost no water. The entire beach and the sea floor had been raised about six feet by the quake, and where there had been only a narrow beach strip lay now a wide, wet expanse of sand.

"A fragment of moon had risen. I could see, dimly, the tower of our house looming up erect. Thank God! But as I went forward, I saw that the 10-foot-high sea wall had disappeared, the stones lying scattered wide over the sand. Half of the front garden had slid with it. Part of the two-story section of the house stood, leaning, the collapse of one wall leaving the rooms exposed, but the long one-story section was down, a chaos of tiles and splinters, prone, so that one might without effort have walked completely over it.

"I ran to the back where my boy had occupied a room in a wing, half-Japanese construction. It stood, but had been wrenched over. I climbed in through the window. The bed was covered with plaster, but there was no one there.

"From the servants' compound I heard the clap of sticks and the drone of monotonous voices. The servants' quarters were intact, and the cook was conducting a Buddhist service before a tiny household shrine, the rest of the servants squatting about him.

"'Thank God! It's good to see danna-san. Young danna-san is all right.'

"Yes, he had had a narrow escape, but he was safe, and the neighbors, wealthy Japanese, had taken him to a villa they owned on the hill. The danna-san from Shanghai was dead, but the rest were safe. They were sleeping there. He waved his hand toward the dark shrubbery of the garden. Like almost all others in the quake zone, they preferred safety in the open to the precarious shelter of such rooms as remained."

With much amusement the cook described the escape of Conroy, one of the mess. "Conroy-san" had been taking a bath and he dived, quite naked, into the shrubbery, without even touching the window frame.

"I went back to my boy's room, shook the ceiling off the bed and tried to sleep, but the constantly recurring tremors made me jump to the window every half-hour or so. In the morning the Shrimp appeared and told me of the death of the 'Shanghai danna-san.' He was a Dane, Juel Madsen, formerly a war correspondent and later drawing for the Graphic and making a collection of water-color sketches through the Far East. * * *

"He and the Shrimp had been reading on the veranda, facing the sea, when the shock came and brought the house down over them. A great beam struck them down, and above them fell a thick layer of tiles and splintered wood.

"Madsen had evidently been struck on the spine. 'Can you get out, Shrimp?' he inquired. A moment later he groaned: 'Why could I not have been killed outright?' A few minutes after that, he died.

"The Shrimp was struggling to extricate himself when the tidal wave, which swept the coast from Kamakura to Aatami, rushed up, flooded the garden, tore down the sea wall, advancing to within a few feet of the ruins. 'I thought sure I was a goner,' related the Shrimp, 'when I saw the water come on, and I couldn't move.' He got out about 15 minutes later."

During the next few days the foreigners at Kamakura were busy salvaging food and clothing. With some of the neighbors they organized a camp. The Japanese were kind and the servants invaluable. Indeed, Mr. Kinney pays high tribute to the faithfulness of Japanese servants generally throughout the disaster.

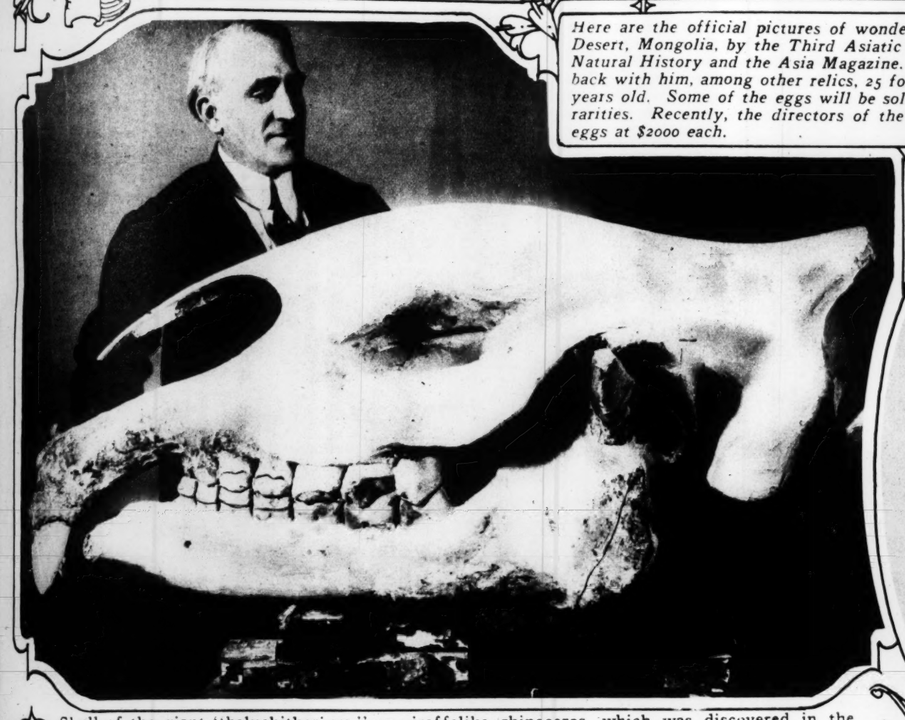
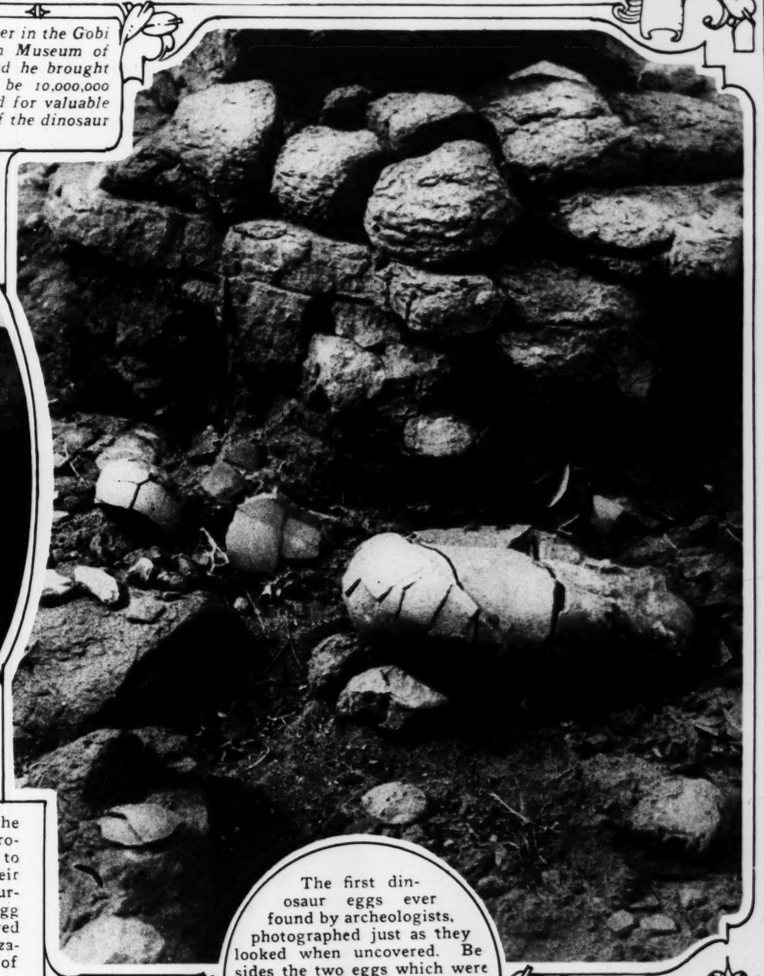
RELICS OF LIFE WHICH EXISTED 10,000,000 YEARS AGO

Here are the official pictures of wonderful archeological discoveries made last summer in the Gobi Desert, Mongolia, by the Third Asiatic Expedition sent to China by the American Museum of Natural History and the Asia Magazine. The leader was Roy Chapman Andrews and he brought back with him, among other relics, 25 fossilized eggs of the dinosaur, estimated to be 10,000,000 years old. Some of the eggs will be sold to other museums, others will be exchanged for valuable rarities. Recently, the directors of the American Museum fixed the tentative price of the dinosaur eggs at $2000 each.



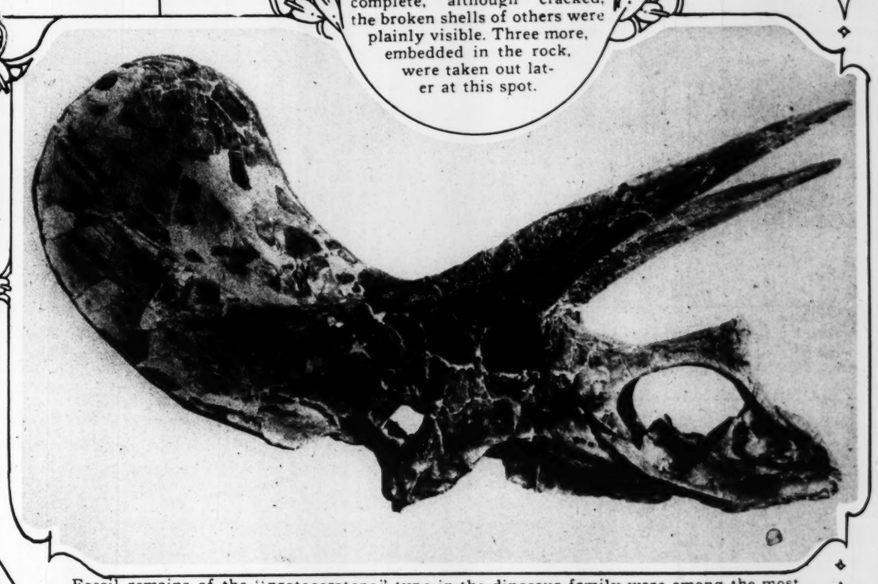
Skull of the giant "baluchitherium," or giraffelike rhinoceros, which was discovered in the Gobi. With plaster of paris to fill in the gaps, it has been restored by Otto Falkenback of the Museum, who appears in the picture. Although much the largest skull of a land mammal ever found, the animal's head was small as compared with its entire skeleton.

Andrews examining two of the dinosaur eggs with a microscope. They are from seven to eight inches long, and their shells have the "pebbly" surface of an ordinary chicken egg of today. All were preserved through the ages by fossilization. Some contain skeletons of embryo dinosaurs.



The first dinosaur eggs ever found by archeologists, photographed just as they looked when uncovered. Besides the two eggs which were complete, although cracked, the broken shells of others were plainly visible. Three more, embedded in the rock, were taken out later at this spot.

With small picks, chisels, whiskbrooms and brushes, these men are laying bare the complete skeleton of a "baluchitherium," which lived 3,000,000 years ago and was perhaps an ancestor of the rhinoceros family. Here part of the backbone, ribs and leg bones are exposed.



Fossil remains of the "protoceratops" type in the dinosaur family were among the most important scientific discoveries of the expedition. The evolution of the dinosaurs is plainly seen in this skull of the "triceratops," which followed the "protoceratops." Note the defensive armor and the three horns (one broken off near the base).

The largest skeleton found by the expedition was that of a sauropod, a suborder of the dinosaurs. This animal, when alive, would have measured nearly 80 feet in length. The picture shows "Montana" Johnson, an expert fossil hunter with the expedition, carefully uncovering the sauropod's remains.

FACTS ABO

THE building is a 15-story modern structure at Eleventh and Locust streets in the downtown St. Louis business district. It was designed by the T. P. Barnett Co., architects, the prevailing style being Italian Gothic. Four of the 15 floors are now in use. It is expected that the club quarters will be in full operation in May.

Interior design and decoration will be in the Italian style of the Thirteenth and Fourteenth centuries. This style is especially adapted to a men's club, as it is bold and rugged in character. Rough beamed ceilings give a highly decorative effect to the interior. In the main rooms, such as the auditorium, lounge and dining room, the ceilings will be decorated in mural paintings following Fourteenth Century designs found in the Castle of Pandeno.

The main dining room on the top floor is to be done in Italian Gothic with ceiling beams of antique chestnut. Balconies for al fresco dining project from the main dining room and from these points beautiful vistas of St. Louis may be obtained.

A notable feature of the club is the auditorium, seating 1000 persons. The City Club has attained more than local fame for the excellence of its programs, usually addresses by distinguished visitors to the city.

Heretofore the restricted space of the old club quarters precluded accommodations for resident members. In the new building there will be 186 bedrooms, many of which have private bath and showers in connection. There will be a number of banquet and private dining rooms for the use of members and affiliated organizations. There will be a club barber shop, a billiard room and a room devoted to other games such as chess and checkers.

A novel feature will be a dressing room where members may change from business to evening dress for banquets and other functions. In the basement will be an electric grill where the club members may dine, with the privilege of selecting their own chops and steaks from a glass refrigerator.

Women's quarters with reception and rest rooms have also been

Women's quarters with reception and rest rooms have also been provided for in the plans.

The materials employed on the exterior of the building are tapestry brick and pink granite. The ground floor, devoted to stores, has an exterior finish of Missouri red granite. The entire second floor is to be rented for offices and various civic organizations will have quarters on the third floor.

The old quarters of the City Club, in the Board of Education Building, Ninth and Locust streets were closed Dec. 24 and the new quarters, two blocks west were formally opened Jan. 2. The intervening time was devoted to moving.

The City Club was formed to be primarily a luncheon club for busy professional and business men. It started with a few hundred members and now has more than 3000. About 10,000 meals are served each month in the club dining room, exclusive of banquets. An average of 400 meals are served each noon and the banquet attendance runs from 700 to 1600 a month. Regular meals are served at noon only, six days a week.

"Speaker days" have always been a distinguishing feature at the City Club. Few prominent visitors get into or out of St. Louis without being asked to make a luncheon address at the club. This feature has made the club popular with members and has helped to spread its fame far beyond the confines of St. Louis, for many notable addresses made there have been of national, and even international interest.

The new building marks the realization of a great ideal by the club. Beginning with only $15,000 and a membership of 1170, the club has financed the $2,000,000 structure and almost tripled its membership.

While ground for the building was broken in February, 1923, actual work was not begun until April because of delays in the purchase of part of the site. The building was erected within the estimated cost, despite advancing costs of material and labor.

The dining room will be the show place of the club. It will be the largest dining room in the city, a beautiful L-shaped apartment 110 feet long on the Locust street side and 105 feet long on the Eleventh street side. The width one way is 48 feet and the other 35 feet. It will have seating facilities for 900 diners. The roof has been constructed so as to permit its use as a roof garden, or for playing handball, squash or tennis.

What Charm Excels Pearly Teeth?

Combat that dingy film

What adds so much to charm and beauty as pearly teeth?

You see them everywhere today. A new way of teeth cleaning has come. Millions now employ it. This offers a ten-day test, to show you.

Film holds food substances which ferment and form acid. The acid causes decay. Germs breed by millions in it. With tartar, they are the chief cause of pyorrhea.

After long research, dental science discovered two ways to fight that film. One disintegrates the film at all stages of formation. One removes it without harmful scouring.

These methods have proved effective. A new-type tooth paste applies these methods daily. The name is Pepsodent.

It brings a new dental era to the homes of some 50 nations.

They now fight film

Teeth are clouded by that viscous film you feel. It clings and stays. Soon it forms a dingy coat. Then teeth lose their luster and beauty.

Protect the Enamel
Pepsodent disintegrates the film, then removes it with an agent far softer than enamel. Never use a film combatant which contains harsh grit.

Delightful secrets

Pepsodent brings other essential effects. It multiplies alkalinity of the saliva, which is there to neutralize mouth acids. It multiplies the digestant for starch deposits.

Its use multiplies the power of these natural protecting agents.

Send the coupon for a 10-day tube. Note how clean the teeth feel after using. See teeth become whiter as film disappears.

The Scientist Speaks:

Beauty is only skin deep—but the skin is deeper than we commonly suppose. To avoid complexion blemishes, we must preserve the health beneath the surface, in the true skin, where most skin troubles really develop.

Science has now made it possible for you to have a flawless skin

A treatment has been discovered which goes to the root of skin disorders—the true skin beneath the surface.

YOUR skin is composed of two layers, the outer skin, or surface which you see, and the complicated true skin beneath the surface, where nearly all skin troubles develop.

Blood-vessels and nerves end in the true skin. You can scratch the outer skin without its bleeding, or feeling any hurt. There are millions of tiny glands in the true skin, which eliminate a large proportion of the waste material from the body.

Pimples, blackheads, eczema and other skin disorders are merely surface indications of distress in the true skin, beneath the surface. The only way to remedy these unsightly surface indications is to remove the poisons, germs and infections which have centered in the true skin, causing surface defects.

The L. D. Caulk Company, one of the oldest scientific institutions in the country, maintains research laboratories which made an exhaustive study of skin and scalp diseases. This study led to the discovery of a treatment which penetrates to the true skin, and there acts promptly and positively on the deep centers of skin disorders.

The Mercirex Treatment

This treatment consists of Mercirex Medicated Soap and Mercirex Medicated Skin Cream, which, used in conjunction, will positively rid the skin of pimples, blackheads, and more serious disorders. The Mercirex treatment is now offered to the public for the first time. It consists of two steps:

1—Cleanse the affected area with Mercirex Medicated Soap, the most efficacious germicidal soap developed for disinfecting the skin. It not only cleanses and disinfects the outer skin in a remarkable way, but stimulates the glands, preparing for the penetration of Mercirex Cream.

2—Apply Mercirex Cream thinly. Massage gently but thoroughly until the Cream penetrates, leaving no trace. It goes quickly to the true skin, killing germ life and neutralizing poisons, thus enabling the true skin to function normally. No other agency promptly eliminates the nucleus of skin disorders and rebuilds damaged tissues in this way.

Skin Blemishes Disappear!

The effects of this treatment are most extraordinary. With the true skin restored to health, surface defects, whether trivial or serious, disappear, leaving the complexion clear and the skin beautifully smooth.

Mercirex Soap is pleasantly perfumed, refreshing—soap you will be glad to use regularly to guard your skin's health. Mercirex Cream is fragrant and flesh-tinted—leaves no trace to betray its use.

Your druggist is offering you a full-size Mercirex treatment, consisting of two cakes of soap and a jar of cream—regular $1.55 value—at the introductory price of $1.25. If he cannot supply you, mail the coupon with $1.25 and we will send you the introductory package, together with a booklet on the care of the skin and scalp.

Begin using Mercirex to-day—and learn how attractive you really can be!

The outer skin—which Mercirex Soap cleanses, disinfects, and stimulates.

The complicated true skin, where most skin troubles develop. Mercirex Cream penetrates here, eliminating the nucleus of pimples, blackheads and eczema. It is also effective against most other ailments of the skin and scalp—such as boils, ringworm, sores, wounds, insect bites, plant poison and dandruff.

NEW YORK AND CHICAGO UNITE TO WIN CONVENTION

Committeeman Norman Mack Expected to Aid Latter City, but Says Former Wants Democratic Meeting.

ST. LOUISANS AFTER SECOND CHOICE VOTES

Offers of Other Cities May Exceed $100,000; McAdoo Men's Attitude Disappoints St. Louisans.

By CURTIS A. BETTS,
Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 14.—Becoming convinced that New York and Chicago have joined forces to obtain the Democratic National Convention, members of the St. Louis Convention Committee today began concentrating efforts to obtain votes for St. Louis as second choice when the committee meets tomorrow to pick the convention city.

Committeeman Norman Mack of New York and George E. Brennan of Chicago insist each wants the convention, but Mack and Brennan are working together and the best guess is that Mack's influence will be thrown to Chicago, and that he will endeavor to control votes of committeemen from Eastern States for Chicago. Mack, however, told Mayor Kiel and Thomas H. Lovelace that New York had not quit in its fight for the meeting.

"We have been voting for Chicago and St. Louis for about 40 years," the New York boss said, "and now we are out after it ourselves. We are after the convention and we are going to get it."

If New York Should Bid.

There is some talk that New York is prepared to bid $500,000 for the convention. If it should, there would be little doubt it would get it without serious contest. That is a lot of money and would go far toward the expenses of the campaign.

Chicago is said to be prepared to offer to pay the expenses of the convention, and possibly to offer a check for $125,000 with the understanding that any portion of it not used for convention expenses should be returned to the contributors.

Announcement was made today that San Francisco would present a cash offer of $200,000 plus free use of the civic auditorium, where the 1920 Democratic convention was held.

St. Louis has a straight-out offer of $100,000, with a few extras, such as free installation of the loud speaker equipment and a large saving in average railroad fares and hotel bills of the delegates.

Probably the most severe blow to the St. Louis hopes came last night when the report was circulated that the McAdoo supporters had no objection to Chicago. The belief that McAdoo would consider Illinois very unfriendly territory and would want to take the convention away from the anti-McAdoo influences there was considered a strong point in St. Louis' favor.

St. Louis Looks to Women.

Notwithstanding these untoward incidents, however, St. Louis is by no means out of the running. It has a few cards up its sleeve to be played when the committee meets. Boss politicians like Mack and Brennan seemingly have been giving very little attention to the votes of women on the committee, while St. Louis has been making a hard drive for the women's votes. They count just as much as the votes of the men.

While Mrs. Emily Newell Blair, vice chairman of the national committee and National Committeewoman from Missouri, is said to be in no position actively to participate in the contest, it is known that she has the proxies of a number of women members and it is the expectation that these will be voted for St. Louis.

The members of the St. Louis committee have apportioned the national committeemen among themselves and are interviewing the committeemen and women. The purpose is to get a promise to vote for St. Louis as first choice. Whenever they find a member pledged to either New York or Chicago they attempt to induce this member to make St. Louis second choice. This is with the idea that no city will win on the first ballot, and that the city which can get the larger number
